

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. WHEN the former volume of this work was published (in the year 1882), it was thought that the subject of chronograms was practically exhausted; continued research, however, has proved otherwise, by bringing to light much interesting material which was previously hidden, and even unknown to the modern bibliophile. It may now be said with confidence that the present volume and its predecessor form a collection in its way unique, but complete so far only as regards my own contribution to the indication of this by-path of literature, which remains open to others who may have time and inclination to pursue it. The experience of past research plainly teaches that more chronograms remain to be discovered. The way to many of them is indicated in the chapter on 'Books not accessible' in the later pages of this volume, while it is certain that careful observers who may wander among the libraries and buildings of Continental towns and rural districts, will be in the way of commencing a new collection, by securing many yet unpublished chronograms. My own experience, on but one occasion, is related for an example, in a chapter at page 37, infra.

The present volume is devoted principally to the literature of chronograms, and introduces the reader to many choice works not noticed by bibliographers; it shows generally that the art of composing chronograms attained its greatest development in the Flemish provinces and in the central part of Germany, extending also into Austria, Bohemia, and Hungary. As to other countries, Portugal is represented by one remarkable example, 'The Rosary,' and it may be assumed that this work is not a solitary production. France contributes comparatively few examples, and they apparently came through Flemish or Burgundian channels. Italy seems never to have produced or cultivated chronograms. England is imitative rather than original in following the art once so popular on the Continent. Of Spain, and other countries not specially mentioned, I have met with no chronogrammatic literature; that field is yet to be explored.

Investigation has led to no fresh knowledge on the antiquity of chronograms. In my former volume, at page 536, I give one in the Hebrew language of the year 1208, the earliest of any that I have yet encountered. There are questionable examples in Latin of the year 1210 (at page 571, infra) and of the year 1382 (at page 12 of Chronograms), but it is not until about the middle of the fifteenth century that we can feel safe in accepting any as genuine. Indeed, none can be taken as contemporaneous with the event, without some sort of evidence as to when they were first written or printed; a great many were composed long afterwards; for instance, there is a book mentioned at page 449 of my former volume, containing a series of chronogram dates, from the creation of the world down to 4028 of that era (all in Latin!), but made about A.D. 1594; others are specified at page 547, ibid.; one, for instance, of the dates 1004-1012 composed as late as 1612. A genuine manuscript, or an early printed book, is good evidence of its own antiquity, but it cannot determine that of any chronograms it may contain; all early ones are otherwise questionable.

Anagrams and acrostics are found to be intimately associated with chronograms, as may be seen in the chapters on the 'Angelic Salutation,' the AVE MARIA, and that remarkable Portuguese work, 'The Rosary,' already mentioned; the chapter on the application of chronogram numerals to the interpretation of the mystic number 666 brings together much curious illustrative matter; the chapter on Hebrew chronograms (at page 599, infra) presents a notable instance of the attempted use of the acrostic equally to support and contradict a particular interpretation. All these instances point to one result, namely, the insufficiency of the methods when used in controversy; at the same time they form a curious appendage to the study of chronogrammatic literature.

The extent to which the number 666 has been trifled with in chronogram may be seen also in the chapter devoted to a description of the works of that eccentric German writer Johannes Prætorius, commencing at page 465, infra.

A glance at the table of 'Contents' will afford some insight into the exceedingly varied application of chronograms.

It remains for me now to draw attention to the curious fact, that chronograms have been composed at great length by blind authors. This is evidenced by two instances mentioned in the present volume. Bishop Sporck, whose works are mentioned at page 427, infra, was blind for many of his latter years, during which he lived in retirement at Prague, where he died in January 1759; his chronograms are of the date 1754, and he is believed to have composed them as a pastime in the period of his blindness. The works of Joannes Bapt. Agnensis, described at pp. 483-495, were certainly so composed, for he laments his calamity of blindness in pathetic words, which must excite the sympathy of all who read them, at page 483, infra. He is there said to have composed his work through the power of memory alone; it certainly was a great achievement to master the composition of chronograms, anagrams, and acrostics, unaided by eyesight.

The expression of dates in a kind of doggerel Latin verse, which was in use during a long period concurrently with chronograms, is the subject of a chapter at the end of this volume.

I am much indebted to the Rev. Walter Begley for the loan of many a rare 'old book,' not otherwise accessible to me, from his library, as well as for information where others could be found, which have added greatly to the varied contents of this volume, and, as I hope, have increased its literary value. I am thankful also to Mr. Wilshere for the chronograms on my title-page and colophon, and for his other contributions, which the reader will find by consulting the index.

It is not possible to reproduce chronograms here in the varied and charming forms of the old type, as they appear in the original books. I have consequently printed them, as in the former volume, in type of uniform character. The illustrations consist of facsimile copies of engraved frontispieces, title-pages, portraits, and devices, belonging to 'old books,' selected to illustrate the special applications of chronograms. Some are exceedingly curious. The head and tail pieces throughout this volume are selected from old examples, many of them having been reproduced expressly for the occasion. The Roman numeral letters used in the composition of chronograms are only those which count up to 1000 (as in the margin); the characters for the higher numerals are not required for this purpose. The other old Latin alphabetical numerals, which are used in 'Cabala,' may be seen at page 289 (and at other pages by

V, U	=	5
X	=	10
L	=	50
C	=	100
D	=	500
M	=	1000

consulting index); they come from still older alphabets. The Greek numeral letters may be seen at page 321, and the Hebrew at page 594, all in this volume.

The number of separate books and tracts from which the contents of this volume are derived is about 240 ; and the chronograms now brought into notice by my two volumes may be thus summed up—

The former volume contains	5,147
And the further number referred to, but not transcribed from the books therein quoted,	5,614
The present volume contains	5,378
And the further number referred to in books herein quoted,	4,898
	21,037

The chapter on books not generally accessible affords some clue to many hundreds, while judicious imagination may estimate the possible existence of thousands that are in store, to reward the labour of future research.

ENGLAND.

AT the commencement of a book, it is held to be good policy to engage the reader's attention by an attractive sentence, in order to gain his favourable perusal of every page which is to follow, even though that sentence be a voluntary tribute from an independent writer. My previous work on 'Chronograms' published in 1882, was noticed in several reviews, and among them the following appeared in the quarterly periodical The Reliquary for October of that year:—

'We strongly recommend our readers to at once order this book and to write within it'—

THIS BOOKE OF CHRONOGRAMS.
VVITH SHARPEST LEARNING FRAVGHT,
THIS BVRIED YEAR OF ELLIOT STOCK
I BOVGHT. } = 1882

Another reviewer in Notes and Queries concluded his remarks at the date 24th February 1883 with these words—

FAREVVELL HILTON,
MAY YO V FLOVRISH EXCEEDINGLY. } = 1883

An appreciative reader having had a loan of the book, returned it to his friend with a note, of which this is an exact copy; the names are genuine—

THANK YO V MR. GOODEN
FOR THE LOAN
OF THIS REALLY CLEVER BOOK.
F. VV. PIXLEY.
1882. } = 1882

Here are three chronograms, and good ones, because they fulfil the leading condition in the composition of chronograms, that of counting every letter that can be used as a numeral, and because they express a meaning appropriate to the subject and agreeable to the author of the book.

And here I take the opportunity of informing all readers of this present volume, that it is needful, and unavoidably so, to make frequent reference to the previous work, when the subject under notice will derive elucidation from a comparison of the two works.

Very few chronograms are to be found in English churches; further research has brought into notice only the five which follow: the county of Devon has afforded the greatest number of examples.

In the church of Membury in Devonshire, there was a hatchment on which was depicted the arms, Argent a saltire engrailed between four roses gules leafed vert; and beneath it, 'In memoriam Dominæ Annæ uxoris Johannis Fry de Yearty Devoniensis armig: quæ unica fuit filia Roberti Naper de Puncknole Dorcestriensis armig: Obiit 25 die Martii, Anno Dom: 1683, ætat: 39.

Chron:

CÆLVM VXORI PLÆ DEVS PARAVIT. = 1683
 Hæc Annæ corpus dilectæ conditur Vmâ
 Quæ vivens læta prole beata fuit,
 Felices paucas naturâ ac nomine cernes,
 Anna fuit nomen, Gratia signet idem.'

The memorial is to Ann, the wife of John Fry, Esq. of Yearty. The chronogram and verses may be translated thus:—God hath prepared heaven for this pious wife. In this tomb is hidden the body of the beloved Anna, who, whilst living, was blessed with joyful offspring. You may discern but few things auspicious both by nature and name. Anna was the name, let Grace mark the same!

In the church of Faringdon in Devonshire, on a flat stone in the floor. (Observe the pun conveyed by the last word of the chronogram.) 'Here lye the bodies of William Bone, Gent: and Grace his wife deceased Oct: 6th 1658, Feb: 18th 1653.

A LABORE ET MALIS } = 1658
 DELIBERANTVR BONI.

The broken bones that here lie scattered, shall Unite and grow more strong when God doth call.'

In Shillingford church, Devonshire, a gravestone is inscribed, 'Here lyeth the body of John Bowridge, sonne of Mr. Thomas Bowridge of this city (i.e. Exeter), marchant, whoe dyed y<sup>e</sup> 29th daye of June anno dm: 1648 ÆTATIS SUÆ.

IOHANNES BOVVREDGE MORTVVVS REVIXVRVS. = 1648
 FESTO DIVI PETRI, MDCXLVIII.'

i.e. Bowridge is dead, on the feast of St. Peter 1648, but to live again in Christ.

See Polwhele's History of Devon, p. 116: 'As there is no age mentioned, I conjecture that the three i's with the points over them point out the age, and that all this chronographic stuff is about a child iii years old.'

In Wolborough church, Devon, the monument of Sir Richard Reynel and Lady Lucy is described in Polwhele's History, iii. 488. The inscription is long, and contains some elaborate rhyming and acrostic verses, accompanied by this chronogram—

DAY. APL. 18. 1652. = 1652

The verses commence thus—

Friend you that read our Names that counsell take
W<sup>ch</sup> wee being dead our living Names doe speake.

Richard Lucie Reynell
Care lern live dye rich.

(This is intended for an anagram, but it is imperfect as to one letter in each line.)

At Hinton church, Gloucestershire, four of the bells are inscribed—

ME RENOVAVIT GV: CLARK IVSSVBVS } = 1695
DAVID WARRENĪ ET PRO VOTIS
i.e. William Clark made me at the commands and for the promise of David Warren.

The chronogram is faulty because one letter D is not counted. In 1693 David Warren was lord of the manor. Extracted from the Transactions of the Exeter Diocesan Architectural Society, vol. iv. series 2. Four similarly inscribed bells are said to be at Newbold Pavey, Warwickshire.

At Barrow Gurney church, Somersetshire. My friend, Mr. Thomas Kerslake of Bristol, sends this chronogram, which appeared, on good authority, in a local newspaper (The Bristol Times and Mirror, 5th August 1882). It is not in Collinson's topography of the county. An oval monumental tablet to one of the Gore family is inscribed—

i.e. A wise man gains by dying.

The tower of Stanford-le-Hope church, in Essex, was pulled down some years ago, and is now rebuilt; the Rev. Ernest Geldart of little Braxted rectory, near Witham, put together these quaint words to mark the date—

ECCE TVRRIS OLIM STRATA } = 1883
DEO RVRSVS EXORNATA
RESONANTI VOCE GRATA.
*i.e. Behold this tower aforetime laid low,
To God again is well set up,
With joyful tone resounding.*

In the parish church of Widdecombe-in-the-moor, Devonshire, there is a monument to the memory of Mary Elford, whose maiden name was Mary Gale. The rhyming inscription is of itself a good specimen of epitaph used in the seventeenth century, and is especially curious for containing an anagram on her name, and a chronogram of the date, which also gives her age, and mentions the cause of her death. I take it from a book, Things New and Old concerning the Parish of Widdecombe-in-the-moor, by Robert Dymond, F.S.A., 1876.

To the memorie of Mary the third wife of John Elford of Shipstor, Esq<sup>r</sup>., was heer interred Feb. y<sup>e</sup> 16, A<sup>o</sup> 1642, Having issue at a byrth Mary & Sarah.

At page 6 of Chronograms the authority of Notes and Queries (Series 5, vol. ix. p. 337) is quoted for what I have given there; but it is incorrect, my authority omits the word EX, leaving the resulting date as 1632. The translation is, In the 25th year of her age she lived and went above. Mary Gale the third wife to John Elford, alas, died from childbirth, 1642. [This monument] was erected in 1650.

The parish church at Welwyn, Hertfordshire; shortly after the completion of the aisle (as mentioned in my book Chronograms, page 8), Mr. C. W. Wilshere made a generous offer to restore the whole church, principally at his own expense. The rector and parishioners imprudently, as it was thought, declined the offer, to them it was non placet, and nothing more was done in the matter. About the same time Mr. Wilshere was building a cottage at the roadside boundary of the Frythe Park, and he placed over the doorway a stone tablet inscribed with the following chronogram to mark the date of that building by an allusion to the above-mentioned circumstance—

ANNO . QVO .
 ECCLESIAE . PAROCHIALIS .
 AMPLIFICATIO .
 RECTORI . ET POPULO .
 NON . PLACUIT .

} = 1873

i.e. (This cottage was built) in the year when the improvement of the parish church was displeasing to the rector and the people.

The vicar of a parish well known to me (in Bedfordshire) was, in the year 1883, appointed by the bishop to the office of rural dean. In order to perform some of the duties thus imposed on him, he arranged to hold meetings of the clergy three times a year at his own house, and to offer such hospitality as would support them on their journey back to their respective homes. The rural dean's son explained these laudable plans after a manner consistent with his own youthful proclivities, in these words—

THE RURAL DEAN IS A MAN OF GREAT SKILL.
 WE SHALL NOW HAVE A FEAST THRICE A YEAR.

} = 1883

The same youthful composer made this on the departure, in 1882, of the occupants of an old inconvenient house in the city of London, which was to be pulled down to allow of new ones to be built—

EA DOMVS ANGVSTA ET QVOQVE CASVRA
 NOS PLVS ABHINC NESCIET.

i.e. The house narrow and about to fall will from henceforth know us no more.

Cornelius Balbus was a citizen of great renown in ancient Rome ; he built a theatre there and many other structures to embellish the city ; he did indeed build many a wall. An English clergyman has the repute of following in some of the ways of Balbus by the erection of tasteful structures, one of which required a wall for its protection. His accomplished architect recorded the date by inscribing thereon these words—

J. E. VAVX
 ALTER ILLE BALBVS
 MVRI A SOLO CONDITOR.

} = 1884

i.e. James Edward Vaux, that second Balbus, is the builder of the wall from the foundation (or ground).

A broadsheet (British Museum, press-mark 669. f. 17) contains a well-executed engraving of a celebrated ancient hollow elm-tree existing at Hampstead in Middlesex in 1653, the year when the sheet was printed. The engraving is surrounded by sets of verses accompanied by chronograms, written by various contributors, both in English and Latin, descriptive and commemorative of the tree. It is curious that chronograms should be found in a place so unlikely as a volume of about ninety separate sheets, chiefly political and legislative, from the year 1651 to 1654; a mere chance brought this particular one, No. 17, to my notice. The title and some extracts are as follows—

THE DIMENSION OF THE HOLLOW TREE OF HAMPSTED. (Sic.)

ALTO DEO, HOSPITI ET AMICO. = 1653
FOR THE LORD AND CHRISTIAN FRIENDS. = 1653
ALTO DOMINO AC HOSPITI. = 1653
DEO TER OPTIMO AC HOSPITI LETO. = 1653

Then follows the representation of the tree in full vigour of growth and foliage, with a kind of 'belvidere' on the summit and several persons in it. The dimensions are thus given:—'The bottom above ground in compass is 28 foote. The breadth of the doore is 2 foote. The compass of the turret on the top is 34 foote. The doore in height to goe in is 6 foot 2 inches. The height to the turret is 33 foote. The lights into the tree is 16. The steps to goe up is 40. The seat above the stepps, six may sit on, and round about roome for fourteene more. All the way you goe up within the hollow tree.' The verses which immediately follow, 'Upon the Hampsted Elme,' are figurative and moral, with this concluding couplet—

O LORD! O CHRIST! KEEP ME IN THY RIGHT WAY! = 1653
TO DIE TO SIN, AND DWELL IN LIGHT FOR AYE! = 1653

Some Latin verses, the last of the series, conclude with this chronogram—

. . . ESTO SACRATA DEO MIRABILIS ARBOR! = 1653
Parvis arideto. Micans Scintilla fit Ignis.

The last line contains the name of the author of the verses, and of two other sets, which are respectively signed 'Scintilla.' and 'Sci . . . Mic . . .' A manuscript note indicates the name as 'Mic: Sparks.' The date 1653 occurs several times. The imprint is, 'London, printed by E. Cotes for M. S. at the Blue Bible in Green Arbour, and are to be given or sold on the Hollow Tree at Hampsted.'

It is mentioned in the Transactions quoted below, that in the library of the Deanery of Westminster is a contemporary portrait of Queen Elizabeth. At the right-hand corner is this inscription—

VIVAT VINCAT REGNET
ELIZABETHA
ANGLIÆ FRANCIÆ AC HIBERNIÆ
REGINA
FIDEI DEFENSATRIX,
HENRICI 8<sup>VI</sup> REGIS F,
ANNO REGNI SVI XXXVII<sup>O</sup>. } = 1579

Nata vi. Eid. Sept. A<sup>o</sup>  $\frac{P}{X}$  1533 Grone. Init. Reg.

The word 'Grone' was probably intended for Greenwich, where the Queen was born.

This picture, dated the thirty-seventh year of the Queen's reign, professedly represented her when approaching the age of sixty, but the countenance is that of a person of less than half those years. It has been much repainted.

As to the chronogram, it makes 1579; that year is the twenty-first of the Queen's reign, showing something wrong in the inscription itself. The thirty-seventh year of her reign is 1595.

Through the kindness and with the personal help of the Dean of Westminster, I have inspected this picture. The inscription is in the left-hand upper corner (looking at the picture). It is correctly transcribed as above, except that the letter X in the fifth line has a mark over it thus  $\bar{X}$ , the meaning of which is not clear; if it doubles the numeral it does not rectify the date. The letter F in the next line stands for 'filia.' There is a strong doubt whether the picture is contemporary; it is even thought to be a copy not a hundred years old. Perhaps the painter was ignorant in the matter of chronograms, and did not observe the confusion of dates; or perhaps the inscription was added by the hand of another person likewise ignorant.

A copy of Morgan's Sphere of Gentry, folio 1661, belonging to Mr. Tucker, Somerset Herald, contains a plate of the Royal arms (of Charles II.), with this inscription at the foot—

CAROLO DEI GRATIA FIDEI DEFENSORI
ANNO RESTAVRATO. D.D.D.CLVIIIIL. = 1660

The following is from Notes and Queries for 30th December 1882, page 535:—

'Mr. Hilton's recent work on chronograms having excited some interest in this special branch of mental ingenuity, I would venture to point out that my own name, in Latin form, includes the date of my birth, thus—

GVILIELMVS FRANCISCVS PRIDEAVXIVS. = 1840

Such a coincidence as this must be sufficiently rare as to merit a corner in Notes and Queries.

Jaipur, Rajputana.

W. F. PRIDEAUX.'

The British Museum, 'Add: ms. 18044. f. 79,' contains this chronogram—

MIHI DEVS LVX ET SALVS. = 1627

The almanacs published by John Booker, during many years of the first half of the seventeenth century, commonly bear this title: 'Celestiall calculations, or an Ephemeris of the motions of the sun, moon, and planets for the year of man's redemption by Jesus Christ' [1658].— And on the last page, 'And till the next yeare farewell. Thine, J. B.' The title-page concludes occasionally with a chronogram motto of the year ; an examination of a series of about thirty years has disclosed the following :—

VIVO DEO SIT GLORIA, PAX IN TERRIS, ET
 HOMINIBVS BENEVOLENTIA. AMEN. = 1638
 VIRTVS DVM PATITVR, VINCIT, PAX POSTEA REGNET. = 1639
 AMBVLENT ANGLI DILIGENTER. = 1658

There is a large collection of almanacs by Booker and others in the Lambeth Palace Library, bound up into annual volumes, and so issued by the Company of Stationers.

A Puritanical tract, 'Zion's joy on her king coming to his glory.' By Finiens Canus Vove. Published at the time when some people believed that the end of the world was at hand. This hexameter chronogram is on the title-page—

MVND0 IN REX CHR1STVS REGNABIT VERVS ET VNVS. = 1643
i.e. Christ will reign in the world, real and alone.

A broadsheet in the library of the Society of Antiquaries, London, date 1645, No. 419, commences thus—

Papa Perstrictus. Echo—Ictus.
 . . . Inutilis olim. . . . Ridentem reddere.
 Ne videar vixisse. . . . Vocem aggredior.

TV CHR1STE, TV SIS SVPREMVS. DVX IN VIIIS. = 1645

A poem in Latin verse follows, printed in black and red, showing a clever play upon the termination of the Latin words by way of Echo, the echo being printed in red ; signed at the end, Tuissimus Alexander Ross.

The whole is aimed against the Pope and his arrogance.

About the middle of the seventeenth century a belief prevailed that some catastrophe would happen, such as the end of the world, the fall of monarchies, the manifestation of the mystic number 666. The reader is referred to Chronograms, pp. 221, 222, and to the works of Johannes Prætorius at a later page in this volume, and other places further on. The following is from the 'Diaries and Letters of Philip Henry, M.A., 1631-1696.' Edited by M. H. Lee. London, 1882. 8° :—

At page 193, TOTVS MVNDVS CONFLAGRABIT. = 1666
i.e. The whole world will burn. The chronogram is in his diary for 8th September 1666, and therefore quite contemporary.

The following is at the foot of the title-page of 'Miscellanea Marescalliana, being genealogical notes of the surname of Marshall, collected by George William Marshall, LL.D.'

TO ALL MARSHALLS ALL OVER THE VVORLDE } = 1883
 I BEQVEATH THIS VVORK GRATIS.

I am glad that the accomplished genealogist has thus dated one of his recent literary productions. There is no other date on the title-page.

A little book setting forth the praises of a young lady in 1661 (British Museum, press-mark 1418. i. 32), bears the following title:— 'The virgin's pattern: in the Exemplary life, and lamented death of Mrs. Susanna Perwich, daughter of Robert Perwich, who departed this life, every way a rarely accomplished virgin, in the flower of her age, at her father's house in Hackney, near London, in the county of Middlesex, July 3, 1661. Published at the earnest request of divers that knew her well, and for the use and benefit of others,' etc., 1661. The epistle dedicatory is signed by the author, John Batchiler. She is described as being exceedingly accomplished at an early age, very pious, and good. She died at the age of 25 years.

At page 107 there are some acrostics on her name, and at page 109 some verses, with indifferent anagrams on her name for their subject.

And at page 123 there is this very good example of an English chronogram—

A chronogram occurs on page 209 of an 8° volume bearing this title, 'Ἡθουχία χριστιανου'; a Christian's acquiescence in all the products of Divine providence.' A sermon at the funeral, in 1674, of Lady Elizabeth Langham, wife to Sir James Langham, knt. By Simon Ford, D.D. Printed at London, 1665. At the latter part of the book there are several sets of verses, epitaph, etc., by various writers. At the head of an epigram of sixteen lines is this 'Chronogramma'—

ELISABETHA LANGHAM NOBIS ABLATA DEO VIVIT.
i.e. Elizabeth Langham, taken from us, lives with God.

= 1664

There is a copy of the work in the Bodleian and British Museum Libraries.

The following has been sent to me by Mr. G. Parker of the Bodleian Library. The lines are a curious mixture of chronogram and enigma. The chronogram, however, is bad, because four of the letters being numerals are not counted, a fault not unfrequent in English examples. The extract, as follows, is from 'MS. Rawl. Letters, 1. fol. 104.' 'From a letter of John Anstis to Thomas Hearne, dated Putney, 7 January 172<sup>6</sup>.' 'If I am not mistaken, the Harley Library ascribes a book in prose to Elmham, possibly a copy of what I sent you; but there is his History of Henry v. in the Cotton Library—Jul. E. 4—in verse, which you will find trouble to explain. I give you an instance upon the treason of the Duke of York, Henry Lord Scrope, and Thomas Greye, detected at Portsmouth—

(a) SCRVTVS CONSPIRAT RIMATVR OLFUCIA PLEBI

(b) RUMPE JUGO COR AIENS RES DABIT ULTRA SONUM,

(c) EJA RUIT GENS AVITA MALIS OPUS HOSTE TRIUMPHAT, ETC.

(a) The initial letters of the words in this verse make SCROP, and the numerals are CVVCMVLCL. 1415. M CCC LL VVV.

(b) The initial letters of the first words are Richard, and Zorc (for York frequently) by changing the letters in COR, and adding the Jugum, that is Z.<sup>1</sup>

(c) The great initial letters, and other great letters in this verse set together and read backwards make Thomas Graie.'

[Instead of adding to these explanations of the riddle, I append a passage from English history. Henry v., who began his reign in 1412, finding that the affairs of France were in great confusion, made exorbitant demands of concessions, and certain conditions were offered to him by France which he rejected. At the same time he was making preparations for war with that country, and assembled his forces at the seaside for embarkation. The history of the year 1415 then proceeds. 'But while Henry was meditating conquest upon his neighbours, he unexpectedly found himself in danger from a conspiracy at home, which was happily detected in its infancy. The Earl of Cambridge, second son of the late Duke of York, having espoused the sister of the Earl of Marche, had zealously embraced the interests of that family, and had held some conferences with Lord Scrope of Masham, and Sir Thomas Grey of Heton, about the means of recovering to that nobleman his right to the crown of England. The conspirators, as soon as detected, acknowledged their guilt to the king, and Henry proceeded without delay to their trial and condemnation. The utmost that could be expected of the best king in those ages was that he would so far observe the essentials of justice as not to make an innocent person a victim to his severity; but as to the formalities of the law, which are often as material as the essentials themselves, they were sacrificed without scruple to the least interest or convenience. A jury of commoners was summoned; the three conspirators were indicted before them; the Constable of Southampton Castle swore that they had separately confessed their guilt to him; without other evidence Sir Thomas Grey was condemned and executed; but as the Earl of Cambridge and Lord Scrope pleaded the privilege of their peerage, Henry thought proper to summon a court of eighteen barons, in which the Duke of Clarence presided. The evidence given before the jury was read to them. The prisoners, though one of them was a prince of the blood, were not examined nor produced in Court, nor heard in their own defence, but received sentence of death upon this proof, which was every way irregular and unsatisfactory, and the sentence was soon after executed. The Earl of Marche was accused of having given his approbation to the conspiracy, and received a general pardon from the king. He was probably either innocent of the crime imputed to him, or had made reparation by his early repentance and discovery.]

A Welsh Chronogram.

There are a great many editions in several languages of the 'Practice of Piety,' by Bishop Lewis Bayly. A copy in the British Museum, in the Welsh language (press-mark 875. c. 74), to which the date '1700?' is assigned, has this title, Yr Ymarfer o Dduioldeb yn cyfarwyddo dŷn i rodio fel y rhyngo ef Fodd Duw. The last few pages have been cropped by the binder, that one which would otherwise be numbered 343 has, among some verses, this Chronogramma.

ARFER DUWIO LDEB A LAFURIAIS I, YN OED IESU. = 1620
Neu 1620.

This is the only chronogram in the Welsh language that I have met with. (See Bibliographer for Dec. 1883, No. 25, vol. v. p. 6.)

A SMALL manuscript book in the British Museum (press-mark Ad. MSS. 15227.), labelled on the back 'Miscell: Poems xvii. Cent:' was probably the pocket companion of a wit of the period. It is written in a small, very neat, but occasionally very cramped hand, and the ink has become pale. It contains poetry, verses, epitaphs, epigrams, and jocose rhymes in English and Latin, with anagrams and some chronograms. In my book Chronograms, published in 1882, at page 17, there are some on the Kings of England; the same are written in the little book now being noticed, and these additional ones on leaf 38, in very faded ink.

The first set of the above chronograms relates to the Prince of Wales, who died at the early age of 19. The allusion of the second is obscure; it may relate to James I. The third tells us, I suppose, that the physician died on the 21st of May 1629. None of them deserve commendation, quite the contrary; but I desire to rescue all from oblivion by placing them here.

In the same little book I find the following on leaf 41. The chronogram is noticed in my book Chronograms, page 20. George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the intimate friend of King Charles I., was murdered at Portsmouth by Felton, 23d August 1628. I have never met with the verses in print.<sup>1</sup> The writing is scarcely legible in some places. The initial letters of the lines make the date 1628 in Roman numerals.

(Observe the play on the name Felton in the fourth and last lines.)

The death, by fever, of a most honest apothecary at Hadleigh, in Essex, Edward Gale, is thus recorded on leaf 63—

In obitum integerrimi Pharmacopolæ

 An elegy follows, in twenty-two hexameter and pentameter lines.

<sup>1</sup> Since writing this, the lines have been included in an exceedingly interesting and curious work, p. 182 of 'Humour, Wit, and Satire of the Seventeenth Century, collected and illustrated by John Ashton.' London, 1883. We differ slightly in deciphering some of the words.

A VOLUME of 'Poemata varia' of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge (British Museum, press-mark 1213. l. 9.) contains fifteen tracts, only two of which afford any chronograms. Tract 6, 'Bodleiomnema,' Oxford, 1613, contains poems to the memory of Thomas Bodley, the founder of the library, etc. The chronograms therein are to be seen in my book Chronograms, p. 33, extracted from a tract bearing a different title. One other tract, No. 7, with chronograms, is entitled 'Epithalamia, sive Lusus Palatini,' etc.—(on the marriage of Prince Frederic, Count Palatine, and Elizabeth, daughter of James I., King of England), Oxford, 1613—by members of the University of Oxford.

A tract of poems by members of Exeter College, Oxford (British Museum, press-mark 11,408. aaa.), on the death of Lord Petre of Writtle, in the county of Essex. He was the son of Sir William Petre, Knight, who filled many important offices in the reign of Henry VII., Edward VI., and Queen Mary, to whom he was principal Secretary of State. He obtained large grants of the dissolved monasteries, by which he accumulated a vast estate. His son, Sir John Petre, was created Lord Petre on 21st July 1603, and he is the subject of the poems 'In obitum illustrissimi viri D. Johannis Petrei Baronis de Writtle,' etc., Oxford, 1613, 4° pp. 48.

At p. 43 is this, the only chronogram—

i.e. Lord John, Baron Petre, died 1613.

THE Universities of Oxford and Cambridge showed their loyalty towards the House of Stuart by the publication of tracts and volumes, mostly in Latin, of poetical addresses and congratulations to King James the First and his successors, upon events in their career, marriages, the birth of children or lamentations on their death, their return from journeys to visit Scotland, and the like. These compositions were by members of the various colleges, and extended from mere couplets to two or three or more pages of print. There is an extensive collection of them in the library of the British Museum, as well as in the universities themselves, bound up indiscriminately in volumes or in single tracts, according to the tastes or opportunities of collectors, and although my references are to volumes in the British Museum, it is certain that copies of individual tracts are to be found elsewhere. The compositions are in many respects curious for features external to my subject, but what immediately concerns us now is the example they afford of the limited extent of chronogram-making in this country at the time when scholars on the Continent were much devoted to the art, and carried it to such a state of excellence as was never reached in the universities or elsewhere in England. Our scholars seem never to have developed the art further than is shown by these tracts, no efforts at chronogram extend beyond single lines or couplets; the volumes now under notice contain many hundreds of poems, with the names of the writers appended; the proportion of chronograms is but small, yet enough to show that they must have been pretty generally known and appreciated at our centres of learning.

These circumstances bring us to recognise a large amount of poetical industry, combined with a limited amount of chronogram-making; whether this was for lack of taste or want of time for the purpose, I cannot say, but such is the fact, the opposite of what is found in similar works of Continental scholars of the seventeenth or eighteenth centuries.

Verses on the death of Henry Frederick, Prince of Wales, son of King James I., who died on the 6th November 1612, at the age of eighteen or in his nineteenth year. A volume of tracts (British Museum, press-mark 1213. l. 13. 1-6). Tract 1, 'Epicidium Cantabrigiense in obitum immaturum semperque defendendum Henrici illustrissimi principis Walliæ.' Cambridge, 1612, 4°. pp. 112. At page 43 is the following chronogram—

NONVS INIT MENSIS: LVX SEXTA: TER IBAT ET ÆSTAS } = 1612

At page 52 there is a 'cento' composed from Virgil, concluding with 'Chronogramma in ann: Christ: quo mortuus est Pr: Henr:

Tract 4. 'Justa Oxoniensium, 2 Reg: 3. 38.<sup>2</sup> Num ignoratis quoniam princeps et Maximus cecidit hodie in Israel?—Londini, 1612.

<sup>2</sup> Or according to the English version, 2 Samuel iii. 38. This quotation (somewhat varied) is on the Lennox monument in Westminster Abbey, to mark the date. See Chronograms, p. 4.

These poems are designated 'Lachrymæ Oxonienses in tumulum . . . principis Henrici.' On sheet L (there is no pagination) is this anagram, and the verses containing two words printed as if for a chronogram, which I give below, to show how imperfectly the author or the printer has done his work, and in the hope that some one will set it right. The anagram on the name occurs frequently in continental examples of earlier date; it is probably an imitation here: the words are used in the verses which follow—

Fredericus—Ferri decus,

*Henricus Fredericus Stuuartus VVallia Princeps.
Per Anagrammatismum.*

Heu nunc surculus, salus patriæ, decus ferri periit.

sVRcULVs, heu PERIT magnâ de stirpe Jacobi,

Amorum ferrique decus, pacisque columna
Ecce quot hoc unum funera funus habet.

On sheet o there is a short poem of six lines, preceded by the name of the prince in Latin, containing nineteen letters. The first line tells us that the prince lived as many years as there are letters in the name. The chronogram gives the year of his death, after making four corrections of errors in the original print—

Heinricus Fredericus,
Tot vixit noster princeps clarissimus annos,
Quot numeres hoc in nomine litterulas.
Annus cui vitæ decimus nonus, Decus orbis
Heinricus nonus mense Novembris obit.

Prince Henry is dead, Charles has succeeded him, may God permit him to live in the place of his brother. That this may be is most happily, and continually the wish of Thomas Carey of Exeter College.*

Tract 5, entitled 'Eidyllia,' is in continuation of the same subject; the last page alone contains a chronogram, thus—

Finis. Anno
VIVAT DIVINISSIMVS BRITANNIÆ ET HIBERNIÆ REX VERÆ PIETATIS LVX REGIA } = 1612
Et ut longum vivat.

i.e. Long live the most divine King of Britain and Ireland, the royal light of true piety. And that he may live long.

Tract 6 is again in continuation of the same subject; the title is 'Luctus posthumus.' Oxford, 1612. At page 54 is 'Chronogramma in annum Christi quo obiit princeps 1612.'

FREDERICVS MORTE PERIT, AST HONOR SVPERSTAT. = 1612

i.e. Frederick is dead but honour survives.

Some verses follow, and the tract concludes at page 62, thus—

i.e. Magdalen (College), thou mournest to thyself.

This tract is noticed at page 18 of Chronograms.

A VOLUME (British Museum, press-mark 1070. l. 6. 1-7) contains another tract on the same subject as the foregoing, viz., verses on death of Prince Henry Frederick. It presents us with a greater (though not an important) development of chronogram composition than was reached by English writers. It is from the pen of a Dutch writer, Professor Baudius of the University of Leyden; and we here meet with the feature almost peculiar to Dutch and Flemish chronograms, the disuse of the letter D=500, as a numerical letter. The tract is No. 3 in the volume. It bears the title 'Monumentum consecratum honori et memoriæ serenissimi Britannorum principis Henrici Frederici. Authore Dominico Baudio I.C. Historiarum professore in Academia Leidensi.—Lugdunum Batavorum MDXII.' (1612.) 4°. There is no pagination; the only chronograms are on sheet ciii. The following is the introduction to them; and the quaint warning not to count the letters D is printed in the margin—

The sun rising on the sixth light (or day) of November has set, this light was a sad day in death to the world.

Alas! what a calamity in the green rising youth-time, the prince dies, no one was his equal or even like him.

Prince Henry, alas! is gone, scarcely will any succeeding age be able to bring us his equal, no, not even should the golden age return.

A VOLUME of tracts and congratulatory poems (British Museum, press-mark 837. k. 9.), 4°. A THIN 4° volume bound in crimson velvet (British Museum, press-mark 1070. m. 10.), contains 42 pages of votive poems addressed by the University of Oxford to King James I., on the arrival of his son Charles, Prince of Wales, in Spain, whither he went to woo the king's daughter, the Infanta, and whom he did not eventually marry.<sup>1</sup> It bears this title, 'Votiva, sive ad . . . Jacobum Magnæ Britannæ regem [on the arrival of Prince Charles in Spain] . . . Pia et humilis Oxoniensium gratulatio.' London, 1623. On the back of the title-page there is this

A NOTHER 4° volume, similar to the preceding one in size and binding (British Museum, press-mark 1070. m. 6), intituled 'Carolus Redux,' contains poems on the return of Prince Charles from Spain. There is no pagination. On sheet F is this

And this follows shortly afterwards on sheet F 3—

PRINCEPS HESPERIIS, TANDEM EST REGRESSVS AB ORIS, } = 1623
OPTATIS PATRIÆ TERRÆQVE POTITVR ARENIS.

And these enigmatical verses, with the chronogram, are in the same sheet—

Quum duo sint tantum? Dux erat ille comes.

ATRACT (British Museum, press-mark 1070. m. 7), 4°, no pagination, has this title, 'Oxoniensis Academiæ parentalia,' etc. (of James, King of Great Britain), Oxford, 1625. Contains verses on the subject of his death in 1625 by various members of the University. On sheet B 2 is a good anagram on his name, and verses combining the words of the same—

Anagram.

Iacobvs stevvartvs.

Ita cvrsv svo beatvs.

i.e. James Stewart.—Thus blessed in his course.

On sheet c 2 is this chronogram preceding some verses, which combine the words of the chronogram—

REX OBIIT PIVS ACADEMIÆ BENIGNVS.

i.e. The king, kind to the university, has died.

On sheet d is this chronogram of the year of his death, 1625, and the years of his reign in England, 22, making the total of 1647—

IACOBVS STEVARDVS REX PIVS IVSTISSIMVS OBIIT.

= 1647

i.e. James Stewart, a kind and most just king, has died.

On sheet d 2 is another good anagram—

Iacobus Stevvart obiit.

Ibo sicut beatus viator.

i.e. James Stewart has died.—I will go as a blessed traveller.

On sheet E 3 some verses on his death are preceded by this chronogram—

IACOBVS MAGNÆ BRITANNIÆ REX, FIDEI PROPVGNATOR. = 1625
i.e. James, king of Great Britain, defender of the faith.

On sheet G are some verses with this chronogram—

PATRONVS FIDEI MAGNVS IACOBVS OBIVIT. = 1625
i.e. James, a great protector of the faith, has died.

The preface contains some verses, preceded by this chronogram, taken from Virgil, Æn. vi. 341, giving the year of the king's death—

... QVIS TE, PALINVRE, DEORVM
ERIPVIT LONGÈ NOBIS? . . . } = 1625
i.e. What god, O Palinurus, snatched you from us?—Or, according to Dryden's translation—

‘What envious pow’r, O friend,
Brought your lov’d life to this disastrous end?’

The words of Virgil which here form the chronogram are applied to the event of the death of the king of England. The poet relates that Æneas, when he descended to the infernal regions, meets the shade of his old pilot Palinurus, who had fallen overboard and was drowned, and asks him (as above translated), ‘Quis te, Palinure deorum eripuit nobis?’ The word ‘longè’ is inserted in the chronogram because it contains the number 50 required to complete the date, but it does not interfere with the meaning of the sentence. This adaptation of Virgil’s words to a date in English history is remarkable.

ATRACT (British Museum, press-mark 837. h. 18) 4°, pp. 84. ‘Ducis Eboracensis Fasciæ a Musis Cantabrigiensibus raptim contextæ.’ Cambridge, 1633. Verses and poems by various members of the University on the birth of James, son of Charles I. of England, and Henrietta Maria his queen, on 14th October 1633. He was Duke of York, and came to the throne on 6th February 1685 as James II. On page 27 some verses, ‘Ad reginam,’ commence—

Euge puerperio ter fausta Maria beato;
(Hei mihi, quòd nequeo dicere, fausta quater!) etc.

The concluding lines are addressed to the Duke of York, and are followed by a poem on the planet Venus shining with great splendour just before the birth of the prince; which is alluded to in this chronogram, the fifth hexameter line of the poem—

ECCÈ MICAT NOVA LVX, AC SPES NOVA NASCITVR ANGLIS. = 1633
i.e. Lo! a new light shines, and a new hope is born to the English people.

At page 36, a poem, ‘De cometa, qui nasciturum principem nuperâ luce predixit,’ concludes with this chronogram—

SIC NOSTRO EXORITVR SYDVS IN ORBE NOVVM. = 1633
i.e. Concerning the comet which foretold by its recent light that a prince was to be born.—Thus is a new star arisen to us in the world.

At page 64, a poem, addressed to the infant Duke of York, concludes thus—

Ut tamen innumeras grates des, Carole; natos

INNVMEROS VXOR DET PRECOR VSQVE TIBI. = 1633

i.e. O Charles, I pray that thy wife may continually give thee countless children.

A VOLUME in the British Museum Library (press-mark 1070. m. 40), Poems on the Journey of Charles I. into Scotland in 1633. By various members of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Edinburgh. Comprised in five different tracts, affording but a few chronograms.

Tract I. 'Solis Britannia perigæum. Sive itinerantis Caroli auspici-cissima periodus.' Oxford, 1633.

Some verses by Th. Garland of Magdalen College have this title—

BRITANNIÆ REX REDVX,
TRIVMPHOS CANTATE. } = 1633

The next page of verses has this at the conclusion—

Chronogr: Anni MDCXXXIII.

IO! VIDISTI VT TIBI SERVIAT VLTIMA THVLE: = 1633

Quid dicam Fatis jam superesse tuis.

Hugo Barker. Art: Bac: Coll: Novi Socius.

Twelve verses by Thomas Clayton of Pembroke College are preceded by this chronogram—

OPTIMA SVNT, QVÆ TVTÒ IVCVNDÈ BREVI. = 1633

The next tract is 'ΕΙΣΟΔΙΑ Musarum Edinensium in Caroli regis, Musarum Tutanti, ingressu in Scotiam.' Edinburgh, 1633. No pagina-tion; but counting to page 16, these lines are a passage in the poem—

Quo patriam reheat supremi cura Tonantis,
Atque SALVS POPVLI REX, his mage gratus ocellis,
INTRAT EDINBVRGVM; si vera oracula vatum. } = 1633

THE following verses are very curious; they are from tract No. 4 in the last-mentioned volume, and are intitled 'Rex Redux, sive voti damnas De incolumitate et felici reditu regis Caroli post receptam Coronam, Comitiaque peracta in Scotia.' Cambridge, 1633. They are hexameter and pentameter couplets, that can be read forwards and backwards without otherwise altering the position of the words, the meaning one way being the opposite to that of the other—

A VOLUME (British Museum, press-mark 837. g. 27.) contains three tracts relating to the journeys of Charles I. to Scotland; and therein are only five chronograms. Tract 1 bears this title—

Musarum Oxoniensium

Pro

Rege suo

Soteria.

Anagramma.

Carolus Britonum Rex.

Tu rex librum coronas.

Symbola sunt Almæ Matris Liber atque Corona :

Jam verum est, Librum tu (rex invicte) coronas.

Oxonix, 1633.

There is no pagination ; the only chronogram is on sheet z, and it stands as the title of some verses addressed to Charles I.—

VIVIT REX NOBIS, ABSORPTA EST
MORS IN VICTORIÀ, DEO GRATIAS. } = 1632

In the original, the words 'Rege suo Soteria' are printed in gold letters, so likewise are the two anagram lines. The two hexameter lines which follow next contain words (printed in italics) from the anagram, and they are in direct allusion to the armorial device of the University of Oxford, which is printed in the centre of the title-page, viz., on a shield an open book between three crowns. The whole will bear this translation—

A congratulation of the Oxford Muses for the deliverance of their king.—Anagram, Charles, king of Britain. Thou, O king, crownest the book.—The book and the crown are the symbols of 'Alma Mater'; that now is true, thou, O unconquered king, dost crown the book.—(Chronogram), The king lives for us, death is swallowed up in victory, thanks be to God. (This sentiment is adapted from 1 Cor. xv. 55-57.)

Tract 2, in the same volume, consists of verses addressed to the king by members of the University of Cambridge, on his return from Scotland ; it bears this title—

'Irenodia Cantabrigiensis :
Ob paciferum serenissimi regis Caroli è Scotia reditum Mense Septembri 1641.
Et vocaberis instaurator rupturæ. Isa: 58. 12.
Posuit fines tuos pacem. Psalm 147. 14.

QVISQVIS SEPARAT.
VVHAT GOD HATH THVS KNIT TOGETHER CVRSED BE HE } = 1641
VVHO PVTs ASVNDER.'

At this date the troubles of this unfortunate king were coming thickly upon him ; his visit to Scotland failed to turn fortune again in his favour, and the aspirations of his Cambridge friends, as implied by this singular title-page, were grievously disappointed. There are no more chronograms.

Tract 3, in the same volume, is intituled, 'Eucharistica Oxoniensia.' (Congratulations from the University of Oxford on the return of Charles I. from Scotland.) At the fifth page there are some verses, preceded by this 'Chronogramma 1641'—

REX BONVS REDVX GLORIA SALVS REGNORVM. = 1641

And on sheet c 3, other verses are preceded by this—NOBILISSIMVS REX SALVVS REDIIIT EX SEPTENTRIONE. = 1641
i.e. The good king returned, the glory, the safety of the kingdoms. The most noble king has returned safely from the north country.

A VOLUME of miscellaneous tracts (British Museum, press-mark E. 62). Tract 14 relates to the return of the queen, Henrietta Maria, from Holland. 'Musarum Oxoniensium Επιβατηρια serenissimæ reginarum Mariæ ex Batavia feliciter reduci Publico voto D.D.D. Oxford, 1643.' On sheet A there are some verses addressed to the king and queen, preceded by this chronogram—

REX OPTIMVS, REGINA NOBILIS REGIA PROLES } = 1643
TVTI DIV VIVANT.

Further on there is this anagram about the queen, and verses which combine three of the words thereof. The anagram, however, is faulty; the first line contains two letters more than there are in the second, viz., H and r.

Henriette Marie Roine d'Angle-Terre.

Anagram.

A VOLUME of single printed sheets concerning Charles I., King of England, in the British Museum (press-mark 669. f. 14). No. 75 contains twelve rhyming lines, giving the names of the leading rebels in 1649; and a chronogram of that year, with a rhyming explanation that it is the date of the decollation of the king; the last couplet of which is a riddle on the name of Cromwell, pronounced like Crumbwell. It is as follows:—

Monarchia transformata in Respublicam (sic) deformatam :

OR

A Fury of twelve impossibilities.

1. Give General Tom a common-souldier's wit ;
2. Cure frantick Mildmay of his whimsey fit :
3. Quench Peter's tongue (which hel hath set on fire
4. Coole Nols ambitious thirst of soaring higher :
5. Make Bradshaw bashfull, and false Whitlock true ;
6. Un-atheist Lenthall, Corbet too un-jew.
7. Pride's Sword, exchange for Slings ; let Ockey haste
8. Back to his Yeast-tub. Hewson to his Last.

D

9. And Wild (with Law) Sweep treason from his bench
 10. Hedge Martin (all in common) with one wench.
 11. Pack a committee, without knaves. Let's see
 12. A Functo (not of Rebels) and then we
     For light in England's Chaos will yet hope :
     For Charls three Crowns, for Rebels, each a rope.

'Numerall letters are to be considered in these two following lines':—

CHARLES THE TRVE PICTVRE OF CHRIST CRVCIFIDE, GREAT BRITTANS VIRTVOVS KING NOVV GLORIFIDE. } = 1649
 These Numerall Letters, All together be Just sixteene hundred, forty, and thrice three.

These Letters (twenty-six) five Cees, two Dees,
 Two LLs, eight Vees, and Ies a treble trine,
 Make up the number, just as it agrees,
 One thousand and six hundred forty-nine.
 That yeare, the first months thirtieth day, a blow
 Laid Charles our King, and England's Honour low.
 But, He is high, grac'd with a glorious Crowne,
 And (by his Death) three Kingdomes are cast downe.
 The Loafe's inside, and Circle of a Spring,

Sep. 12. FINIS. 1649.

(Date added with ink in contemporaneous writing.)

In the same volume there is another sheet of verses relating to Charles I. (No. 24). The chronogram which precedes the verses has been used elsewhere. See my former volume on Chronograms, page 24. As this is possibly the earliest use of it, I repeat it here with the verses, which are a curious representation of the feeling of horror running through the country after this lamentable event, this murder of the king. All the words here printed in large italics, as well as the chronogram date letters, are printed red in the original, and so doubtless they were intended for the colour of the king's blood. A deep black border surrounds the whole print.

Chronostichon Decollationis Caroli Regis, etc., tricesimo die Januarii, secunda hora Pomeridiana, Anno Dom. MDCXLVIII.<sup>2</sup>
 TER DENO IANI LABENS REX SOLE CADENTE
 CAROLVS EXVTVS SOLIO SCEPTROQVE SECVRE. } = 1648

Charls!—ah forbear, forbear! lest mortals prize
His name too dearly; and Idolatrize.
His name! Our Losse! Thrice cursed and forlorne
Be that Black Night, which usher'd in this Morne!

Charls our Dread-Souveraigne—hold! lest Out-law'd Sense

With those Celestial Powers; and distrust
Heav'n can Beholde such Treason, and prove just.

Charls our Dread-Souveraign's murther'd! Tremble! and View what Convulsions Shoulder-shake this Land.
Court, Cittie, Countrie, nay three Kingdoms runne
To their last Stage, and Set with Him their sunne.<sup>1</sup>

Fell fiends! dire Hydra's of a stiff-neckt-State!
Strange Bodie-Politicke! whose Members spread,
And Monster-like, swell bigger then their Head.

Charls of Great Britaine! Hee who was the knowne
King of three Realms, lies murther'd in his Owne.
Hee! Hee! who liv'd, and Faith's Defender stood, Die'd here to re-Baptize it in His Blood.

No more, no more. Fame's Trumpe shall Eccho all
The rest in dreadful Thunder. Such a Fall
Great Christendome ne're Pattern'd; and 'twas strange
Earth's Center reel'd not at this dismal change.

The Blow struck Britaine blinde, each well-set Limbe
By Dislocation was lop'd off in Him.
Though Shee yet lives, Shee lives but to condole
Three Bleeding Bodies left without a Soule.

Religion puts on Black. Sad Loyaltie
Blushes and Mourns to see bright-Majestie
Butcher'd by such Assassinates; nay both 'Gainst God, 'gainst Law, Allegiance, and their Oath.

Farewell sad Isle! Farewell! Thy fatal Glory
Is Summ'd, Cast up, and Cancell'd in this Story.

THE next in order of date is a volume of tracts (British Museum, press-mark E. 740). One of them is devoted to the praises of Oliver Cromwell, by various members of the University of Oxford.

'Musarum Oxoniensium Ελαίφορία, sive ob fœdera, Auspicii serenissimi Oliveri Reipub: Ang: Scot: et Hiber: Domini Protectoris, inter Rempub: Britannicam et Ordines Fœderatos Belgii fœliciter stabilita, Gentis Togatæ ad vada Isidis celeusma metricum.' Oxoniæ, 1654. Pp. 104.

There are many poems in Latin and some in Greek, and only one chronogram, at p. 48.

A VOLUME of congratulation poems, by members of the University of Oxford, on the arrival in England of Catharine of Braganza, the intended wife of King Charles II., intitled, 'Domiduca Oxoniensis: sive Musæ Academicæ Gratulatio ob auspiciatissimum serenissimæ Principis Catharinæ Lusitanæ, Regi suo desponsatæ in Angliam appulsum.' Oxoniæ, 1662. No pagination. (British Museum, press-mark 1213. l. 38.)

On leaf 40, a set of acrostic verses on the name Catherina Steuart, concludes with this chronogram—

On leaf 53, a set of verses is preceded by this chronogram—

} = 1662

On leaf 54, a Latin poem of twelve lines, signed by Moses Pengry, A.B. & Coll: Æn. Nas., is preceded by these chronograms on the return of King Charles II. from exile, and on the arrival of the queen—

In reditum Regis.

ANGLIA PLAVDE, REDVX REX, SALVOS LVCE BRITANNOS } = 1660
 ANGLICVS ILLVSTRAT SOL ORIENTE SVOS.

In adventum reginæ.

APPVLIT HVC FELIX REGINA, EVGE! O, DEA SANE! } = 1662
 HOC RENOVATA TIBI, HAC LVX DVPLICATA FVIT.

Charles the Second and Catharine of Braganza were married at Portsmouth on 21st May 1662. She called herself Queen of Great Britain from the time of the signature of the marriage-contract at Lisbon.

The tract ends with leaf 68, and contains no more chronograms.

THE following relate to the victory gained by William III. in Ireland, and the defeat of the invasion led by James II. ; the passage of the river Boyne and the battle and the surrender of Limerick. (From Zedler's Univ. Lex. LVI. 1040)—

 SCOTIÆ HIBERNIÆ GALLIÆ REX. Anno ætatis suæ, XLI.

i.e. The river being passed over almost in one day, he overcame Ireland, the king (James II.) having fled. Long live William of Orange, the august conqueror, the king of England, Scotland, and Ireland. In the 41st year of his age.

The events here alluded to by the German writer are these: James II. of England finding himself nearly deserted by everybody in the government of the country, and having sent over the queen and the young prince to France, himself, in the night of the 12th December 1688, embarked with a single attendant in a boat at Whitehall Stairs, but was forced to land at Faversham, from whence he returned to London on the 16th December. His son-in-law, William, Prince of Orange, who had been invited by the heads of the parties in the state, landed in England with a force of 14,000 men on the 5th November 1688, and on the 17th of December he came to London. He desired James to leave the palace, who then proceeded to Rochester, and on 23d December embarked on board a frigate, and was conveyed to Ambleuse in Brittany; thence he repaired to St. Germain, where Louis XIV. gave him the chateau for his residence, and bestowed on him a small revenue. Meanwhile the English crown was settled upon the Prince and Princess of Orange, as King William III. and Queen Mary. In the beginning of March 1689 James sailed from Brest, landed at Kinsale, and immediately marched to Dublin with a small force supplied by the French king. A few weeks afterwards he laid siege to Londonderry, and was unsuccessful there. After various military operations, his cause was finally ruined by the defeat received from King William in person at the battle of the Boyne, fought on the 1st July 1690. William with his forces crossed the river Boyne, as mentioned in the chronogram, and James again took refuge in France, and died there in 1701. After further warfare, the terms of peace in Ireland were settled by treaty on the surrender of Limerick, on 3d of October 1691.

Among the numerous medals struck in commemoration of the events in the history of the period of William's reign, a few only bear chronogrammatic inscriptions. Some of them will be found at pp. 105, 106 of Chronograms, and some of those are repeated here for the sake of the improved version of the translation, together with two additional medals, taken from some early sheets of the British Museum Catalogue of the whole series, now in course of preparation by Dr. Herbert A. Grueber, who gives a careful description of every feature of the medals, while my notice is confined to a few special inscriptions only. This is inscribed on the edge of a coronation medal of William III.—

CAUSA DEI POPULIQUE SUI DEFENDITUR EX TE. = 1689
i.e. The cause of God and of his people is defended by thee.

The reverse of another coronation medal is inscribed—

GVILIELM . PRINCEPS . AVRACVS . ANGLIÆ . SCOTIÆ . } = 1689 FRANCIÆ ET HIBERNIÆ REX CORONATVR . d. 12 Apr.
i.e. William, Prince of Orange, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, is crowned 21st April 1689.

On the congress of the allies, held at the Hague, to arrange plans for resisting France, at which William presided. One medal has this hexameter inscription on the edge—

REX REGVM CONSVLTA DEVS FORTVNET VBIQVE. = 1691
i.e. May God, the King of kings, prosper everywhere their consultations.

Another congress medal, not hitherto published, is inscribed in the exergue—

ILLVSTRI SIINCRETISMO HAGÆ IN FEBRVARIO EX VOTO } = 1691
 POLI ET ORBIS FELICITER CONCLVSO.
i.e. Dedicated by the decree of the people and the world to the most illustrious alliance auspiciously concluded at the Hague in February 1691.

On the battle of the Hague; this hexameter and pentameter verse is on the edge of the medal—

CONCASTIGATVS GALLORVM FASTVS ET ASTVS } = 1692
 FLVCTIBVS ET PVGNA FRACTVS ATROCE FRAGOR.
i.e. The pride and cunning of the French on the seas chastised, and the crash effected by a severe contest.

A FOLIO volume in the British Museum (press-mark 885. m. 8. 1-20), is a collection of single printed sheets, and is labelled, 'Epitaphs, Elegies, etc.,' mostly relating to persons of celebrity in England. All are more or less curious, and I gather four chronograms. No. 8 in the collection is on the death, on 28th December 1694, of Queen Mary II. of England, wife of William III. 'Elegiacus Ultramarinæ Palladis Planctus in moestum et infandum obitum augustæ

[Then follow the verses, explained below.]

The above Latin title tells us that the queen lived as many years as there are verses, meaning the thirty-three verses which immediately follow, addressed 'Ad Parlamentum.' Her age was 33. The others are, eighteen verses 'Ad Populum,' and ten 'Epitaphium;' these numbers have no special significance, and the verses are not worth transcribing. The author describes himself as of Bar-le-Duc, and an interpreter of foreign languages, living not far from the Royal Exchange, in the street commonly called Lothbury, at the sign of the Falcon.

Sheet No. 17. Latin verses on the death of Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, followed by 'Epitaphium ejusdem,' in which the following bombastic verse occurs, the sublime and the purely local, a climax and an anticlimax; there is, however, no chronogram—

Mens superum, comitante Choro, pia scandit Olympum, Quod Mortale fuit, CLERKENWEL in æde quiescit.

i.e. His pious soul associating with the heavenly choir, climbs to Olympus; what of him was mortal rests in Clerkenwell church.

He died on 17th March 1715, aged 73.

Sheet No. 20 is 'Octostichon Eucharistichon' (verses congratulating King George I. on his arrival in England) 'ejusque nobile nomen acrostichide Rotundante multoties exhibens.' The acrostic consists of eight curious hexameter lines, of six words each, on the name GEORGIUS. Then follow two chronograms giving the year in which the king began to reign, and one intended to give his age at that period—

'Eteostichon An: Dom: 1714, quo R. G. regnare cœpit Literis numeralibus, denotans.'

This chronogram is wrong, it makes 58; George the First was born on 28th May 1660, he was consequently 54 years old in 1714.

JOHN PELL.

JOHN PELL preserved the chronograms which accompany these remarks. He was an English mathematician, who resided a few years at Zurich and Geneva as the agent of England appointed by the Protector Oliver Cromwell, to assist in various ways the Protestant Cantons of Switzerland. Five volumes of MSS. in the British Museum ('Lansdowne 751-755'), contain the 'Pell's Papers,' a great variety of letters and documents relating to the affairs of the Swiss Protestants, written in English, Latin, French, and Italian, wherein he is addressed officially as 'Joannes Pell . . . Angliæ . . . D. Protectoris ablegatus ad . . . proceres Cantonum Helvetiæ Evangelicorum . . . etc.'—also, 'Jean Pell, agent en Suisse . . . envers les Cantons evangeliques en Suisse.' Other papers are addressed to him as 'Agent to the Lord Protector at the Protestant Cantons.' A document entitled 'Instructions unto Mr. Pell' (reference-mark, 752, fol. 352), dated 20th July 1655, signed 'Oliver P.' Cromwell, instructs Pell about the assistance he is to render to the Cantons, and to engage the help of the Duke of Savoy in favour of his distressed and persecuted subjects. One paper (754, fol. 400), signed Oliver P. in a trembling hand, and dated 'Whitehall, May 6, 1658,' requires Pell 'to repaire homewards that we may receive from you the account of your whole negociation.' It is addressed 'To our trusty and well-beloved Mr. Pell, our resident with the Protestant Cantons of Switzerland.' Another paper (754. fol. 470) is a command or request to attend Cromwell's funeral on 23d November [1658], printed on a small slip of paper, with his name in writing—

'Pell, Esq<sup>r</sup>.

'You are desired to attend the Funeral of the most Serene and most renowned OLIVER, late Lord Protector, from Somerset-House, on Tuesday the 23th November instant, at Eight of the clock in the morning at the furthest, and to bring with you this Ticket; and that by Friday night next you send to the Herald's Office, near Pauls, the Names of your Servants that are to attend in Mourning, without which they are not to be admitted; and also to take notice that no coaches are to pass on that day in the streets between Somerset-House and Westminster.' (SEAL.)

No. 3.

Another paper (754. fol. 467), signed by Pell, concerns the cloth allowed to him for mourning—

'I doe hereby request, that the proportion of cloth allowed unto me by the Right Hon<sup>ble</sup> the Council as mourning for his late Highness the Lord Protector, may be delivered unto my Neighbour, Mr. Samuel Hartlib the younger.

'Written with mine owne hand September 25. 1658. Gardiner's Lane, neere Kings-Street. JOHN PELL.'

Among the correspondents of Pell was one John Rudolph Stuki, a man of some note in Switzerland; his letters are in Latin and written in a bold hand, and he was the means of preserving the chronograms now among Pell's papers, for they are undoubtedly in his handwriting. A letter written at Zurich by him to Pell (751. fol. 334), is thus dated—Dab: Tiguri 10 Jan. '656. PACE DEI LÆTAMVR. (= 1656.) Another in the same volume (fol. 344), written by him to Pell at Geneva, concludes, 'Vale Illustriss: D. et patriæ meæ laboranti favete perge—Dab: 12 Jan. '656, ELECTOS MI DEVS PROTEGE. (= 1656.) In the volume (756. fol. 480), there is a paper, partly illegible through water damage along the right margin, written by Stuki to Pell, commencing, 'Illustrissime D. Residens,' and concluding, 'Obitu Condæi His . . . | . . . | bus multum sine dubio decedit: | Cardinali quoque hic annus videtur fuisse | fatalis | CARDINALIS MAZARINVS.

MDCLVIII.

There is no other allusion to Cardinal Mazarin, and if this was intended to be prophetic, or to express a secret wish, the fact that the Cardinal did not die until 1661 shows how small was the influence of either.

Two of the papers written by Stuki and preserved by Pell contain thirty-seven chronograms. I give an entire transcript of these papers; they do not contain a single word of comment as to the precise purpose the chronograms were to serve, or who composed them; two of them are introduced into the above quoted letters, but they do not stand in the place of dates, because the actual dates are likewise given in figures. They all seem to be expressions of fraternity with England and enmity towards the Pope, mixed with pious ejaculations in accordance with the sentiments of the persons concerned with the subject of the 'Pell's Papers.'

The first set of chronograms is in '751. fol. 301.'

Very little is known of the history of the events connected with Pell's residence in Switzerland; when these papers come to be sufficiently examined, many facts new to history will be brought to light, and many interesting details will be found to increase the small store of printed information which at present is accessible concerning him; the following are almost the only works which bear upon the subject—
'Abrege de l'histoire de la Suisse; Traduit de l'Allemand, par J. Gaudin. Zurich, 1817.' (British Museum, press-mark 1054. b. 23. Catalogued under 'Switzerland.') Page 127 alludes to the troubles endured by the Reformers, the persecutions of the Vaudois in 1665, and a war then existing between the Protestant and the Roman Catholic Cantons.

'Histoire ancienne et moderne de la Republique de Geneve,—from the year of the world 2833 before Christ, to the year A.D. 1779. Geneva M. DCC. LXXI X.' (British Museum, press-mark 157. B. 21.) Page 139, under the date 1655, mentions the war between the Cantons, the siege of Rapperswille, etc., and peace subsequently made.

'Relation veritable de se qui s'est passé dans les persecutions et massacres faits cette année, aux eglises reformées de Piemont, etc.—1655.'

The following particulars concerning John Pell are extracted from the General Biographical Dictionary, by A. Chalmers, xxiv. 264. John Pell, an eminent English mathematician, descended from an ancient family in Lincolnshire, born 1st March 1610. At the age of thirteen he went to Trinity College, Cambridge, and took his degree of B.A. in 1628,—the author of many works. He was so eminent in mathematics that he became Professor at Amsterdam in 1643. He afterwards removed to Breda, and returned to England in 1652. In 1654 he was sent by Oliver Cromwell as his agent to the Protestant Cantons in Switzerland. His first speech in Latin to the deputies at Zurich was on the 13th of June; he continued in that city during most of his employment in Switzerland, in which he had afterwards the title of Resident. Being recalled by Cromwell, he took his leave of the Cantons in a Latin speech at Zurich on 23d June 1658; but returned to England so short a time before the usurper's death that he had no opportunity of an audience from him. Why Cromwell employed him does not appear, but it is thought that during his residence abroad he contributed to the interests of Charles II. and the Church of England; and it is certain that after the Restoration he entered into holy orders, although at an unusually advanced period of life. He was ordained deacon 31st March 1661, and priest in June following, by Sanderson, bishop of Lincoln, and was instituted to the rectory of Fobbing in Essex, given him by the king. He subsequently acquired some celebrity, and endured much misfortune, until he was confined in the King's Bench Prison for debt; in 1682 his friends enabled him to go and live at the College of Physicians, but he was obliged to leave soon after in bad health, and eventually died in great poverty in 1685. He was interred, through the charity of Dr. Busby, master of Westminster school, and Sharp, rector of St. Giles-in-the-Fields, in the rector's tomb in that church. Some of his papers came into the possession of the Royal Society along with others which were left by Dr. Busby; the papers which I have made use of for the chronograms were probably unknown to Pell's biographers, and they will no doubt, when properly examined, afford many illustrations to his singular career.

A JOURNEY IN GERMANY IN SEARCH OF CHRONOGRAMS.

IT so happened, that in the autumn of 1883 I travelled over much ground new to me in Western Germany, where, led by the interest I take in my subject, and the excitement incident to its pursuit, I made it a part of my occupation to search for chronograms, as I had done in former years in other parts of Europe. I propose to relate some of my experiences, hoping that other travellers may follow up a similar path of research.

For this my purpose I visited every church to which access could be gained by ordinary means, public buildings, castles, and libraries, directing keen observation to every inscription, visible both inside and outside of these and other buildings. The printed books within my knowledge coming from this region, show that chronograms were well known to former inhabitants; the whole country has, in one way and another, been famous in European history, and has called into action a large amount of chronogrammatic talent; I therefore set forth, with a fair prospect of success before me, commencing at (let me fix on as a point) Frankfurt-on-the-Main. The towns and localities I visited were Frankfurt, Homburg, Fulda, Marburg, Cassel, Eisenach, Münster, Osnabrück, Lüneburg, Hanover, Hildesheim, Brunswick, Hamburg, Lubeck, and on my way homewards Brussels. All these are places of great antiquity, possessing many exceedingly interesting churches and buildings, all I may say destined to contain and conserve such inscriptions as I wanted. The libraries, too, had an encouraging, almost a fascinating attraction for me, and I have no doubt that if one were allowed to take down from the shelves at pleasure, book after book, many interesting discoveries would be made; but I may say, once for all, that such a privilege is not found to exist, nor can a personal search be made in the library catalogues, as in those of the British Museum, Lambeth Palace, and our university libraries, although a librarian generally does it willingly for a visitor. In such of the foreign libraries as I visited, the titles of the books are written on slips, and kept sorted in appropriate boxes, only to be handled by the librarian, so that unless the visitor knows the titles of the books wanted, he has but little chance of discovering his desiderata in a catalogue, and no chance of making an accidental 'find' on his way along.

The town-library at Frankfurt is an excellent one, and well looked after. I met with polite attention there from the chief librarian, and made, by means of his search, some very welcome discoveries, and one in particular of a book that had been sought for without success at the British Museum, at the libraries at Paris, Brussels, Leyden, etc., and far and wide among booksellers at home and abroad. The book may therefore be spoken of as 'most rare;' it is a bibliography of all writers on the dogma of the 'Immaculate Conception' at the time of publication; the title is 'Militia Immaculatæ Conceptionis,' etc., by Petrus de Alva y Astorga. Published at Louvain in 1663. I devoted several days to transcribing from it, and on leaving the neighbourhood I arranged to have other extensive transcripts made of the great store of chronograms and anagrams to be found therein, some of which my readers will find at a later page in this present volume. I also obtained from two antiquarian booksellers at Frankfurt some other rare books, with chronograms, which probably I should not otherwise have been able to procure, or even to know of, and I am hopeful of obtaining still more such. I also hope to hear of more through one or two librarians who may by chance find something in books under their particular care. I visited the cathedral at Frankfurt, and had I not been there before, and obtained all the chronograms, which the reader will find printed in my work Chronograms, pp. 65, 66, I should have affirmed that not a single one existed in the building; the builder and restorer were at work there, and all inscriptions were covered up or obstructed by scaffolding, whilst gaudy paint was being applied to every part of the internal walls and columns; these are fine times indeed for decorators of this class in Germany—paint is one of the acts of restoration, and German taste seems never to be satiated with it. It was fortunate that I secured my chronograms some years ago.

I was allowed, by the courtesy of the librarian, to range about with freedom of search among the shelves and presses of the small town-library at Homburg, with full liberty to take down and replace any of the books; the result, however, was but trifling, although many of the books there are curious. I made the acquaintance there of a man of considerable scientific repute, Dr. Fried. Rolle, who kindly lent me some topographical books relating to Grätz in Styria and other places. I made many extracts, which will be found at a later page in this volume. I had with me ready at a moment's notice for production at libraries and book-shops, a list of about a dozen very rare books on my subject, and not hitherto found in the British Museum and some other large libraries; I cannot say that I searched for the books, but I made inquiry for them at Cassel, Hanover, and Hamburg libraries, without success.

The town-library at Hamburg is said to contain about half-a-million of books; many of them were formerly the property of a monastery,<sup>1</sup> which fortunately escaped destruction by the conflagration which consumed a great part of the town and surrounded this building, in the year 1842. I experienced much attention here to my inquiries from the chief librarian, Dr. Francis Eyssenhardt, who, in addition to other linguistic attainments, is, fortunately for me, a complete master of the English language, and I am hopeful that I shall hear more of the contents of his library to suit my purpose, than the negative result I experienced on my visit. The inhabitants of this large commercial city are not bibliophiles. I searched all the churches, and met with only one chronogram, viz., in the church of Saint Katharine, where there is a mural memorial painted on a large wooden panel in remembrance of a clergyman, Joachim Westphalen, commencing with the familiar line—

‘ Integer vitæ scelerisque purus.’

and beneath are the following lines—

Doctrina pietate, gravis virtutibus arte
 Judicio præstans, integritate fide
 HÆC IACET HÆV FLXA IOCHIMVS VVESTPHALVS VRNÀ, } = 1574

 Eloquio scriptis, dogmata pura Dei
 Lustra habuit vitæ bis sex et quatuor annos
 Cum placide subiit regna beata patris.
 Anno 1576. Renov: 1725.

The chronogram alone is given at page 212 of my former work, Chronograms, as having been in the cathedral; that building was burnt by the great conflagration. I found no other chronograms in that city.

The picturesque town of Eisenach is celebrated for having been the place where Luther studied, and subsequently for his refuge at the Wartburg Castle on the neighbouring mountain, which he called his Patmos; I observed the large stone-tablet fixed to the west front of the church in the market-place to the memory of Johannes Hiltenius, a supporter of Luther's reformation. One cold morning before breakfast, when the market people were about, but not interfering, I copied nearly the whole of the inscription, and chronograms, and predictions, not altogether an easy task, because decay has rendered some of the words doubtful and even illegible. The inscription states that it was renewed in 1669—

‘ RENOVATUM AÑO CIO IO LX IX. Sumptibus I.M.’

The decay of the stone appears to be from natural causes, and not from wilful injury, to which it might be liable in its present accessible and exposed position. My readers may find the very curious inscription at page 336 of Chronograms, as I obtained it from the work there cited. The towns of Brunswick and Lubeck were unproductive to me, but perhaps my search was not exhaustive, and I may say as much for Marburg, which of all other towns seemed to be the most hopeful, as it is most charmingly picturesque.

Fulda, as may be seen in my book Chronograms, pp. 505-522, has been highly distinguished in chronogrammatic literature, and consequently I expected to gather a rich harvest there, for which I made a special journey to the town. It is true that there exists a vast episcopal palace and gardens, and a great cathedral, both built in the earlier part of the last century, at or about the time when Fulda was raised from its dignity of a very ancient abbacy to that of a modern bishopric, the abbot becoming a prince-bishop, retaining also his previous title of abbot. There are likewise other great churches, and in the vicinity there is a large pilgrimage church, seated conspicuously on a hill, approached through an avenue of shade-giving trees, and leading on to the 'Calvary' hill, composed of dark volcanic rock. All this was very encouraging. I made but a poor collection of chronograms, obtaining only two from the monuments of bishops in the cathedral. Comparing this locality with other places, Prague for instance, such a result was very disappointing. The town has the appearance of the decay of past and gone princely splendour and ecclesiastical dignity, while chronogrammatic spirit is almost totally absent.

In following up this pursuit it is proper to bear in one's recollection that, besides the destruction committed by war, conflagrations, and other inevitable agencies, the modern races of men do not as a rule understand chronograms, and grieve not at their destruction, and it must be clear to the observation of every one that the modern restorer when left to the perpetration of his own devices, cares more for his own work than that of his pious predecessors; the modern decorator too cares only for his paint, and the payment he may receive for the indiscriminate application of it. It therefore behoves all travellers and tourists to copy carefully all chronogrammatic inscriptions, whether perfect or not, while they are yet to be found, so that each man, woman, and child, whilst pursuing an interesting occupation, may help to preserve some things that are otherwise doomed to destruction and oblivion.

Having given some of my experiences, though to a greater length than I intended, I now proceed to lay before my readers the actual results of this, one of rambles.

In the parish church of Ober-Ursel, near Homburg in Hesse, a mural tablet to a lady named Thornet, who died in 1746, contains these chronograms, the words of which, in the original inscription, are all run together in a very confused manner—

SISTE TVOS PRECOR HIC GRESSVS QVICVNQVE VIATOR } = 1746
 AD SVPEROS CALIDAS EIACVLARE PRECES.

(Here follows the epitaph inscription.)

EXAVDIAT IGITVR DEVOTA ISTA DEVS VOTA

Over the door of another church at Ober-Ursel, inscribed beneath an image of a saint bearing the model of a building—

DIGNARE NOBIS MISERIS IN AGONE CONSTITVTIS PATROCINIO
TVO ASSISTERE. = 1720

Over the door of a small roadside chapel near the new railway station (September 1883) of Ober-Ursel, in the avenue of chestnut-trees; the chapel was built, as it appears, by Adam Uhl and his wife Elizabeth Uhlin, in 1741—

SACROS ISTOS LARES ÆTERNO BEATÆ VIRGINIS HONORI EXSTRVXIT
ADAM VHL || QVEIS CVM VXORE SVA ELISABETHA VHLIN=
NATA BENDERIN PLÆ PARENTI ÆTERNÆ SE OFFERT. || = 1741

This chronogram gives the date twice at the places where the bars || are inserted. The inscription, cut in the stone, is undergoing decay.

At the roadside near the cemetery of Ober-Ursel stands a stone crucifix; a slab of red sandstone in the pedestal has a votive inscription in old German, comprising this chronogram, the letters of which were formerly gilt, but now are almost illegible through decay. There is no other date—

ALSO BITET
MARIA VRSVLA VVALAVVIN } = 1739
SO DIES ESSAVFF GESETZET.

In the parish church of Bommersheim, near Homburg, on a mural tablet to the memory of Herr Henrich Schmitt, who died in 1752—

LVX HENRICE TVI RAPVIT TE SACRA PATRONI
QVEM CONSTRVXISTI, CONCIPERE TERRA LOCO. } = 1752

The remainder of the epitaph is in German.

I visited the neighbouring parish churches of Weissenkirch, Gonzenheim, Kirdorf, and Weisskirchen, in further search of chronograms, without finding any.

At Fulda I found only two chronograms, both in the Cathedral; the monument of Bishop Constantinus (who is described in the epitaph as Prince-Abbot, Baron de Buttelar<sup>1</sup>), is thus dated—

VT VIRTVTIS HONOR VIGEAT POST FATA SVPERSTES
HOC CONSTANTINO PONIT AMANDVS OPVS. } = 1740

The monument of another Prince-Abbot and bishop has this date.

QVOS TV NVNC CINERES LACRYMIS CONSPERGE VIATOR
LVSTRANTESQVE IVVA SIC RELEVARE ROGOS. } = 1700

At Luneburg, in the church of Saint John (a fine structure, the interior is an important example of the German Gothic style), there are (1883) some portraits in the north aisle; one represents the reformer Philip Melanchthon in full size, his hand points to an open book showing this sentence, 'Heute bratet ihr ein Ganss über 100 jahr wird ein weissen Schwan kofien den werdet ihr nicht todten können,' and on the next page the finger points particularly to the name of Huss in the chronogram—

VITAM HEV CONSTANTĪ CONSTANTĪA VT ABSTVLIT HVSSO } = 1415
 RELLIQVIIS VSTĪ RHENVŚ VBIQVE VIGET.

And beneath this may be read, 'A<sup>o</sup> 1411. Hat M. Joha<sup>nes</sup> Huss angefangen zu predigen in der kirche Bethlehem zu Prag. A<sup>o</sup> 1415 zu Costnitz verbrandt.'

i.e. (the chronogram) When, alas! Constance took away the life of the constant Huss, the Rhine is everywhere alive with the relics of the burnt martyr. Observe the play on the name 'Huss' and the word 'usti' (burnt); he was burnt to death at Constance, and his ashes were thrown into the Rhine, which, as it were, thus spread his doctrines along its course through Germany to the sea. See also Chronograms, p. 333.

At Osnabruck I found only one chronogram. In the Cathedral a mural monument with elaborate ornamentation bearing the dust of very many years, put up to perpetuate the memory of Bishop Boldonius, has an inscription now to be read with difficulty, which tells us that he died in 1611, aged 60, and concludes thus—

HÆC SĪBI PRÆPOSITĪ, MAGNO PRÆCLARVS HONORE } = 1611
 CONFECIT LACHESI PENSĀ TRAHENTE FERĀ.

At Hanover I found no chronograms in churches or public places, and only one in the Museum on a medal. There is in the Museum a large collection of the steel dies from which the medals and money of the kingdom were struck, impressions of which in lead are deposited in the usual sort of glass cases away from the good light, and well obscured by dust. The dies themselves are more conveniently arranged for inspection, but that of the following medal is not among them (October 1883), neither side of the medal. The device is somewhat intricate. The legend begins after three asterisks—* * *

OMNĪA NON NĪSĪ PROVĪDO ET VEGETO CONSĪLĪO. = 1666

The next legend surrounds the device in two lines in this order—

QVÆ LÆTA FRONDE VIREBAM * } = 1666
 NVNC

In centre a leafless tree.

RĪGVI } = 1666
 SIC TRANSĪT GLORĪA MVNDĪ *

The chronogram words thus read together make the date 1666 three times repeated. The other side of the medal cannot be seen.

It is hardly possible to imagine a place more interesting to the antiquary than Hildesheim: in the Cathedral there, near the north door, a Turkish military flag is suspended, apparently of silk, and dull brown or dirty green in colour, and beneath it a wooden tablet with this inscription in gilt letters on a black ground (which I copied on 6th October 1883)—

'TROPHÆVM FVGATÆ LVNÆ ET CAPTI BELGRADI. = 1717

Ab augustissimo Imperatore nostro Carolo vi. serenissimo Electori Coloniensi Josepho Clementi donatum, ab eodem principe et episcopo nostro ad nos missum, et in hac cathedrali Hildesiensi de concensu illustrissimi Capituli hujatis in perenne monumentum victoriæ tam illustris erectum.

i.e. A trophy of the Crescent (the Turks) put to flight and of Belgrade taken. Presented by our most august emperor Charles VI. to the most serene Elector Joseph-Clement of Cologne, and sent to us by the same, our prince-bishop; and in this cathedral, with the consent of the most illustrious Chapter thereof, hung up as a perpetual memorial of so renowned a victory. The defeat of the Turks and capture of Belgrade by Charles VI. was in 1717. See Chronograms, p. 159, etc.

At Hildesheim, in the street 'Vorderer Bruhl,' there is a small church with buildings attached, formerly belonging, as inscriptions indicate, to the 'Capucin Convent in the garden of lights.' It is now a school, etc., called the 'Priests' Seminary' (October 1883); the interior corridors, cloister, and church, look cold, cheerless, and whitewashy. Outside the building, on the front facing the street, is a conspicuous decaying stone tablet, with the figure of the Virgin and Child, heraldic shields beneath, probably the arms of the founder or benefactor, and this inscription cut in relief—

Conventus Capucinatorum in horto luminorum 1732.

SOLI DEO HONOR ATQVE GLORIA
PATRIÆ PAX BENEFACITORIBVS
RETRIBVTIO SEMPIETNA. } = 1732

Over the door of the church is this inscription painted in black on the stone, almost washed out and only partly legible; over it is a figure of the Virgin—

VIRGO DEI MATER SANCTVS ICON (. . . illegible.) = 1713

Over the side door, the entrance to the convent, is a stone carving which represents the Virgin and Child, on either side is a candlestick with two lighted candles standing in an enclosure or fence (of a garden?) made of basket work, and this inscription in hexameter and pentameter leonine verse—

AVXILII ORTI DIVINIS LVMINIS HORTI
SERVIS VIRGO FAVE, QVÆQVE SINISTRA CAVE. } = 1769

My careful search at Hildesheim was not rewarded by the discovery of any more chronograms there.

Münster in Westphalia, a place celebrated for many stirring events in history, none of which, however, did I find to be commemorated in chronograms; but these I did find and transcribe there—

In the Cathedral, the monument of Ferdinand, Free-Baron of Plattenburg, Dean of the Cathedral, etc. etc., has an inscription which says that he was born in 1650, and died in 1712, an example of all virtues; concluding with these chronograms—

CVNCTA MVNDI BONA TRANSIRE.	=	1712
SOLA COELESTIA IN ÆTERNVM DVRARE.	=	1712
NE PROPERES VIATOR SÏSTE, DEVOTE LEGE, CONTEMPLARE.	=	1712
ET PIË DEFVNCTO REQVIEM PRECARE.	=	1712

The monument consists of a fine group in white marble of Christ's agony in the garden, and subscriptions are invited for putting it into good order and repair.

Another monument, at present obstructed by scaffolding, and covered with the dust of works of restoration now in progress in the Cathedral, bears an inscription to the memory of one of the noble family of Droste, and this chronogram, to be read with difficulty—

OCTOBRIS SEXTVS LVXIT SOL ANTE CALENDAS	}	=	1594
QVO CELEBER LETO DROSTE POTITVS OBÏT.

The following are in the church of St. Ludger, inscribed on the brackets, which support statues of life size. That of St. Barbara bears—

S. BARBARA EÏNE IVNGFRAV AVCH EÏNE MARTÏRIN IN STERBEN IST EÏNE PATRONIN VND BESCHVTZERIN.	=	1735
---	---	------

That of St. John bears this, and the names of the donors—

PRÆCVSORI DOMINI ILLIVSQVE BAPTISTA POSVERVNT,	=	1731
--	---	------

F. F. Wettendorff. M. C. W. Zumbrock. Conjuges.

That of St. Joseph with the child Jesus, bears this—

VIRO MARIE VIRGINIS ET NVTRITIO IESV CHRISTI DICABANT, =	1731
F. F. Wettendorff. M. C. W. Zumbrock. Conjuges.

There are some other statues without such inscriptions.

Over the door of a church attached to the 'Clemens Hospital,' built by the bishop, Clement-Augustus—<sup>1</sup>

PRO PERENNI VERÆ MISERICORDIÆ SIGNO EXPENSIS SVIS ERIGEBAT AVGVSTVS BAVARIÆ PRINCEPS PATER PATRIÆ.	=	1751
---	---	------

And over the door inside the church is this verse—

AVGVSTOS AVGVSTA DECENT NVNC CONCINIT ORBIS	}	=	1751
CONVENIT AVGVSTO HÆC FABRICA DIGNA SVO.

i.e. For a perpetual sign of true pity, and at his own expense, Augustus, Prince of Bavaria, the father of his country, erected this church.—The world now agrees that august things become august persons; it is generally agreed that this building is worthy of its own Augustus.

~ At Hesse-Cassel I found no chronograms in churches or other public places, and in the Museum only I procured the following, copying from the medals contained in glass cases, inconveniently placed for my purpose. I must say, after some experience, that bad light outside, and worse light inside the building, awkward glass cases, hurry, custodians waiting about to shut up the museum after the easy attendance of two hours, besides the constant influence of beautiful and attractive objects all around, do not aid one's endeavours to transcribe the minute legends stamped on medals, only one side of which can be seen.

A medal to a Bishop of Wurzburg and Mayence—

IOAN: PHILLIP. FRANC. EP. HERBIPOLIEN: S.R.I. PR: FR: OR.
DVX. PRÆPO. MOG. = 1771

Another medal, with device of the aloe plant. (See also Chronograms, p. 132.)—MVNDI SIC TRANSIT GLORIA LENIS. = 1710

Another medal represents a woman in a triumphal chariot, one hand supporting a shield with the badge of Mayence, a wheel, the other hand holding a key, opposite to her a cock with outspread wings, on one is the wheel of Mayence, on the other is a key; inscribed—

Exergue—'Moguntia. 8 Jvl. 1763—Wormatia l. Mart.
1763.'

Another very large medal. In the centre a cartouche or shield containing this double chronogram—

ITA DECORATVS AMICI TITVL: = 1764
IN DEO SI VELIT CONSTANS REQUIESCAM. = 1764

and in the circumference,—'Ludovicus VIII. D.G. Hassia Landgravius S.R.I. princeps,' etc. 'Francisco Theresia Josepho Austria stirpi devotissimus.' And portrait.

Another medal represents the sacrifice of a lamb on an altar, and SVCIPENS AGNVM PRO DELICTO. LEV. XIV. 24. = 1763 and in the exergue—

DATA SVNT ILLI INCENSA MVLTA. APOC. VIII. 3. = 1763

Another medal, shield of heraldic arms, inscribed—

FIDES SPES CHARITAS TRES ANCHORÆ SALVTIS MEÆ. = 1758

Another medal, St. Martin of Tours dividing his robe with a beggar, inscribed—

SVB DEI VOLENTIS ET MARTINI AVSPICIIS SANVS FIT
IVBILÆVS. = 1740

Exergue—Benedict. XIV. Pontifex Maximus.

Another medal represents St. Martin on horseback and the beggar (the principal church in Cassel is dedicated to this saint)—

DEO, NOVO CÆSARI; IMPERIO AVSTRILÆ ET FRATRIBVS SVIS
IVBILÆVS IVBILAT. = 1745

Another medal, a woman looking upwards at rays proceeding from the sky, inscribed—

BENEDICTIO CÆLI SIT SVPER ME. = 1759

<sup>1</sup> This seems to be defective; possibly other chronogrammatic words are on the other, the invisible, side of the medal.

Another medal is inscribed—

ANNOS . PER . CENTVM . DVRAT . PAX . ISTA . VIGETQVE . } = 1748
 RELIGIONIS . OPVS . SPARGITE (in exergue) THVRAPIL.
 'Confirm : Aquisgran : (Aix-la-Chapelle) MDCCXLVIII.'

The device is an altar with Christian emblems, on one side a female figure of 'Faith,' and on the other side people kneeling. This relates to the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle of 1748 between England, France, Holland, Austria, Spain, Sardinia, and Modena, which terminated the war respecting the succession of Maria Theresa to the Empire.

A large medal. View of a city fortified, in foreground two quarrelsome birds holding a Maltese cross, above all a label inscribed, and the chronogram—<sup>1</sup>

VICINA LIBERA CONCORS.
 CRVX EQVITVM EXCRVCIAT PRVSSOS: PRVTENA POLONA } = 1754
 HANC AQVILÆ EXCVTIVNT: REXQVE SALVSQVE REGANT.

Another medal, on a Reformation festival, 15th October—

IEZT KAN SICH REGENSPVRG VON NEVN } = 1742
 DES EDLEN VVORTS VND GLAVBENS FREVEN.

Another Reformation jubilee medal represents an angel in glory—

PAX ERIT EN PALMAS CAROLO DONANTE QVIETAS. = 1717
 ALTERA SOLEMNIS IVBILAEI ECCLESIAE EVANGELICÆ.
 CELEBRATIO. = 1717

Another medal on a Reformation jubilee, the device represents the 'new Jerusalem.' It was in 1517 that Luther began his opposition to the system of the Romish religion—

INSIGNIA DICTA SVNT DE TE CIVITAS DEI. PS. LXXXVII. 3. = 1717
 In exergue—DEVS IN EA NON MOVEBITVR. PS. XLVI. 5. = 1517

This last date is that of a prominent movement in Luther's career.

Another medal. Device, two arms with the hands joined above a pedestal, with PAX RELIGIOSA on a scroll, and

ILLO DANTE HOC FIRMANTE. = 1702 } = 1755
 In exergue—STABILIS ERIT. = 53

Another represents a town on either side of a river, and a bridge between—D. XXVIII. SEPT.

IN RECORDATIONEM PACIS RELIGIOSÆ. = 1755

From a book lent to me by Dr. Friedr. Rolle at Homburg, describing the town of Marburg in Styria, I transcribed the following chronograms. The book is entitled 'Marburger Taschenbuch für geschichte Landes-und Sagenkunde der Steirmark und der an dieselbe greuzenden Länder von Dr. Rudolf Gustav Puff.'—Graz. 1854.

Page 59. On a crucifix in the chapel of St. Wolfgang—

Hic reverenter salutetur Maria Mater Dei,
 CAROS MEOS EXAVDIS CLIENTES. = 1767

 and topography of the country round about that town; with many engravings.

 Calvarienberg, where there is a chapel and three crosses with this inscription—

This part of an inscription on the tomb of a benefactor gives the date—

SEPVLCHRVM VERO CHRISTI FIERI FECITQVE POSVITQVE } = 1654
 FILII LIBERALITAS OCTAVA IVNII.

And this gives the name and date of another benefactor—

IOANNIS GABRIELIS MASCHVVANDER. = 1664

Another benefactor is thus named and dated—

BARONIS DEPVSTATI STYRIÆ ANNO SECVNDO SED VITÆ SVÆ } = 1654

The three crosses having been injured by lightning in 1763, were repaired by the 'brotherhood' in the year—

FVLMEN DEIECIT, CONGREGATIO REPARAVIT. = 1764

At the back of the Calvary church an altar is inscribed—

GRATIA PLENA DEI MATER AFFLICTOS RECREA. = 1803

Another book was lent to me by the same owner, from which I gather the following. The title of the book is in German, to this effect: 'A new travel-book in Austria, Salzburg, and the Austrian lakes. By Dr. Franz Sartori. Leipsic, 1812.'

Vol. i. p. 36. At Gaden, in the vicinity of Vienna, to the memory of a Venetian sculptor buried there—

Also this to the memory of another Italian sculptor, whose works are there—

 PICTOR PRINCEPS HAC IN SCROBE QVIESCIT IN PACE.

Vol. ii. p. 135. A festival procession was held in 1756 by the people at Judenburg, to commemorate a great conflagration at the pilgrimage church near Renneveg in Carinthia; this chronogram marks the occasion (I find it thus)—

MARLÆ OB AVERSA BENIGNE IGNIS PERICVLA SENATVS } = 1756
 POPVLVSQVE IVDENBVRGENSIS FLERI IVSSIT.

At Brussels, when journeying homeward, I visited an ancient building, the Port du Hal, which should be inspected by tourists at every opportunity, together with the interesting collection of antiquities which it contains; I took note of one thing at least that I had never seen before, either there or in any other collection or library,—it is in the second-floor room, and numbered 23. Q,—an old frame containing a large paper sheet printed ('a broadsheet'), with a broad border of flowers in colour added, surrounding Latin verses, fifty lines or more, with an introduction thus—'Amplissimo clarissimoque viro Domino Christophoro Robert in alma universitate Lovanensi, Juris utriusque antecessori primario, augustæ nationis Germanicæ protectori meritissimo electo die Martii MDCCXLVII.' Then follow the verses, concluding with this hexameter and pentameter 'Chronodistic'—

CLARE FORI PRINCEPS LVMENQVE SALVSQVE LYCEO, } = 1747
TEVTONICÆ EXORERIS STELLA BENIGNA TVÆ

Applaudit augusta natio Germanica.

The verses are complimentary to a German student, Christopher Robert, who took a degree in law at Louvain University in 1747. Observe that the letter Y counts = 2.

At Brussels the new church of St. Catharine should be visited; it is vast, heavy, and peculiar in its style of architecture. I observed therein hanging on the wall, at the right side of the western entrance, a devotional picture, dark and obscure for want of proper cleaning; beneath it is the following chronogram in the Flemish language; the whole seems to have been removed from another and much older building—

T'IER S CHRÏST ALS IAN VAN LÖVEN HIER OP DESE PLAETSE, } = 1369
DE SESTHÏEN HEYLLIGHE HOSTÏEN HEEFT GESTOLEN.

i.e. The year of Christ when John of Louvain stole the sixteen holy wafers.

This evidently denotes the robbery of the sacred hosts at Brussels in the year 1370, particularly narrated in Chronograms, pp. 262-283, and at a subsequent page of this present volume.

My own observations during the tour of 1883 end here; but my friend the Rev. R. Milburn Blakiston was moving about over some of the same ground with his eyes open, and observed at the town of Ypres in Belgium, at the ancient monastery of St. John, now the free-school, three cannon balls built into the wall; upon each of these three projectiles is painted one syllable of the chronogram, DELETI MORINI,

DE LE TI MO RI NI. = 1553
and underneath is inscribed—

REPARANT HOC TEMPORE SEDES. = 1600

The monks of St. John had originally their monastery near Thérouanne; it was destroyed, with the town, in 1583, and later they obtained authority to establish themselves at Ypres. (See Chronograms, p. 99, and the index of this present volume, 'Deleti,' etc., for explanations.)

On the same good authority I am enabled to give a correct version of two chronograms at the Guild houses at Brussels, which were partly illegible on a previous occasion when I tried to copy them; the first reads in hexameter and pentameter verse—

QVAS FVROR HOSTILIS SVBVERTERAT IGNIBVS ÆDES } = 1697
SARTOR RESTAVRAT PRÆSIDIBVS QVE DICAT.

i.e. The house which hostile rage destroyed by fire, the tailor restores and dedicates to the presidents of the guild.

On the other house, at its summit—

COMBVSTA
 INSIGNIOR RESVRREXI
 EXPENSIS
 SEBASTIANÆ GULDÆ.

} = 1691

i.e. Being burnt, I have arisen more distinguished at the expense of Sebastian's guild.

Saint Sebastian was the patron-saint of archers.

The reader is referred to Chronograms, p. 49, for my first notice of these two inscriptions, which may now be seen, and are easily legible, on the front of the two guild-houses, commemorating the rebuilding at the respective dates.

SOME LOCAL CHRONOGRAMS. GERMANY, NETHERLANDS, ETC.

NONE of the following were collected by myself at the places named ; I give them from the authorities quoted. It is probable that some of them are now decayed, or have been 'improved' away.

At Bonn, on the Rhine, inscription on St. John's Hospital, completed in 1849. (Communicated by a friend from Bonn.)

FVNDAVIT PIETAS
EREXIT CONCORDIA
PERFECIT FIDES
SERVET PAX ET IVSTITIA.      } = 1849

i.e. Piety founded it, Concord built it, Faith finished it, may peace and justice preserve it.

At Vienna, a chapel on a bridge dedicated to St. John of Nepomuk, was thus inscribed (Zedler, lvi.)—

DIVO IOANNI GLORIOSO SECLI THAVMATVRGO.      = 1720
i.e. To the glorious Saint John, the miracle worker of this age.

Stade, near Hamburg. A destructive fire occurred here in 1659, and again in 1682 ; on each occasion the spire of the church tower was destroyed. Some one made the following chronogram thereon, a play on 'Statio,' the Latin name of the place, and other words forming alliterations similar in sound or spelling. (Zedler, xxxix. 743)—

STADA STETIT STABILIS
STAN DO STATI ONE SECVNDA.      } = 1659

At Weimar a church was burnt ; it is mentioned in Zedler, vol. lv. 1267, that an inscription containing this chronogram was put up to commemorate the event, and the rebuilding by the Duke William iv.—

PERDIDIT HAS ÆDES FAX SACRAS IGNE NVPER ; = 1618
 ERIGIT AT PATRIA DVX GVILLIELMVS EAS. = 1630
i.e. A torch lately destroyed this sacred building with fire ; but Duke William builds it up for his country.

Tyrnau, in Hungary. It is related that in 1688 a citizen of this place, named Nowaki, in revenge for some wrong, or neglect of himself or his advice on some affairs, set fire to the town, and so managed that while he himself was not injured the place was nearly all destroyed. A certain poet marked the unlucky year by the following verse (Zedler, xlv. 228)—

QVO CLANDESTINO VVLCANO NINIVE AD INSTAR } = 1688
 CINCTA, NOVAKIANAS PLANGIT TIRNAVIA TECHNAS.
i.e. Tyrnau, because surrounded by clandestine fire like unto Nineveh, mourns for the artifices of Nowaki.

Trebnitz. Over the door of the church belonging to the Nonnen-kloster at this place, there was this inscription. (See Zedler, xlv. 307)—

O. A. M. D. G.
 HÆC CHRISTINA TIBI PERSOLVET LIMINA CHRÏSTE. } = 1690
 FAC VT ET ALBERTI NOS COR VTRINQVE IUVET.
i.e. Christina will render these houses to thee, O Christ ; Bring it to pass that the heart of (Saint) Albert may aid us on all sides. (Christina Catharina was abbess there from 1674 to 1699. The initial letters preceding the chronogram stand for Omnipotenti ac magno Deo, gloria.)

At Wolfenbüttel, in Brunswick, this was inscribed on one of the public buildings to mark the date—

ARX ATQVE VRBS GVELPHICA DEI AVXILIO ET AVGVSTI } = 1643;
 DVCIS CONSILIO POST TRÏSTIA ET EXITIOSA BELLA RESTITVTA ATQVE RESTAVRATA.
i.e. By the help of God, and through the wisdom of Duke Augustus, the citadel and Guelphic city was re-established and restored after grievous and destructive wars. (Zedler, lviii. 820.)

Zerbst, in North Germany, was once the seat of the princes of Anhalt-Zerbst, who became extinct in 1793. The following couplet denotes the death of one of them, who is mentioned in Zedler lxi. 1591 as Carl Wilhelm, Furst zu Anhalt—

AVGVSTVS MORITVR NOSTER, TERRASQVE RELINQVIT : } = 1742
 CHARVS ANHALTINVS DESINIT ESSE PATER.
i.e. Our Augustus is dead, he leaves the earth ; the dear one of Anhalt ceases to be our father.

The town of Zittau, in Saxony, was almost destroyed during the Thirty Years' War, in the first half of the seventeenth century ; a long description of the rebuilding is given in Zedler's Universal Lexicon, lxii., and, commencing at p. 1623, several chronograms are recorded to commemorate some of the circumstances. This was put up at the parish church, probably in connection with a clock or a sundial, composed by the rector, 'M. Christ. Keimann'—

Index horarum, campana, ævique fugacis
Per me te memorem mors jubet esse sui,
PARTA TVAS PAX ZITTA LARES ET SAXONIS VMBRA } = 1649
ET VERBO EDIO (sic) PROFLVA VITA BEET.

The choir of the church at Zittau had been protected by an iron grille in 1544, in remembrance whereof this couplet was inscribed on a pillar adjoining the spot—

CLATRATVS CHORVS EST TVM VRBANO CONSVLE FERRO } = 1544
TER SOL APRILI ET BIS QVATER ORTVS VBI EST.

i.e. The choir was guarded by an iron lattice when Urban was Consul; the day three and twice four (the 11th) of April was the time (of its removal).

This couplet was composed by the rector Tobias Schnuren, and put up in the parish church on the completion of some works of repair,—'Anno Domini 1563 renovatum est hoc templum,' etc. etc.—

EST SACRA PICTVRIS ÆDES ORNATA SVPERBIS, } = 1564
SOLA FIDES ORNET PECTORA SANCTA PRECOR.—T. S.
i.e. This sacred edifice was adorned with superb paintings, I pray that faith alone may adorn holy minds.

This was inscribed on the building of the public school, the Gymnasium at Zittau, to mark the date of the repairs—

SCHOLAS TVERIS POSTERIS } = 1669
DEVs BENIGNO NVMINE.

The following wish was inscribed in the catalogue of the town-hall library ('folgenden Wunsch dem catalogo einzuverlieben')—

IOVA VELIT PORRO PHILADELPHOS MITTERE NOBIS. = 1665

After the siege of Zittau a tower was repaired and inscribed with these verses—

MCENIA DVX SAXO QVATIENS HÆC EXIGIT HOSTES, = 1644
RVRSVS DVX REFCIT MCENIA SAXO SVIS; = 1644
SAXONA IOVA DVCEM ZITTÆQVE TVERE PENATES } = 1644
ET PROHIBE A NOBIS ASPERA QVOQVE ROGO.

i.e. The Saxon Duke shaking these walls drove out the enemies, again the Saxon Duke repaired the walls for his own people; I pray, O Jehovah, do thou watch over Saxon affairs, the Duke, and the 'Penates' of Zittau, and ward off calamities from us.

The period of the siege of Zittau was denoted by this distich to have been in early summer time—

SOLIS VT ÆSTIFERO DECVRRERAT ORBITA CANCRO } = 1632
ZITTAVIÆ SVPERIS IACLA PARATA CADVNT.

An inscription was put up in the Church of the Holy Cross at Zittau, recording its destruction in 1643, its restoration in 1651, and its completion under the auspices of the magistrates of the town; this chronogram gives the final date—

DVX EXERCITVVM ZITANIS VSQVE FAVETO. = 1653
i.e. O Leader of armies, do thou constantly befriend the people of Zittau.

Another church, according to an inscription, was built in 1510, destroyed in 1643, rebuilt in 1651, and repaired in 1712; the inscription concluded with this aspiration for its future safety—

DOMINVS CONSERVET IN PACE. = 1712
i.e. May the Lord preserve it in peace.

It is mentioned of another church at Zittau that, after the termination of the Thirty Years' War in 1648, it was generally repaired in 1654-1655, and an ornamented gate was erected bearing this somewhat obscure inscription—

C. S.

Una dies homines latet observentur ut omnes proinde
 MORS CLADES AV!
 EITELKEIT. = 1655

In the neighbourhood of Zittau rises the Oybin, a lofty wooded sandstone rock, in shape resembling a bee-hive and crowned with the highly picturesque ruins of a monastery and a castle curiously combined. The castle, a robber's stronghold, was destroyed by the Emperor Charles IV., who founded the monastery on its site in 1369. The latter was deserted in 1545 by the Celestine Monks who had occupied it, and was destroyed by fire in 1577 and 1681. The church of 1384 with its lofty gothic arches, some of which show remains of beautiful tracery, is the best preserved part. These particulars are taken from Baedeker's handbook. It is related in Zedler, xxv. 2573, Art. 'Oybin,' that a building at the monastery founded by Charles IV., bore the following inscription; supposing it to have been cut contemporaneously with the date, it is an early example of chronogram. The letters D are not counted, and that is suggestive of a Flemish origin for the inscription and a later date for its being made.

CENOBIVM KAROLVS HOC CONDIDIT INDVPERATOR. = 1369
i.e. The Emperor Charles built this monastery.

Stralsund, a seaport town in Pomerania, lies on the Straelsund, a strait two miles wide which separates the island of Rügen from the mainland. The town is entirely surrounded by water (formerly lakes and marshes), being connected with the mainland by three bridges only; it was founded in 1209, and soon attained to such prosperity that in the fourteenth century it was second in importance among the Hanseatic towns on the Baltic. The citizens adopted the reformed faith at an early period, and were therefore on the side of Sweden during the Thirty Years' War. In 1628, aided by Swedish and Danish vessels, they gallantly defended their town against Wallenstein, the general of the imperial forces, who had sworn to take it 'though it had been attached by chains to heaven,' but was compelled to abandon the siege after sustaining a loss of above 12,000 men. By the peace of Westphalia in 1648, the town, together with the province of Vor-Pomern and the island of Rügen, was ceded to Sweden, to which, notwithstanding its capture by the Elector Frederick William of Brandenburg in 1678, and by the Prussians, Danes, and Saxons in 1715, it continued to belong down to 1815, when it became Prussian.

These particulars will help to explain what I find in one of the twenty tracts contained in a volume in the British Museum, labelled 'Tractatus de rebus literariis.' (Press-mark 819. f. 26. Tract 2.) The title is 'Programma tertium ex doctis Westphalis Mindenses,' etc., by Johannes Ludolphus Bünemann, 1716; in which the writer, having alluded to the events at Stralsund down to 1678, adds this note, containing good chronograms of 1715, and a somewhat obscure epigrammatic anagram on the name of the place, in hexameter and pentameter verse—

Præter carmen de Stralsunda nuperrima deditione impressum, fingebam eodem tempore sequentia, quæ eodem pertinent et tempus deditionis ostendunt:

IPSO SOLSTITIO STRALSVNDA ARCTATA REGI BORVSSIÆ SE
DEDEBAT. =

IM SOLSTITIO ERGAB SICH STRALSVND AN PREVVSENS KÖNIG. = 1715

1715

STRALSVNDA, per anagt: DANS LVSTRA.

O STRALSVNDA ut eras Sueco DANS LVSTRA leoni

Sic et eris Prusso et Dano DANS LVSTRA leoni.

SVNDA, per anagt: NVDAS VNDAS DANVS.

Num DANVS NVDAS circum te possidet VNDAS?

Urbem SVNDA tuam nomine DANVS HABET.

i.e. Besides the verses recently printed about the surrender of Stralsund, I appended the following at the same time, which relate to the same event and show the period of the surrender:

At the summer solstice Stralsund being encompassed surrendered to the King of Prussia.

(The German line has the same meaning.)

The anagram loses its effect by translation; in fact, obscurity is the result of any translation of a play upon words which are themselves somewhat obscure.

'Stralsund,'—by anagram,—'giving marshes.' O 'Stralsund,' as you were 'giving marshes' to the Swedish lion, so also you will be 'giving marshes' to the Danish lion.

'The strait,'—by anagram,—'deserted waters Dane.' Does the 'Dane' possess the 'deserted waters' around thee? The 'Dane' hath thy city, 'Sunda' by name.

The allusions seem to be pointed at the marshy or watery position of the town; the word 'Lustra' will bear this meaning. Lustrum, i.e. a slough, bog, morass, a haunt of wild beasts, scil. of the Lion of Sweden or of Denmark.) Observe how the words of the anagram are dragged into the verses, which were no doubt much appreciated.

Erfurt. In some of the towns of Germany and Austria there are churches which are commonly called Scotch churches, a term that is good as an indication of their origin. In the tenth and eleventh centuries Scotch Benedictines, exiles from their own country, being pious men and good teachers, were encouraged by the Princes of Germany, and convents were accordingly established by them at Ratisbon, Würzburg, Vienna, Erfurt, and other places, and their patron saint was usually St. James. The Scotch church at Ratisbon is a building of great antiquity, and contains some chronogrammatic inscriptions;<sup>1</sup> and that at Erfurt has been distinguished by a medal,<sup>2</sup> of which the Society of Antiquaries possess an original impression. I do not know of any duplicate of it. The church, as we find from independent authority, was founded in 1036, and attached to a 'cloister' for Scotch Benedictine monks, by Count Walter Glitzberg; it was restored about 700 years after, when a new front was added. On the obverse of the medal is seen this new west front, in the 'Italian' style of architecture, and this inscription—ECCLESIA JACOBI SCOTORUM ERFURTI. The reverse has only this inscription—

VVALTHERVS GLITZBERG PRO SCOTIS CONSTRVIT AEDES ENITET INSIGNIS CONIVGIS HIC PIETAS. ATQVE HÆC SEPTINGENTIS ANNIS ECCLESIA DV RAT: HINC NOVA FIT FACIES PVLCHRIOR INDE NITET.	}	= 1036

i.e. Walter Glitzberg built this church for the Scotch, the piety of his wife shines conspicuously here. And that church lasted 700 years from the time: the new front is made, and from this time forth it shines more beautifully. It will be seen that by adding to the original date of 1036, the period of about 700 years for which the church had stood (say 694 years), we get the date of the restoration, etc., 1730, found in the second part of the chronogram; the difference of 6 years was probably occupied about the work.

Mechlin. Two volumes 4° (British Museum, press-mark 156 e. 12.) contain a collection of monumental and other inscriptions in the churches of the city and province of Mechlin. The title is, 'Provincie, Stadt, ende District van Mechlen opgeheldert In haere Kereken, Kloosters, Kapellen, Gods-huysen, Gilden, publieke Plaetsen,' etc. etc. Brussels, 1770. The inscriptions are very numerous and elaborately printed; a small proportion of them contain the chronograms following; a few others are omitted, as they are given in my former book on this subject.

At page 84 of Volume i. In the Cathedral at Mechlin; the whole inscription gives the year; there are no figures but the day of the month—

HENRICVS COOLS, PRESBITER, UBI VIXIT PRÆFECTUS CHORI CÆREMONIIS, INIBI PIUS, SOPORATUR: TU VIATOR PIIS VOTIS RIGATO I, ET ITA SEQUERE 15. 9BRIS.	}	= 1629

<sup>1</sup> This church owed its existence to a statue of the Virgin, which is said to have floated up the river against the stream by miraculous agency till it stopped and remained fixed at the spot where the church, which was built in consequence, now stands. This was not the only miracle performed by the image, for it obtained such a high repute for curing all kinds of maladies, that the weak and devout made pilgrimages to it from far and near. The image exists no longer, having been destroyed by sacrilegious hands when the army of the Confederates, under Oliver Temple, in 1580, took and pillaged the city.

At Binche, in Hainault. From a tract, 'Essai historique et descriptif sur des monuments du Hainault.' By Léopold Devillers. Mons, 1853. (British Museum, press-mark 10271. bb.) In the church of St. Ursmar, at Binche, a monument in the chapel of the saint is thus inscribed, 'D. O. M. At Mons, in Hainault, extracted from 'Memoire historique et descriptif sur l'Eglise de Sainte Waudru, a Mons,' par Léopold Devillers. Mons, 1857. (British Museum, press-mark 1732. a.) At page 73, an altar dedicated to Saint Ghislain is inscribed—

Saint Ghislain est particulièrement invoqué, avec beaucoup de confiance, par les femmes qui sont sur le point de mettre au monde. On a aussi recours à lui pour les maladies des enfants.

It is related that, on 2d May 1451, the eighth chapter of the order of the Golden Fleece was held at the church of Saint Waltrude (S<sup>te</sup> Waudru) at Mons, the Duke Philip the Good, of Burgundy, presiding. Du Bossu relates, at page 148 of his History of Mons, that Philip the next morning celebrated a solemn service in the chapel of the Hôtel Naast, for the rest of the souls of the deceased brethren of the order, and a very considerable offering was made there for the benefit of the church. Vinchant has preserved the following chronograms on the event (the letters D=500 are not counted)—

GOVERNORS OF THE NETHERLANDS.

THE Austrian governors of the Netherlands were naturally greeted and applauded by the magistrates and ecclesiastics of the country, on their arrival to take upon themselves the duties intrusted to them, and chronograms were largely used to give emphasis to the various forms of literary approach to their Highnesses. Many notable examples are given in my former volume of Chronograms; those which now follow will constitute an important addition to what I have already published. The several books quoted are either rare, or else it is very difficult to find them out, or even to ascertain that such treasures exist.

Albert and Isabella.

Governor and Governess of the Netherlands.

A QUARTO volume of 130 pages, in the library of the Rev. Walter Begley, bears this title—

The first part of the work is in fact a second edition of a book which is described in my book on Chronograms, at pp. 415-423, under the title 'Concordiæ Belgicæ Panegyricus Parnassicus,' Antwerp, 1609. The author, De Weerdt, became aware of his error in the first edition, in neglecting to count the letter D in his chronograms, as a numeral=500. He therefore recast his original chronograms (with a few exceptions) restoring the letter D to its value, and printed the whole series at a subsequent period (the year 1626), in the work now under our notice, adding thereto a second part as a further panegyric to Albert and Isabella, and introducing sundry events in the history of their career. This is the only instance I have met with, of amends being made for injury to the letter D. The author's explanation is contained in his address to his readers at the beginning of the second part, and I have extracted it verbatim, at page 69, infra, for the benefit of my readers.

Only the chronograms which have been so amended are transcribed in the following extracts, the same explanations which I gave in Chronograms, pp. 415-423, will apply to them and need not be repeated here; I have underlined all the words which the author has altered or substituted in order to restore the letter D, for the sake of comparison with the first edition; the marginal figures are references to the pages where I first put them into print.

This last chronogram has been recast and a new error introduced; it makes 1659 both here and in the original, instead of the intended date 1609.

THE second part of this elaborate panegyric now claims our attention; the title-page is as follows:

PARNASSI BICIPITIS

De pace Vaticinia. Liber secundus, de rebus tempore induciarum gestis.

The dedication, filling three pages conspicuously printed in capital letters, is followed by the address to the reader, before alluded to (at page 65), explaining why the author recast the foregoing chronograms, and for the like reason composed those which here follow, so that the letter D should be counted at its numerical value of 500. These are the author's own words—

Primus hujus Operis liber inscriptus 'Belgiæ Concordiæ Panegyricus Parnassicus,' olim in lucem prodit laxiori pede, qui in hac secunda editione est restrictior: in priori enim, non semper omnium litterarum numerantium in chronographicis ad amussim habita ratio; quippe secundum usitatum morem, in distichis chronographicis littera D neglecta fuit, et sæpius non numerata: sed in hoc, exactissima ejus in omnibus observatio; exceptis chronographicis, quæ tribus, quatuor, aut pluribus constat versibus. Correctio libri prioris, et adjunctio secundi in eodem stili et argumenti genere, amaras difficillimi laboris habuit radices; sed fructus earum dulciores, si placet, Lector degusta, et boni consule.

Immediately following (at page 75) commences a Latin hexameter panegyric filling six pages, in which twelve chronograms are scattered and mingled. As I have before observed, it would be fruitless to extract any of them; they relate to events within the dates 1610 to 1619. At page 81 Phœbus appears to conduct the 'chronographic congratulation;' he invokes the muses, all of whom in turn take up the theme, in praise of Isabella.

At page 86 commences a poem in hexameter verse, entitled, 'Cursus Casimiri, seu Civitatis Coloniensis cathedralisque capituli cum calvinistis conflictus carmine celebratus.' Three pages are filled with the verses, every word of which begins with the letter c. The circumstances are matters of local rather than national history ; marginal notes indicate that the devil disturbed the diocese of Cologne, and brought about a Calvinistic schism, followed by the defection and marriage of Archbishop Gebhardt, who at length takes flight to save himself from the fury of the people of Cologne.<sup>1</sup> The next poem takes up the subject, the leading points being emphasized by marginal notes and occasional chronogram verses, thus—

The poem applauds the Emperor Ferdinand II, who was then peaceably acknowledged as King of Bohemia, according to the predictions of the Sibyls, which are set forth in chronogram, and to the omen of a comet which had recently appeared.

The Latin introduction to some further predictions is to this effect:—The prophecies of the last-named Sibyl, by which she foretells, in chronographic verse, the divinely obtained victory on the 8th November 1620, against Frederic Count-Palatine and his allies at the metropolitan city of Prague, and the surrender thereof. The first four apply to Ferdinand Augustus, King of Bohemia—

A four-sided obelisk, supposed to be erected at Prague, is next represented, bearing chronogram inscriptions to the four last-named personages, and the date CIO.DCC.XX.—

A column supposed to be erected at Prague to the Most Serene Duke of Saxony is represented, thus inscribed—

S. DVCI SAXONLÆ IMPERII E. PRAGA G. E. P. = 1620

The same European Sibyl thus advises Frederick Count-Palatine—

NON CAPIAS, TIBI NEC DABITVR, FREDERICE : TIARA HÆC } = 1619
CÆSARIS EST ; ERGO NON ERIT ILLA TVA.

And the same Sibyl repeats her advice to him in 200 acrostics, 'ducentena acrostichis,' which I forbear to transcribe.

Then a Latin poem is addressed to the Emperor Ferdinand II., so composed that every word commences with the letter F ; the title and first couplet are as follows—

Famæ fortunæ felicitatis Ferdinandi fatum felix faustum favorabile.

FERT FERDINANDI FASCES, FERT FOEDERA FAVSTI } = 1620
FASTIGI FORTVNA FAVENS ; fert fulcra favoris, etc. etc.
(The date of the victory of Prague.)

The alliterative poem contains no more chronograms. The Muses now come forward, and—

'Pergit Calliope legendo.'

Then follows a 'Chronographicum' on the death of Philip III., King of Spain—

I.

And one on the death of the Archduke Albert (the Governor of the Netherlands, the personage who is the subject of the present panegyric)—

ALBERTI ARCHIDVCIS LÆDENS COR: INTERIT IPSE,
ET FRATRI ASTRIFERA REGI SOCIATVR IN ARCE, etc. etc. } = 1621

(There are no more chronogram lines.)

Then follow 'Lessi sex elegiaci, etc.' The Latin title is to this effect: Six lamentations, chronographic elegies on the death of the Most Serene Prince Albert, Archduke of Austria, Duke of Brabant, etc., and concerning the happy government of the Princess Isabella-Clara-Eugenia, of the Belgic provinces—

(This last chronogram relates to the government of the Archduchess Isabella.) Then follows a semi-chronogrammatic poem concerning the reign of Philip iv. of Spain and the Netherlands:—

Lætitia nova caussa datur : discedite luctus
 Et lacrymæ, tristes gemitus, quia nostra gubernat
 Luna gubernatrix Belgas, et lumine lustrat

Amne Tagus, etc. etc.; mentioning many rivers in the dominions of King Philip. The poem concludes with the exclamation 'Vive o Rex, vive Philippe,' and it is immediately followed by a 'Votum chronographicum' for his safety—

PHILIPPE REX IBER RELIGIONIS PETRA CANÆ ÆTATIS CERNENS
 ANNOS FELICITER SCEPTIS IMPERA. = 1621

The Muse Calliope continues her reading of the European Sibyl's utterances, and here it must be acknowledged that she has to encounter a serious difficulty under the title of a chronographic-retrograde-elegiac-anagram; the full title, etc., is as follows—

Ejusdem voti anagramma chronographicum retrogradum elegiacum sibyllæ Europææ quo Philippo<sup>1</sup> optimo regi catholico vitam et incolumitatem apprecantur.

LANIFICÆ TIBI SINT NECTENTES STAMINA LARGO
 POLLICE, REX, PRINCEPS STRIPIS ET HESPERIÆ. } = 1621

It reads backwards thus—

HESPERIÆ ET STRIPIS PRINCEPS, REX POLLICE LARGO
 STAMINA NECTENTES SINT TIBI LANIFICÆ. } = 1621

A 'Votum chronographicum' for the safety of the King of the Belgic provinces—

PUBLICA SACRIFICAT TIBI REX VOVET ATQVE SALVTIS
 ADIVTRIX, FIAT CORDIS AVITA SALVS. } = 1621

A 'Votum chronographicum' of the clergy, for the same—

HVMANO GENERI CHRISTVS LVX, SPES QVOQVE CERTA, SIT SCOPVS HIC, VITÆ REX CINOSVRA TVÆ. } = 1621

A 'Votum chronographicum' of the nobility—

EXEAT INFELIX LVCTVS, LABOR EXVLET, ATQVE
 TABIFICVS LANGVOR CORPORIS ATQVE ANIMÆ. } = 1621

A 'Votum chronographicum' of all adherents—

BELGICA FLORESCAT TVA FELIX PRINCIPE TALI:
 VIVE PHILIPPE DIV, REX NOVE VIVE DIV. } = 1621

A poem next follows relating to various events of the period and the conclusion of war, but of no particular interest in the present day, and several chronograms not requiring any special notice are mingled with the poetry. At page 125 of the book we find that the Muse Calliope has finished her task of reading, when Phœbus appears with a 'final flourish' commencing in these words, concerning the Duke de Spinola and the capture of the fortress and town of Breda—

Legerat hæc dea Calliopea : coronidis addit

Hæc oracla loco Phœbus memoranda per ævum :

CESPES FATALIS BREDÆ : TV CESPITE CAPTA ES ;

CESPITE ET AGGERE DVX TE CAPIET SOLIPAN.

} = 1625

This is the last chronogram, and in taking leave of the very curious and, I believe, rare book, I call the reader's attention to the last word of the chronogram, 'SOLIPAN.' It is explained in the poem which fills the last three pages of the book that the word is an anagram on the name 'SPINOLA,' and is a mystic word inscribed on a necklace composed of seven precious stones, by virtue of which the Muse Urania was enabled to know something of the 'recondite secrets of fate.' Urania proceeds to describe the meaning of the precious stones and their representative virtues, and attributes them all to the Duke de Spinola. She then declares that Phœbus (who opened the panygryc) forbids her to disclose any more secrets—

'Plura loqui, vel scire ævi secreta futuri,

Me vetuit Phœbus : fatalis clauditur ergo

Mnemosynes codex : omnes cum matre reducunt

Thespiades.' Etc. etc.

The official licence to print the book is on the last page ; it is worthy of notice, and is as follows—

Approbatio.

Hæc Parnassi bicipitis de Pace Vaticinia, vario metri artificio decantata à Clariss: Dom: Jodoco de Weerd, Urbis Anturpiensis Syndico, digna censeo, quæ ob argumenti raritatem, et metri varietatem, typis committantur, et ad Reipub: Litterariæ ornamentum evulgentur. [Official signature.]

The Archduke Ferdinand.

A VOLUME of tracts relating to Belgian history (British Museum, press-mark 1193. l. 6.). Tract No. 3 bears this title, 'BRUXELLENSIUM TRIUMPHUS serenissimo principi Hispaniorum Infanti, Ferdinando archiduci Austriæ s.r.i. Cardinali Belgium ingrediente erectus. Describebat Sebast. Tychonius, insignis ecclesiæ Colleg. D. Gudilæ Sacellanus.' Brussels, 1635. 4°. The only chronogram in the volume is at page 46 of this tract ; it was an inscription on a structure among the decorations of the streets in 1634, on the arrival of Ferdinand at Brussels—

PRINCEPS TIBI FERDINANDVS VENIT :

IO VIVE, IO GAVDE PATRIA.

} = 1634

i.e. Prince Ferdinand comes to thee ; Huzza long live, huzza rejoice O country. In my book Chronograms, pp. 424-429, will be found a great many chronograms on the same event.

Leopold William.

A SMALL book in paper covers (British Museum, press-mark 1157. de.) 'CHRONOGRAPHIA SUPER lætum et inopinatum felicemque INTROITUM IN BELGIUM serenissimi archiducis Austriæ Leopoldi Guilielmi pro rege Hispaniarum . . . supremi gubernatoris, etc. etc. Lovanii, 1648.'

The dedication of the book to the magistrates and leading men of the city of Louvain, and the congratulation to Leopold which next follows, are both in Latin; the next and principal portion of the book consists of various sets of verses in the Flemish language, with anagrams on the name of Leopold and chronograms in both languages on his acts, exploits, and victories over the French, mostly in the year 1647, on behalf of the country of which he was appointed the governor. The author's name is not mentioned; it may be inferred, however, that he was a notary, and that D. I. P. were the initial letters of his name.

The following chronogram is printed in the conventional shape of a heart giving the year of the world which according to the opinion of learned men corresponds with the year of our Lord 1647, as explained thus—Chronicon ab orbe condito<sup>1</sup> usque ad annum MDCXLVII. Hoc chronographico reperies numerum 6847, juxta communem philosophorum sententiam.

Observe that in the anagrams which accompany the following chronograms, mingle, the one with the other, and derive their explanation from the latter. I transcribe them as they occur in the book, leaving out the Flemish verses. The hexameter and pentameter metre prevails, and the dates are 'Anno Domini.'

The Flemish verses which follow the above three chronograms conclude with four others in the same language, and they again are followed by these two in Latin concerning the burning and destruction of the town of Wavre by the Hollander's soldiers—

The 'censura,' on the last page, declares that the book contains nothing contrary to the Catholic faith or Christian morals.

This last chronogram deserves special notice, because it tells us the name of the author, which does not appear on the title-page. Without careful inspection of the original, and some knowledge of the devices adopted by authors to hide their names, a catalogue-maker would probably write against this production the word 'Anonymous.' The deceased was the Austrian Governess of the Netherlands.

Charles Alexander.

A TRACT in my possession contains, in twenty-four pages, a congratulation in Latin hexameter verse to Charles Alexander, Duke of Lorraine, for Maria Theresia, Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, the Supreme Governor of the Netherlands, on his return into Belgium after a long absence, and on his entry into Brussels with solemn pomp on 23d April 1749. Printed at Mechlin. The author's name does not appear ; the 'Approbatio' by the censor of books thus indicates it—'Conscripta à R. P. J. B. H. S. J. T. poetâ clarissimo, prælo luceque publicâ dignissimo censeo. Datum 19 Aprilis 1749.' This is another instance of the author hiding his name. The last four pages describe the emblems and triumphal arches which adorned the city of Louvain on the occasion of the Governor's return to the country; these chronogram inscriptions appeared on different arches. The first was put up by the Jesuits in the name of the Magistrates—

The next was at the Carmelite Monastery, under a statue of Maria Theresia—

Maria-Christina and Albert-Casimir.

A RARE little book, in my possession, concerning the arrival of their Royal Highnesses Maria-Christina of Austria and her husband Albert-Casimir of Saxony at the town of Herve, in the Duchy of Limbourg, on 13th June 1791, on their way to Brussels as Governors of the Austrian Netherlands, when the Emperor Leopold II. was their sovereign. It is a collection of the congratulatory odes and verses in French composed for the occasion by various writers, and of congratulatory chronograms inscribed on various buildings in the town and neighbourhood, but without any circumstance or narrative beyond what may be gathered from the verses and some scanty notes. The book consists of 112 pages octavo, and is a curious specimen of rough printing done at a small provincial town, Herve, where the events took place. At the period in question the town was on the highway to Liège from the eastward, and not far from that city; now the route by railway takes another course, depriving Herve of whatever importance it might have derived from its position. A note at page 13 mentions that the town was pillaged from the 7th to 9th August 1790, and many of the inhabitants massacred by the rebel 'patriotic' mob opposed to the Austrian government; the movement was eventually quelled by a regiment of Limbourg Volunteers, a circumstance alluded to in the chronograms. The territory of Limbourg is now included in the kingdom of Belgium.

There was a public reception of their Highnesses, with recitations of odes, and other rejoicings, in which the Royal College took a leading part, displaying or expressing much sincere affection. The chronograms commence at page 63; flattery and high-flown expressions are conspicuous in them; allowance, however, must be made for the habitual extravagant language which was then considered due to exalted personages, and for the popular joy at the deliverance from the fury of the insurgents.

The title-page is, 'COLLECTION DES POESIES, emblèmes, chronographes et autres inscriptions faites à l'occasion du passage de leurs Altesses Royales par le Limbourg, et de leur entrée triomphante dans la ville de Herve, le 13 Juin 1791.—Herve, chez F. J. Vieillevoye, imprimeur.'

The remarks which accompany the following chronograms are translations, or adaptations of those in the original.

This good chronogram, which was placed over the great gate of the Royal College, has been very much praised. It recalls the culpable daring of the rebels in effacing the inscription which had been the glory of the college, by giving to it the good and true name of Royal. The author of this distich and of the translation is the Abbé Van-der-linden, prefect of the said college, already known as the author of several poems. His zeal induced him to place over the said gate the words in letters of gold 'COLLEGIUM REGIUM'—

AUSU VESANI TEMERO FEDATA LEONIS, } = 1791
CHRISTINÆ OBUTU, LITTERA FVLVA NITET.

The French translation.

Lettres, que du Lion fouilla l'aveugle effort, CHRISTINE vous regarde, et vous devenez or.

i.e. The letters which were defiled by the rash daring of the furious Lion, become golden through the look (or gaze) of Christina.

This chronogram, not less admired than the preceding one, is by the same author. It was placed over a door in the college, with some other inscriptions—

NUPER DENTE FEROX, AQUILÆ PROSSERNITUR UNGUI, } = 1791
ET DOLET INFRENDENS TRISTIA FACTA LEO.

The French translation.

Ce Lion, dont la dent commit tant de forfaits, L'Aigle l'abbat; grince, et pleure ses excès.

i.e. The Lion (of Belgium), recently so fierce, is beaten down by the talons of the Eagle (of Austria), and, gnashing his teeth, bewails his evil deeds.

We wish to know who was the author of this good verse, which is also a chronogram. He is, they say, a clergyman in the country. Virgil and Horace, if they had made chronograms, could not have composed a better—

AUSPICIIS, LEOPOLDE, TUIS PAX ALMA REVIXIT. = 1791
i.e. Through thy auspices, O Leopold, gentle peace has revived.

This chronogram, which is one of beautiful simplicity, was put over one of the windows of the house of M. Lys, official and curé of Herve, among other inscriptions. It rendered justice to the clergy of Herve, who always prided themselves on their fidelity to their sovereign—

MARIÀ, ALBERTO VENIENTIBUS, USQUE FIDELIS HERVLÆ
CLERUS OVABAT. = 1791

i.e. The clergy of Herve, continuously faithful, exulted at the arrival of Maria and Albert.

MARIE-CHRISTINE, ALBERT GOVERNEURS GÉNÉRAUX DES
PAIS-BAS AUTRICHIENS. = 1791

i.e. Maria-Christina and Albert, governors-general of the Austrian Netherlands.

The following chronograms are not without merit. We owe them to M. Dehousse, 'mayeur' of Soiron, a truly estimable man, who, during the time of the 'patriomaniac' despotism, allowed to burst forth even at the peril of his life, his intrepid attachment to the august House of Austria—

SOIRON, LE GRAND, LE PETIT-RECHAIN VIENNENT OFFRIR LEURS

i.e. Soiron 'the great,' 'the little' Rechain come to offer their homage and united vows.

VIVENT MARIE-CHRISTINE, ET ALBERT DE SAXE, GOUVERNEURS
SI CHÉRIS! = 1791

i.e. Live, Maria-Christina and Albert of Saxony, our governors so cherished!

This good chronogram, and the three which follow, we owe to the zeal and talent of M. Bonnie, resident at Kelmes, near the wood of Aix-la-Chapelle. They were placed on the fine arcade erected at the entrance to the wood, where the province of Limbourg commences—

VIVE, SALUS PATRIÆ, CÆSAR LEOPOLDE; FIDELIS } = 1791

i.e. Long live Leopold! O great emperor and prince of the Netherlands.

This good chronogram, which has been deservedly acknowledged to be extremely happy, is due to the Rev. Father Henri, Franciscan friar at the monastery of Bolland. The next one is also by him—

AQUILA REDUX LEONEM EXOSCULATUR. = 1791
i.e. The Eagle (of Austria) returning, embraces the Lion (of Belgium).
 LUCET TIBI LUX VIVA, FIDELIS SEMPER HERVIA. = 1791
i.e. Herve, the always faithful town, shines as a living light to thee.

This chronogram, which is not one of the least, is by the Advocate Denoël, Sheriff of the village of Clermont. It may be read on the top of an arcade constructed at the bridge of the same name—
 CLARUS-MONS EXURGENS EXULTAT ET APPLAUDIT. = 1791
i.e. Clermont, elevating itself, exults and applauds.

This chronogram, and the four which follow, were composed by M. Vieillevoye, the printer (of the book). They were placed on the pretty arcade which he constructed along the road from Brattice, opposite to his house in the country—
 MARLÆ-CHRISTINÆ-REGIÆ, SPONSI QUOQUE FELIX HUC ADVENTUS. = 1791
i.e. The happy arrival hither of Maria-Christina the royal and her husband.

This pretty chronogram is by Listray, jun., formerly an officer of the Limbourg volunteers—

CHRISTINÆ ALBERTOQUE VENIENTIBUS; THUS TENERI CORDIS AMBOBUS UREBATUR. = 1791

i.e. Christina and Albert having arrived, the incense of a tender heart has been burnt for both of them.

This chronogram, which was put up at the Royal College, has been much praised, as well as the three which follow. They are by M. Poyart, formerly an officer of the Limbourg volunteers—

CHRISTINE AVEC ALBERT, ARRIVE DANS CE LIEU, PEUPLE D'UN CŒUR ZÉLÉ FAITES BRILLER LE FEU. = 1791

i.e. Christina with Albert comes to this place, the people with one heart light the bonfire. [?]

*i.e. Christina and Albert smile upon us; how many joys they bring to i.e. Christina and Albert having come, true love has shone like the sun.

 PRINCIPES OPTIMI, ISTIUS DIEI PROVINCIÆQUE LUX ESTIS. = 1791
i.e. O best of Princes, ye are the light of this day and of the province.

This chronogram is by Father Henri, Franciscan friar, of Bolland—EXISTIT AMICA PAX, CHRISTINÀ ALBERTOQUE DUCIBUS.<sup>1</sup>
i.e. Friendly peace is established, Christina and Albert being the leaders.

This and the three following chronograms are by M. Halleux,
 'mayeur de chefs et Hauts-Bans de Herve'—
 VIVANT MARIA-CHRISTINA AUSTRIACA, ALBERTUS SAXONIÆ
 REDEUNTES. = 1791
i.e. Long live Maria-Christina of Austria and Albert of Saxony, who have returned.

i.e. Let us all praise the grandeur of Leopold, his royal virtues prove our happiness.

VIVE LA JOÏE QUE CHRISTINE, CASIMIR INSPIRENT AUJOUR-

*i.e. Blessed be the joy which Christina and (Albert-) Casimir inspire

ALTESSES ROIALES, REGARDEZ; VOICI VOS GÉNÉREUX GUERRIERS
 LIMBOURGEOIS. = 1791
i.e. Behold, royal highnesses, see here your generous Limbourg warriors.

At page 74, among some 'omitted inscriptions,' the following specimen occurs, of what is variously called a serpentine or network verse, in hexameter metre, it is not a chronogram—

Qu t leth tr ir dol reple os unc ifico ux a ore rat.
 H n læt l ist nit deco

In plain Latin it reads thus—
 Quos tunc lethifico trux ira dolore repleat,
 Hos nunc lætifico lux ista nitore decorat.
i.e. Those whom barbarous fury had filled with deadly alarm, this day now adorns with joyful splendour.

At page 77, a few omitted chronograms are preserved; they were put up with other inscriptions at Herve—
 NOBIS, AMOR CERTUS DUX, GUBERNATORES CHARA LUX. = 1791
i.e. To us, love is a true guide, our governors are a beloved light.

<sup>1</sup> This chronogram is erroneous; it makes 1891.

UT RIDET FATI FELIX AURORA BEATI,
HERVIACOS ANIMOS RECREAT ATQUE FOVET! } = 1791

i.e. When the happy dawn of blessed destiny smiles, may it refresh and support the affections of the people of Herve!

QUANTA LUX TIBI, HERVA, FULGENT DILECTISSIMI GUBERNATORES! = 1791

i.e. How great is the light which thy most beloved governors shed on thee, O Herve!

The remaining pages contain the poems and verses by which much genial flattery was addressed to the royal personages by the inhabitants of Herve; they are mentioned as follows—

A poem, 'Couplets,' sung by the officers of the Limbourg Volunteers at the repast given by them on 23d June 1791, on the occasion of the arrival of their Royal Highnesses.

Sonnet by M. Prayon, a master-tailor at Herve, also a rondeau, and an acrostic on the names Maria Albert, by him. A note remarks, 'What might we not have had if this gentleman had completed his education!'

A poem on the fête of the Emperor-King Leopold II., 'Nayvet é Rustique ou Chanson Wallone,' sung in the fine tent which the people of Olne had prepared for the occasion. The poem is in the Walloon language, followed by a French translation, and this chronogram—

CHRISTINE, ALBERT, ÉPOUX BIEN ASSORTIS, VIVEZ LONG-TEMPS
POUR LE BONHEUR DES PAIS-BAS. = 1791

i.e. Christina and Albert, well-matched spouses, may you live long to be the happiness of the Netherlands.

An address by the town of Herve to Count Metternich-Winneburg, the Emperor's Minister-Plenipotentiary, on passing through Herve on his way to Brussels, on 5th July 1791.

Stanzas to the Countess, also to the Count, on the same occasion.

Ode to the Emperor Leopold on his coronation at Frankfurt, on 9th October 1790.

Extract from the Cologne Gazette of 8th July 1791, describing the reception of Count Metternich when he passed through Herve. He arrived at 8 P.M. and departed at 10; the rain interfered with a most elaborately arranged programme.

SOME FLEMISH BISHOPS AND CHURCH DIGNITARIES.

HE remarks at the commencement of the preceding chapter will apply to the present one, which may be taken as a supplement to what is contained in my book Chronograms in the way of congratulations and memorials to various Flemish Bishops.

A TRACT in my possession, printed at Louvain in 1655, contains in 24 pages the oration in Latin pronounced at the funeral of the Most Reverend James Boonen, Archbishop of Mechlin and Primate of Belgium, in the Cathedral church there on 3d August 1655. The author's name is Godefridus Wreys. The next six pages, in continuation of the event, contain this chronogrammatic lamentation and eulogy—

An Epicedium and other verses in Latin next follow, and on the last page the author of those verses brings his own expressions of sorrow to a conclusion in these words—

CHRONICON.

The chronograms will bear this translation, but without deriving any improvement from the change of language.

This day is to be deplored in the Christian world. The firmest anchor of faith, the truest hope of Belgium lies low. Let all good people deploring the sad fate of James give tears to the Archbishop. Let them grieve that the light and support of Belgium is gone. Bewail ye this fatality: the ornament of the Belgians thrice worthy of praise for his good government, the first in the honour of Belgium, a splendour in piety, the chief in the See of Mechlin, in manner, countenance, and heart a bishop, at the choir of angels the rising flower of pastors; the king deplores his end, his flock weeps for their keeper, sighing for their sweet leader. In the eighty-second year of his age dying to the Belgians and striving at heaven, he departed in the Festival sacred to Rumold [the patron saint of Mechlin].

James departed on the 30th day of June, the Atlas of his country, a pattern and light of faith to every one.

A SMALL quarto volume in my possession comprising 16 tracts in 140 pages, consists of gratulations and complimentary verses in Latin addressed to various persons, on their elevation to ecclesiastical dignity, or their acquiring academical distinction in Flanders, printed at Louvain and Antwerp, in various years from 1675 to 1680. Chronograms are plentifully scattered throughout the compositions, and many emblematical engravings illustrate the subjects. There is no pagination. I give the titles somewhat abbreviated.

Tract No. 1. 'Trismegistus Ægyptius, inscriptus Reverendo . . . patri P. Michaeli Verdiere, Insulensi, . . . S. Theologiæ Laurea in alma universitate Lovaniensi insignito, die 20 Novembris 1675.' The poem is a figurative allusion to his armorial insignia, 'Fundum rubrum in tres partes divisum, tres Aviculas et Triangulum continentia,' and alludes to the universal prevalence of the number three, commencing thus, and continues in the same metre—

TRIA SUNT OMNIA.

Quid Trismegistus? Doctis, Ter Maximus Unus,
Ægyptiis notissimus.

The poem concludes thus—

Hæc semel evacuent : Si nolint plura, recusent ;
Tria sunt, reponant, omnia.

Tract No. 2. 'Phosphorus, sive Stella matutina, dicata Reverendo . . . Patri P. Gregorio van Goorlaecken, Mechlinensi sacrae Theologiae professori, ejusdem in alma Lovaniensi academia Laurum reportanti.' Allusion to his Insignia 'quæ Stellam cum Libis deauratis continent.' The poem is in the same metre as the foregoing one, preceded by this text, 'Dominus illuminatio mea et salus mea.'—Psalm xxvi. 1. It concludes with this 'chronicon'—

LVX ET PROTECTOR MEVS, DEVS. = 1675

DIV VIVITE SANI ET INCOLVMES. = 1675

*Offerebat Professoribus suis colendissimis, Coursus

Printed at Louvain, Anno 1675.

Tract No. 3. Oratio funebris, of a priest of high rank in Flanders, 15th February 1675, contains no chronograms.

Tract No. 4. 'Agnus Paschalis dicatus reverendo . . . P. Philippo Tax, ordinis Eremit, S. P. Augustini, Agnum eucharisticum modo incruento et glorioso, in festis Paschalibus Deo Patri primum immolanti. Bruxellis . . . 12 Aprilis 1676.' Printed at Louvain, 1676. The poem, in hexameter and pentameter metre, has for its text the word 'Echo,' and concludes with this 'chronicon'—

PHILIPPVS DIVIS AGNVM SINE LABE OBTVLIT. = 1676

An acrostic next follows on his name 'Philippus' in hexameter metre, and after it this 'Chronicon'—

Anni, mensis, et diei.

After this is an Eucharistic Ode in short metre, and
'Chronicon.'

Tract No. 5. 'Eximio patri Domino ac Magistro nostro Christiano Lupo, Iprensi, . . . Theologiae Doctori . . . studii theologici regenti meritissimo, In Comitibus provincialibus Angiæ 25. Junii indictis, omnium suffragiis provinciali electo dignissimo.' Louvain, 1676. On the last page of the poem there is an hexameter acrostic on his name 'Lupus,' concluding with—

Chronicon.

LAVDETVR VIR PROFVNDE DOCTVS. = 1676

Tract No. 6. 'Tuba Cornea illustrissimi ac reverendissimi Domini Francisci van Horenbeke Bruxellensis, . . . decimi Gandavensium antistitis, etc., . . . per virtutem exaltata, poesi emblematicâ illustrata a Juventute studiosâ Gymnasii literarii M. P. Augustini Lovanii.

FRANCISCUS VAN HORENBE(K)E ANTISTES.

Printed at Louvain, 1677.

There are eight pages of poems in hexameter and pentameter metre, each with a classical or Biblical sentence for its programme, and followed by an emblematic poem, the latter concluding with an allusive line in chronogram, which I proceed to transcribe separately. The whole is a laudatory congratulation on Francis being made the tenth bishop of Ghent—

Louvain, 1677.

There are three pages of emblematic poems, alluding to the star in his armorial shield, and to his great virtues. Each poem concludes with a 'Chronotaxis,' which, only, I transcribe—

Mariæ Virginis Antverpiæ canonico, etc. . . nunc demum . . . octavo Antverpiensium episcopo dignissimo datus Gratulabunda juventute Gymnasii magni P. Augustini Antverpiæ 1677.' On the back of the title-page there is an allusion to his armorial device, and this anagram on his name, which are all frequently quoted in the poem—

The poem is followed by these three chronograms—

PRIDIE SIVE IN VIGILIA SANCTORVM HONORATVS.	=	1677

Tract No. 10. 'Insignia . . . Auberti octavi Antverpiensium episcopi emblematicè illustrata,' etc. There are eight pages of emblematic poems founded on his armorial devices, addressed to Bishop Aubert, of the foregoing tract, the eighth bishop of Antwerp. These chronograms occur—

AVBERTE VIRTVTVM ODORE EPISCOPATV FLORES.	=	1677
AVBERTE VANDEN EEDE FORTITVDO ES, AC SALVS ANTVERPLÆ.	=	1677

Tract No. 11. 'Reverendo . . . Anthonio Spanoge . . . monasterii S. Bernardi ad Scaldim . . . inaugurato sacræque infulâ decorato gratulatur et applaudit Gymnasium S. Augustini Antverpiense . . . die Aprilis.' The year date is only given by the chronograms on the last page. The poem is entitled 'Eccloga,' it is composed in the classic style of Virgil's eclogues, with many playful allusions to Spanoge and his armorial device on the occasion of his becoming abbot of Scaldim in the year thus indicated (the only chronograms in the tract)—

INTENDIS VIRTUTE TVA CLAVO OPTIME FAVOR = 1679
BERNARDI, ET CVLTOR : PRÆBET TIBI MVNVS ET AXIS. = 1679

Tract No. 12. 'Allusio emblematica ad arma gentilitia . . . Reverendi . . . Præsulis D. Anthonii Spanoge,' the distinguished person in the last-quoted tract. There are five poems with engraved emblems, alluding principally to his armorial devices (of which an engraving is given in the preceding tract); four blackbirds and a spread eagle are conspicuous in the quarterings. A motto and a chronogram accompany each emblem. They are as follows—

Motto.—Sicut pastor gregem suum pascet.—Isaiah xl. 11.

Emblem.—A crook stick or staff growing in a woody landscape.

These final chronograms terminate the last page—

EXIGVOS FOETVS ABBAS DIGNISSIME CLAVO = 1679

PANDIMVS INGENTI, GRATO HOS ROGO SVSCIPE VVLTV. = 1679

Tract No. 13. 'Vanitas aulæ et Inconstantia fortunæ exemplo duorum fratrum Melianthi et Clelii confirmata,' etc. . . . Louvain,

1679.—A short scholastic 'scene,' having some local allusion. There are no chronograms.

Tract No. 14. 'Illustrissimo ac reverendissimo D. Joanni Ferdinando van Beughem nono Antverpiensium episcopo, cum primum in cathedram suam solemniter induceretur. Applaudebat Gymnasium Litterarium S. P. Augustini Antverpiæ MDCLXXIX.' The poem is in hexameter verse, near the end this line occurs—

FAVSTVS ADES PRÆSVL, CANIMVS TIBI FAVSTA IOANNES. = 1679

And after the last line this chronogram follows—

IOANNES PASTOR DVLCISSIMVS INAVGV RATVR. = 1679

Tract No. 15. 'Allusio ad arma gentilitia . . . episcopi D. Joannis Ferdinandi van Beughem.' (The same, the ninth bishop of Antwerp, as mentioned in the foregoing tract.) There is an engraving of his armorial shield, on which seven roses form the principal device; and there are seven engraved emblems in which those flowers or the plant are the leading subject. All these are within grandly composed borders all of the same design, surmounted with the cardinal's hat and tassels, and beneath the motto VIRTUTE ET CONSTANTIA. The poems are in praise of the bishop, and are followed by these chronograms complimentary to him independently of what the poems express.

FERNANDVS VAN BEVGHEM AFFABILIS VIGEAT EPISCOPVS. = 1679

PRÆSVL VAN BEVGHEM IN ADVERSIS HEROICA GENEROSITATE GRATVS. = 1679

FERNANDVS SIT FELIX IN ÆTERNVM EPISCOPVS. = 1679

Tract No. 16. 'Reverendo in Christo patri P. Jacobo Baert, grammatices magistro dulcissimo Jesu pabulo in primitiis saginato. xix Kal. Febr. MDCLXXX.' The poem, in hexameter and pentameter verse, is preceded by this quotation—

Sicut unguentum in capite

Quod descendit in Barbam.—Psalm cxxxii. 2.

The allusions throughout are to the beard, as if the name 'Baert' were a corruption of the Flemish word 'Baard,' a beard, as in these lines in the middle of the poem—

<sup>1</sup> This chronogram includes the words of his motto.

A capite in Barbam hæc veniunt, a numine Christo
 Qui caput, hic in Te Mysta manere cupit.
 Es Barba, in Barbam descendit, dulciter unguens,
 Et caput, et Barbam, corque, fibrasque tuas. Etc. etc.

The allusion to the 'most sweet ointment' in the following chronogram, which comes at the end of the poem, is thus rendered intelligible—

FAVSTE VNGVENTO IESV DVLCISSIMO SATHIARIS. = 1680
 Applaudabant Grammatici.

Thus concludes the volume of tracts.

A N exceedingly curious, and probably a rare book (British Museum, press-mark 619. a. 14.), has this title, 'CARMELUS TRIUMPHANS seu sacræ Panegyres sanctorum Carmelitarum ordine alphabetico compositæ, cum novâ et extraordinariâ methodo, Authore R. P. Hermanno A. S. Barbara, Carmelitâ Discalceato Leodensis.' 1688. 8°. Pp. 30 and 371. The author's dedication of the work to John Lewis de Elderin, Prince and Bishop-elect of Liège, concludes with these chronograms—

LAVS EBVRONVM VIVAT, DECVS VRBIS ET ORBIS = 1688
 LEGIADVMQVE PATER, LVX PIA, VITA SALVS. = 1688
 IOANNES LVDOVICVS EBVRONVM, PATRIÆQVE PHÆBVS. = 1688

 VIVAT IOANNES LVDOVICVS EBVRONVM PATER. = 1688
 IOANNES LVDOVICVS VERE ERIT EBVRONVM PATRONVS. = 1688
 IOANNES LVDOVICVS EX ELDEREN. } = 1688
 PRINCEPS ELECTVS AC CREATVS.

A complimentary address next follows, occupying three pages, alliterative on the letter P, every word commencing with that letter. It begins thus, 'Principi piissimo, præsuli prætantissimo pontifici præclarissimo. Princeps piissime, Patere, paternis provolvar pedibus, perexiguas Panegyres præsentaturus, pro perenni pietatis pignore posteritati propalandas.' etc. etc. This is followed by some verses to the 'novus princeps Joannes Elderin,' and these two chronograms—

PRINCEPS NOVVS GAUDIVM ET EXVLTATIO NOSTRA. = 1688
 IOANNES LVDOVICVS EBVRONVM PHOENIX. = 1688

An address next follows, alliterative on the letter c; and a set of acrostic hexameter verses, five words in each having the same initial letter, and each verse commencing with a letter of the following sentence in regular succession, 'Vivat Joannes Ludovicus Baro ab Elderen episcopus et princeps Leodiensis.' And some echo verses.

The author then approaches the main subject alluded to in the title-page, and fills 371 pages with panegyrics in Latin prose, 34 in number, on various saints, doctors, martyrs, and virgins, who had belonged to the order of Carmelites; each panegyric is alliterative on one of the letters of the alphabet from A to V. The author tells his readers that there is 'nothing new under the sun;' a remark that may be applied to his own work, which is by no means the most remarkable of alliterative compositions, yet it may take good rank among that curious and laborious class of literary efforts. The work contains no more chronograms.

A TRACT of 14 pages folio, in the library of the Rev. Walter Begley, is a congratulatory panegyric addressed to Carlo de Spinosa Episcopus Tricalensis [Bishop-suffragan of Tricala=Calatabellota in Sicily?] and archbishop of Mechlin, bearing this title—

APPLAUSUS PANEGYRICUS

3446

On the back of this title-page is an engraving of the armorial shield of this bishop, quarterly, first and fourth argent, on a mount in base a 'thorn' tree supported by two wolves proper, a border charged with eight estoilles or; second and third sable, a fleur-de-lys argent having two intermediate leaves or; over all an escutcheon of pretence, the coat as in the first and fourth quarters. The whole is surmounted by a cardinal's hat with the crozier and mitre on either side, and beneath is this motto, 'Securitas in timore.' Allusions are constantly made to these devices, in the poems which constitute the subject of the tract, and mottoes, both chronogrammatic and plain with similar allusions, occur throughout the pages. The double chronogram, 'chronicon duplex,' occurs very frequently, such as the number 3446, which is twice the date 1723. The first set of verses, sixteen hexameter and pentameter lines, follows immediately after the title alluding to the coat of arms; it has this heading—

Allusio, ad Insignia Gentilitia, et Lemma; at the conclusion is this chronogram repeating the words of the motto—

SECURITAS IN TIMORE SACRO VERA PARIT ANTISTITI GAUDIA. =

1723

The subject is arranged in ten divisions called 'emblems' with a chronogram or chron-anagram for the theme of the accompanying poems; the hexameter and pentameter metre is used in all. The following extracts comprise all the chronograms.

The chief poem fills three pages and bears this introduction, 'Spiritus sanctus posuit Episcopos, regere Ecclesiam Dei, quam acquisivit sanguine suo.'—Acts xx. 28 (Vulgate Version).

Chronicon.

excelsis Dominus.—Ecclesiasticus xliii. 10.

The poem concludes with this chronicon—

STELLA LUX INTERNÈ HOMINIBUS SPLENDENS. = 1723

Then follows a quintuple hexameter acrostic on the name, etc., of the bishop, 'Vivat Carolus De Spinosa Episcopus Tricalensis,' which is preceded by this chronicon—

CAROLUS DE SPINOSA STIRPE ERIT ANTISTES VIGILANTISSIMUS. = 1723

After the acrostic the tract concludes thus—

Chronicon.

VIVAT CAROLUS PRÆSUL AMORE DEI NITENS = 1723

A PAMPHLET in the collection of the Rev. Walter Begley affords a conspicuous example of the late use of chronograms on the occasion of a public festival, viz., in the year 1817, when such use was fading away from notoriety in all parts of Europe, even in the little kingdom of Belgium, which at the time in question had just emerged from the political dangers of the great European war. For the period of six years preceding this date the archiepiscopal see of Malines had been vacant, 'sans Titulaire,' when through the intervention of the King of the Netherlands, and of Pope Pius VII., the Prince de Méan, a prelate who had gained high reputation in another diocese, was chosen to be the new Archbishop of Malines, to the great joy and satisfaction of the inhabitants of that city. His solemn entry was celebrated there on the 13th October 1817, by a festival and procession such as the Belgians had been accustomed to in former days. On this occasion the city was decorated with triumphal arches, and upon them, as well as on the public buildings and private houses, an unusual number of congratulatory and complimentary inscriptions were exhibited, a large proportion of which were in chronogram. At the conclusion of the festival they were of course removed, and all would probably have been forgotten but for the enthusiastic care of the anonymous producer of the pamphlet from which I make the extracts. The size thereof is octavo, in 40 pages. The title-page is as follows—<sup>1</sup>

'COLLECTION

DES PRINCIPAUX
CHRONOGRAMMES,

emblemes, vers, et autres inscriptions qui ont décoré la ville de Malines à l'occasion de l'entrée de S. A. le Prince de Méan, comme Archevêque de cette ville, le 13 Octobre 1817.

Hæc olim meminisse juvabit.

Virg. 1. Æneidos 203.

A Malines, chez P.-J. Hanicq, imprimeur de l'Archevêché.'

The chronogrammatic inscriptions were in three languages, some in Flemish, others in classic Latin, and a few in French. The descriptions of the decorations are in French. For the sake of brevity I omit most of the Flemish, and some few of the others, which, for us in the present day, do not possess much interest or meaning. The whole number in the book (and they are only the principal chronograms used on the occasion) is 140, from which I extract 113.

An arch at the Porte de Louvain bore the following—

PRÆSULI CIVITATEM SOLENNITER INGREDIENTI ERECTA. = 1817

And the statues of Abundance and Moderation were inscribed—

SPONSUS ADEST PRÆSULI MECHLINIA LÆTA RESULTA. = 1817

IS TIBI NUNC JACIAT SEMINA SACRA DIU. = 1817

Another inscription thereon was—

FELICES POPULI! A CÆLO DUCTORE POTITI!
QUI DAT COMMISSIS PABULA VERA SIBI. } = 3634 { 1817
1817

Another triumphal arch was inscribed—

LA VILLE DE MALINES À SON ARCHEVÊQUE. = 1817

The façade of the church of Hanswyck was inscribed—

PRINCIPALI DE MÉAN ARCHIEPISCOPO SVO INTRANTI OVES. = 1817

ECCÆ SACERDOS MAGNUS GREGI SVO GRATVS INTRAT. = 1817

GAUDEANT NUNC OMNES CHARI CIVES. = 1817

And this was in the interior, on a statue of the Virgin Mary—

SANCTA DEI GENITRIX SIS ARCHIEPISCOPO PIA MATER. = 1817

And these appeared in the Hanswyck street—

NUNC CONCUPIŦUM ADEPTI. = 1817

VIVAT ACCEPŦUS PRINCEPS DE MÉAN. = 1817

VERWILLEKOMT ALLE DEN AERTSBISSCHOP. = 1817

Among others this was on the house of a painter—

DEN SCHILDER WENSCHT DEN PRINS GELUK, = 1817

ALS BISSCHOP HEM DE VOLLE JUBEL-KRUK. = 1817

ALLE MYN VERVEN, BORSTELS, PENCEELEN
ZYN TOT ZYNEN DIENST. } = 1817

The next one alluded to the patron saint of Malines, St. Rumold—

SIS CONSTANS AC PATIENS UT ALTER RUMOLDUS. = 1817

These were on private houses—

CIVES NOBILI AC INSIGNI PRÆSULI DE MÉAN. = 1817

C'EST ENFIN AUJOURD'HUI, MONSEIGNEUR, QUE VOUS OUAILLES

VOUS SOUHAITENT LE BIEN-VENU. = 1817

On board the ship were 'young sailors' who chanted a long poem with a recurring chorus, in the Flemish language. The last words of the pamphlet are: May the epoch of the return of the peace and happiness which our ancestors enjoyed in their good old times, date from this festival, distinguished by its cordiality and its sincerity.

MISCELLANEOUS GRATULATIONS.

IN this chapter I bring into notice many chronogrammatic memorials of persons and events appertaining to Flanders and Holland, extracted from books of considerable variety, and not belonging particularly to the subjects of the two preceding chapters.

A BOOK in the British Museum Library (press-mark 11122. d. 5.-2), by F. H. Canisius, a priest at Bois-le-Duc, in Brabant, printed at Louvain in 1661, containing poems and epigrams addressed to various persons, enigmas, and logographs or word-puzzles, all in Latin, 'for the exercise of young people.' Several chronograms adorn the pages. The title is, F. Henrici Canisii Sylvæ-ducensis Ord. FF. Erem. S. P. Augustini S. Th. Licentiati. Fasciculus Laureatus comprehendens poemata LX. dignitati et honori diversorum inscripta, Diversis pro diversis ab eo composita, nunc sub auctoris nomine simul exposita: Quibus subjunguntur L. ænigmata, et totidem logôgraphi ad exercitium studiosæ juventutis. Lovanii, 1611. 8°. The following are selected extracts—

Poem i., to John of Austria,<sup>1</sup> on his arrival in Brabant as governor, concludes with this duplex chronicon—

HIC ADEST FLOS HEROVM. = 1656
BELLI FVL MEN ADEST. = 1656

Poem ii., to the same, concludes with—

VICTOR BELGAS MODERARE: = 1656
AC DA SALVTEM PATRIÆ. = 1656

---

FLANDERS—MISCELLANEOUS GRATULATIONS. 105

Poem iv., to John Cruesen, on his being made archbishop of Mechlin and primate of Belgium, concludes with—

DIGNA ES COLVMNA PATRIÆ. = 1657
 PIA SACERDOTVM GLORIA. = 1657
 DELICIVM. = 1657

Poem vi., to John van Wachtendonck, bishop of Namur, concludes with three chronograms, two being in the first verse, and one in the second (the inserted bars divide the chronograms)—

INCLIIITA, IO, TANDEM || CONDIGNÆ GLORIA MIITRÆ = { 1654
 = { 1654
 DONATA EST: PLANÈ COMPETIT ISTA TIBI. = 1654

Poem ix., to John Chrysostom vander Steere, abbot of the Præmonstratensian monastery of St. Michael at Antwerp—

SPLENDE, O STELLA MIHI: || PATER O CHRISOSTOME { = 1652
 SPLENDE: = 1652
 ME CLARO, ANTISTES, RADIO || DIGNARE CLIENTEM. { = 1652
 = 1652

Poem xix., to F. Philip du Beyne, a reverend, pious, and wise man, concludes with these allusions to his wisdom—

SAPIENS DEVM PLACAT. = 1656
 SAPIENS MVNDO PLACET. = 1656

Poem xx., to Jacobus Paludanus of the Præmonstratensian order. The motto 'omnibus' runs through the poem, which concludes thus—

MI JACOBE PALVDANE! = 1657
 OMNIBVS DONIS CLARE, = 1657
 PROFICIAS AD SALVTEM. = 1657

Poem xliii., to a learned physician, concludes with—

FLORE IN MEDICINA. = 1653

Poem xliv., to another learned physician, concludes with—

DOCTRINA PER PHILOSOPHIAM, = 1653
 GLORIA E MEDICINA = 1653
 TIBI JAM CLARÈ DATA. = 1653

Poem xlv., to another physician, concludes with—

ARTEM STVDIOSÈ COLE. = 1656
 A MEDICO SALVS. = 1656

I omit eighty other chronograms, because the sense and meaning of them would be very obscure if separated from the verses with which they are associated. They consist of allusions to armorial bearings, anagrams on names, repetitions of the words of mottoes to poems, and of words interwoven with the lines of epigrams, etc., all of which would necessitate transcripts of long poems, curious indeed when read from the book itself, but which would be uninteresting as extracts even when enlivened by the chronograms.

The logogriffs alluded to in the title-page extend from p. 219 to p. 263, and finish the volume. They do not afford any chronograms.

APPLAUSES BY MEMBERS OF THE COLLEGE OF GRAMMONT.

A CURIOUS book, and probably a rare one both in England and on the Continent, belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, contains a great number of short devotional poems and couplets, all in Latin, each having for its theme an anagram expressing some circumstance or sentiment connected with Christianity, or the ceremonial of the Romish Church. The second part of the work, in the same poetical form as the first, has rather a biographical character; the anagrams and verses relate to persons either renowned in current European history, or locally eminent. The anagrams are the leading feature of the work, and are exceedingly ingenious; but as they do not belong strictly to my subject, I omit them except where the words of which they are composed are interwoven with chronograms; indeed the chronograms, which are scattered through the book, seem to have been used by the authors as occasional ornaments. The work was put together by one, though written by fifty-one members ('rhetores') of the college of Saint Adrian at Monte Gerardi (Grammont) in Flanders, and was published in 1651. The title-page is as follows—

Rhetorum

THE DUKE CHARLES ALEXANDER CELEBRATES THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE LOUVAIN CANAL.

THE commencement of the construction of a canal from Louvain to the Scheld, in the presence of the Duke Charles Alexander, Governor of the Netherlands, was celebrated by public rejoicings, triumphal arches were put up in the streets, and among other decorations the town-hall ('court-house') was handsomely adorned and bore the following chronograms and many other appropriate inscriptions; the whole is described in a rare tract of twelve pages, belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, bearing this title, 'Inscriptiones curiæ Lovaniensis; cum serenissimus princeps Carolus Alexander Lotharingiæ et Barri Dux, etc. etc., supremus Belgii gubernator, inter festivos civium applausus, Lovanii Primitias operis Novo

Canali in Scaldim, arrepto ligone, daret hac 9 Februarii 1750.' On the back of the title-page is this very long chronogram—

À CCC. ANNIS CURIA LOVANIENSIS STRUI CÆPIT; CURIA
JURE SVO JUBILAT; CURIAQUE JUBILANTE, CAROLUS
LOTHARINGUS, BELGII GÜBERNATOR GENERALIS (INTER FESTIVOS APPLAUSUS) ITER APERIT NOVO CANALI; CUI
GRATULATUR SENATUS POPULUSQUE LOVANIENSIS. } = 1750

i.e. At 300 years after the court-house of Louvain began to be built,<sup>1</sup> the Court rejoices in its own right; and at the rejoicings of the Court, Charles [Duke] of Lorraine, Governor-General of the Netherlands (amongst festive applauses), opened the way by a new canal; him the Senate and people of Louvain congratulate.

As if in contrast with the foregoing chronogram, containing 72 numeral letters, the same date, 1750, is made, in that which follows, by the smallest possible number of such letters. On page 4 a picture is described, representing a hand holding the diploma of the undertaking, bearing the chronogram motto—

i.e. This undertaking at length gives satisfaction.

The accompanying narrative mentions that on the preceding 25th of January the city was freed from the French yoke, and on the 23d of the next January (i.e. 1750), the Prince conceded the canal, and gave the diploma; both events are indicated by the following chronograms, with marginal notes—

Note to the first line.—Hac die concessit dux Carolus canalem.

Note to the second line.—Inde læti commissarii redierunt Lovanium, 25.

XXV. JANUARI ANNI PRÆTERITI GALLICUS HOSTIS ABIIT

XXIII. JANUARI ANNI PRÆSENTIS, URBS LOVANIENSIS RECIPIEBAT À PRINCIPE CANALEM.

i.e. On 25th January of the past year the French enemy retired from Louvain: on 23d January of the present year the city of Louvain received the canal from the prince.

Passing over several ordinary inscriptions, we reach, at page 6, the mention of a representation of Duke Charles's chariot, with this inscription, which tells us that the mounds and ditches, recently constructed for warlike purposes, are now useful for the new undertaking—

'ECCÈ LABORANDO REMANENT. = 1750

Aggeribus nuper Martis, vallisque fuerunt,
Nunc Grudiis aptæ, tempore pacis, erunt:

ECCÈ LABORANDO REMANENT; HAS CESPIE PLENAS = 1750

Aspirat vestro Dux Carolus ipse labori,
Datque dabitque animos, qui patefecit iter.'

And at page 11, a ship described as sailing in a south wind, 'Austro flante,' with the motto 'Spirantibus Austris' (a play on the word Austria), is associated with this long figurative chronogram in hexameter and pentameter verse—

AUSTRIACÆ VOLUCRES PANSIS DANT CARBASA PENNIS,	}	= 1750
AUSTRIA FLAT; NAVI VENTUS ET ILLE FAVET.
ANCHORA SIT CAROLUS, QUI CIVES PROTEGIT ISTOS.
FELIX, I FELIX, CURRE RECURRE RATIS!

i.e. The Austrian birds (eagles) provide fine Spanish linen sails by their extended wings, 'Austria' (the wind from the south) blows, and that wind is favourable to the ship. May Charles be the anchor which protects these citizens. Go, happy, fortunate ship, make speed and return.

Under a shield of the armorial device of Louvain—

ECCE MODO FLOREBO.	= 1750
FLORENDO CRESCAM.	= 1750

The tract concludes on page 12. 'Civitas Lovaniensis cernua dexterâ manu Cor inflammatum gerit, cum hoc Lemmate alterâ chartam, cum hac inscriptione,

HÆC POEMATA DO CAROLO.	= 1750

Then follow some verses complimentary to the Duke Charles.

MR. BEX IS EULOGIZED ALPHABETICALLY.

THE note-book of a friend supplies the following, which was transcribed at the Royal Library of Brussels. It is an alphabetical eulogy on Henry Bex, a magistrate ('consul') at one of the towns in Flanders, from which we learn that he was born in 1594, and died on 13th March 1663. Each line begins with the letters of the alphabet in proper succession. The title is as follows,—'Elegia in funere Domini D. Henrici Bex consulis tunc regentis omnium luctu civium vitâ functi.'

A poem of about 40 lines, hexameter and pentameter, is followed by a chronicle, with the initial letters of each line following in alphabetical order, thus—

In the Royal library at Brussels, there is, as I learn from the notebook of my friend the Rev. Walter Begley, a book containing more than a hundred chronograms. The title is, 'Generale berzaemeling van alle de jaerschrifter, verzen te Waer mede de stad Gend heeft verçierd geweest op den 25 August 1793 ter onthaelinge van den zeer geleerden Har Joannes Baptista Hellebaut'—'Prys. vier stuyvers.' A general collection of all the chronograms, verses, etc., with which the town of Ghent was adorned, on 25th August 1793, on the reception of the very learned Mr. John Baptist Hellebaut.

THE SIEGE OF VALENCIENNES.

A RARE tract (pp. 12), belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, contains a gratulation addressed to John of Austria, Governor of the Netherlands, by the Jesuits at Brussels, on his victory over the French at Valenciennes, and the capture of the town. The title-page is, 'Serenissimo principi Joanni Austriaco Valencenarum vindici inter ignes triumphales publicos lætitiæ et obsequii testes cum veneratione applaudit collegium Soc. Jesu Bruxellis 23 Julii MDCLVI.' The 'fireworks' thus alluded to are not particularly mentioned. The poetry describes in figurative language the triumph of the Austrian 'star and sun,' and an engraving represents a night attack on the town under the auspices of the 'Miraculous Hosts' which were brought there from Brussels.<sup>2</sup> The Latin poem contains no chronogram; but at the conclusion thereof, on page 11, are the following :—

THE SACRAMENT ROBBERY AT BRUSSELS.

THE reader will find, at page 263 of my book on Chronograms, a notice of the 'Sacrament Robbery and Miracle,' and a large number of chronograms thereon. I have now to add the result of some further researches into the subject. The several books and editions of works to which I have had access, including condensed narratives, are very puzzling. They are in both the Dutch and French languages, and of various dates. Some are probably reprints, with new or later title-pages, of that which no doubt is the most important one by Cafmeyer. The copy which I used, belonging to the Rev. W. Begley, has on the title-page an error in the author's name, where it is distinctly printed 'Oafmeyer,' a small but a very misleading misprint. The Dutch, and apparently the same edition in the library of the Society of Antiquaries of London, has the name correctly and distinctly printed. I can only offer as an explanation that in the progress of printing the letter C had dropped out, or in some way failed to make its mark in print in many of the title-pages, and that the vacancy had been filled up by hand, stamping in the letter O instead of C. It will easily be understood that the circumstance, however it may have occurred, would mislead any one searching a library catalogue. My French edition of 1720, printed at Brussels, 'premiere edition' (the volume also contains the second part, dated 1735), gives the author's name correctly; and so likewise does the British Museum copy, which differs in some respects from the other editions.

A folio volume in the British Museum, press-mark 9917. k., comprises three separate works on this subject—1st, a description in the Dutch language, of the jubilee held in 1670; 2d, the jubilee festival held in 1720, also in the Dutch language, by Cafmeyer; 3d, the festival held in 1735. The chronograms in the two last will be found in my former book; I proceed to notice the 1st, the jubilee of 1670, and all the chronograms therein.

The title-page begins, 'Brusselsche Eer-triumphen,' etc., and is without author's name or date. The introduction is dated 31st July 1670, and signed Jacques Stroobant. The engravings of the triumphal arches are by G. Bouttats, and differ from those of the 1720 and 1735 festivals. The last page is 128. The chronograms are at

 This explanation follows, 'Carolo secundo Hispaniarum Indiarumque rege, Brabantiaë duce, integerrimè avitæ justitiæ filio, quod longævum in pane corruptibili miraculum, ineunte quarto seculo, conservet, tertio jubilante.' And lower down the page is, 'Flamma combussit peccatores.' Psalm cv. 18 (Vulgate version).
- Page 121. These inscriptions are mentioned—
 MIRACVLOSVS TRINIS HOSTIIS DEVS. = 1670
i.e. God miraculous in the three hosts.

IVBILANS DONAVIT ET DEDICAVIT S. P. Q. B. = 1670
i.e. The Senate and people of Brussels gave and dedicated this [statue of Saint Michael, the titular saint of Brussels].

There are ten engravings in this portion of the volume. There should be twelve, including a frontispiece, as I find from the inspection of a copy, as a separate volume, No. 2283 in the catalogue of the 'Beckford' library sale, July 1883, at Sotheby's.

The remainder of the British Museum volume now under notice has been described in my former book on Chronograms.

The circumstances and narratives are alluded to in Notes and Queries, series 2, vol. v., pp. 294, 406, 457, and 508, indexed under 'Host.' There is no further mention of them in the succeeding volumes down to the end of 1881; nor any mention of the chronograms, which appear to have been overlooked by the contributor of the 'Notes.' Among the explanations it is stated that, after the circumstances of the robbery, etc., the Hosts were deposited in the chapel of St. Gudule, where they remained in oblivion until 1405. One of the engravings represents a devout young man praying, and a ray of light shining towards him. This led to the re-discovery of the Hosts, and they were thenceforth preserved in ostentatious notoriety. There seems to have been a repetition of the robbery at several places, with much the same results according to local legends. The engraving alluded to is in the Dutch and French editions, and is attached to chapter xv. of the latter.

LESSUS GALLICUS.

A POLITICAL brochure (British Museum, press-mark 161. b. 64. catalogued under 'Austriacus'), 8°, relating to the retreat of the French from their possession of the Netherlands, probably one of the results of the treaty of peace signed at Aix-la-Chapelle between all the leading powers of Europe in 1748. The full title-page is given below; it may be thus translated—

A French wailing for the departure of the French from the Netherlands, re-echoed by a Frenchman at the Belgians. And a paraphrastic dismemberment (?) of the same for the departure of the French from the Netherlands, made straight at the French by a Belgian. To which are added a Belgian jubilation and other verses. Published probably at Brussels in 1748 (?). The Latin title is as follows—

Lessus Gallicus

in Gallorum e Belgio discessu

 Ejusdemque in

Gallorum e Belgio discessu
 Paraphrastica dimembratio (sic) per Belgam ad Gallos directata; quibus accedunt
 Jubilatio Belgica, aliaque metrica.

The contents are about seventy sets of Latin verses, or epigrammatic poems, full of allusions to the events of the war and politics, which are obscure to the modern reader. A few chronograms are associated with the verses. At page 25 is the following chronogram—

AUFERTE GALLOS PERFIDOS
SIC BELGICIS DE FINIBUS;
UT PACE PRÆSIT BELGICIS
REGINA VICTRIX GENTIBVS. } = 1748

And at the conclusion of some verses, 'Ad Comitem Saxoniae,' is this chronicon, in which almost every letter is a numeral—

At page 27, at the end of the verses 'Jubilatio Belgica ex allata pace, Gallorumque discessu'—

Chronodistichon.

The epilogue verses conclude thus—

VIVAT AUSTRIA.

PHILIP THE HANDSOME.

PHILIP I., King of Spain, called the Handsome, was the son of the Emperor Maximilian I. and Mary Duchess of Burgundy. In my book Chronograms, published in 1882, at page 123, a faulty chronogram, intended to mark the year of his birth, 1478, is given. I am now enabled to give the right version of it, and so to correct an error that has caused some trouble to other writers. The faulty one runs thus (in plain letters)—

'Omnibus acceptus regnat bonus ecce Philippus.'

When this is read with reference to an infant child, the epithet 'good' might be questionable, he might not eventually deserve it, and he had not as yet begun his reign; the right version is as follows—

oMnIBVs ACCEpTVs REGNET noVVs ECCE PHILIPPVs. = 1478

i.e. Lo! accepted by all, may this new Philip reign.

The epithet 'new,' instead of 'good,' is applicable to the newly-born prince, and the aspiration that he may reign accepted by all the dominions and dependencies of his father and mother, both the German, the Spanish, and the Burgundian—(Austria, Spain, and Flanders)—is entirely applicable to the discordant circumstances which prevailed at the time.

HOLLAND.

} = 1747

<sup>1</sup> This anagram is imperfect as to the number of letters; the first part contains 145, the second 149. Many anagrams more 'prodigious' than this have been made, and some truly marvellous both for length and for being at the same time chronograms.

The anagram may be thus translated ; it shows how the words may be decomposed and rebuilt, so as to apply equally well to the prince and to his high position in the seven united provinces. The chronogram alludes to the day as known in the Roman Church Calendar.

Long live William Charles Henry Friso, the most eminent Prince of Orange, and of the ancient race of the illustrious Counts of Flanders, who were afterwards Princes of Nassau !

By the seven united provinces of Holland he is, by the common applause of all, elected and sworn Vice-Commander-in-Chief and Admiral. May he again defeat our enemies by his wisdom and his strong hand.

On this third day of May, called the ' Finding of the Cross,' he arises who shall give freedom to the Hollanders, through the Cross.

On the 17th March 1734 he married the Princess-Royal of England, Anne, the daughter of George II. A medal was struck at Amsterdam bearing this inscription to mark the date—

EVGE EVGE

A medal struck at Amsterdam to commemorate the birth of their son has this inscription—

VARIOUS CHRONICLES.

NOW present to the reader some extracts from certain historical 'chronicles,' which are curious both for the chronograms therein and for the remarks of the authors thereof, tersely expressed in the Latin language. A perusal of the books themselves is, however, needful, in order to arrive at a due appreciation of those remarks; I give a few verbatim examples in what follows. The books are, I believe, rare, and it is certain that they are very little known.

THE BELGIAN CHRONICLE.

A BOOK printed at Arras in 1614 may be conveniently mentioned here as the Belgian Chronicle of Ferry de Locre; a copy is in the British Museum (press-mark 591. e. 8.). 4°. The title is 'Ferreoli Locrii Paulinatis chronicon Belgicum, ab anno cclviii. ad annum usque mdc. continuo productum Tomi tres.—Atrebatii, mdcxvi.' The book commences, according to a prevailing custom, with complimentary verses addressed to the author by his friends, containing some anagrams, and at the conclusion of one set of verses bemoaning his death is this chronogram—

LoCRIVS OCCIDIT (HEI!) DOCTÆ LVGETE CAMÆNÆ. = 1614
(Signed) Gulielmus Riverius. G. T. F.

i.e. Locrius alas falls, mourn ye learned Muses.

The author was a priest at Arras, in the province of Artois, the son of Philip Locre, as we are thus told, 'Philippus Locrius, auctoris parens.' In his time, the territory and places mentioned in the chronicle were mostly under the dominion of the Dukes of Burgundy, and known as Flanders, or by the more ancient name of Belgium; the history runs in the same direction, though the territory is now divided between France as at present constituted and the modern kingdom of Belgium.

Chronograms are scattered throughout the book, and are nearly all of the author's own composition<sup>1</sup> (and when otherwise he says so). Several at the end of the book have already appeared in my former work on this subject, and are not repeated here. Observe that, according to Flemish custom, the letter D = 500 is not counted. There is only one exception. The following extracts comprise only the events which are marked by chronograms.

In the year 1189 Elizabeth, the wife of Philip Augustus, King of France, died, after giving birth to twins. The author composed some verses, concluding with this 'chronicon'—

SI ITA TIBI FVTVRVM ERAT, QVID NECESSE FVIT
TIBI THORVS, ELIZABETHA? } = 1189

In the year 1206, Archbishop Guido of Rheims died at Ghent, 'Guido archiepiscopus Remorum Gandavi moritur, cui ad Sancti Bavonis adjectum est hoc elogium.' (Evidently the Archbishop was not a favourite, if the following verses be true)—

Grandis Gandavo debetur honor, quia Bavo
Sanctus prostravit illum, quem nullus amavit.

Hujus anni chronographicum.

Nonne CHRONOGRAPHICVM? sat habes, est nosse potestas. = 1206

At page 388, and under the date of the year 1226, the death of Louis VIII. of France is mentioned, in whom, and in his offspring, the good qualities of Charlemagne were to be recognised, the author concludes thus—

Non dimittamus Ludovicum sine chronographo,
VT LoDoICE TIBI Crescit hæc, istaqve proles;
QVANTA SOLO, ET CÆLIS TE GENERASSE PVtas? } = 1226

In the year 1516 the Dominican prior at Arras died uttering these words, which are a chronogram of the date—

DeVS MeVS ES TV, ET SPERO IN TE. = 1516

At page 401 there is a list of the seven rightful Counts of Artois prior to the cession of that territory to Count Robert by the King of France at the date thus indicated—

ARTESIAE QVÆRES QVANDO SVVS EST CoMES? AVDI:
AB REGE HANC QVANDO FRATRE ROBERTVS HABET. } = 1237

At page 411 the death is mentioned of Count Robert, in the year '1249,' in the flower of his age, for he had scarcely attained his thirty-sixth year, in battle against the barbarians at 'Manzora,' on the Nile. The chronogram, however, makes 1239—

QVO RAPERIS GENEROSE CoMES? TE PROPRIA QVÆRVNT:
NE TVA BARBARICO FVNERA QVÆRE IVGO. } = 1239

In the year 1329, it is mentioned that Joan ('Joanna IV. Artesiæ comes'), the widow of Philip, King of France and Navarre, came in succession to the throne of Artois, and in the month of January 1330 was removed by poison, having reigned but a few days. The author made this chronogram—

ANNVM IANE APERIS; APERIT SVA IANNAQVE REGNA:
IANE BEATVS INIS, HÆC CITA FATA CAPIT. } = 1329

At page 463, Joan II., Countess of Artois, wife of Eudo, or Odo, or Otho, Duke of Burgundy, died in 1347, on whom the author wrote the following—

CVR MIGRAS PRINCEPS IOANNA? EN, CERNE; BRITANNVS
FRENDENTI NIXV PER TVA RVRA FVRIT. } = 1347

In the month of November 1361 died Prince Philip, 'Philippus princeps noster anno ætatis xv., vix puber.' The author made this chronogram—

ATER VBLQVE COLOR: NIVIS HOS DEPONE NOVEMBER:
IN TANTÀ AVDAXQVE ES VIVERE CLADE DIV. } = 1361

In the year 1382 died Margaret, Countess of Artois, widow of Count Louis, 'Ludovicus Nivernensis'—

SAT LVCTVS HIC FVDISTI, CASTISSIMA TVRTVR:
ASTRIS BEERE PERENNITER. } = 1382

In the year 1383 died Louis VIII., 'Ludovicus Maleanus,' Count of Flanders, Duke of Brabant, etc., and late in his life he had added the titles of Artois and Burgundy. The author writes concerning him, 'Liberas illegitimos habuit non paucos.'

In the year 1404 died Philip the Bold, Duke of Burgundy and Count of Artois. 'Obitus sui habe hanc Prosopœiam chronographicam'—

FATIS LVXO QVIBVS? QVID GALLICA SCEPTRA REVISO?
EN, IBI NE MORIAR, VIRGO BEATA VETAT. } = 1404

The battle of Agincourt, on St. Crispin's day, 25th October 1415, was accompanied by great slaughter. The author says, Cladis Azincurianæ vidi tale chronographicum—

CRISPINI MVLTO GENS DESTRVIT ANGLICA FRANCO. = 1415

In the year 1419, on 10th September, Prince John of Burgundy was slain by Charles the Dauphin of Vienna. The author describes the event at page 500, and proceeds thus—

Quod tibi nomen apud tuos hâc tragædiâ parasti, Delphine? Audi chronicon, quod alibi me legisse memini, CADENS BVRGVNDVM, A GALLIS DELPHINVS VT AVDIT?

FEX, FAX, NEX, LATRO, LERNA, TIRANNVS, APER. } = 1419

at nos pariantes, chronographicè pariter adlusimus,

O! CoMES: O TE TE, CVI FIDIS? NONNE PVELLO? } = 1419
 PRO PATRE NON GESTAT PECTORA FIDA PVER.

Thus, it appears, the author remembers to have read the first, and to have brought forth (or composed) the second chronogram.

At page 512 is the narrative of the peace made between Philip, 'Philippus princeps noster,' and Charles VII, King of France. The author concludes thus, 'De ista pace, in archivis Atrebatium hi reperiuntur versus, ab istius ætatis imperitiâ non prorsus abhorrentes.' The first line gives the date—

ILLVXIT NOBIS CLARI PAX LVCE MATTHÆI, = 1435
 Pro quâ Francisci debent cum laude lætari:
 Atrebatî primò sonat hæc vox, voce jocundâ.
 Christus laudetur, cui cuncti subjiciuntur.

In the year 1467, on the 17th calends of June, died the Duke of Burgundy, Philip the Good, at the age of 71, and in the forty-ninth year of his reign. The author wrote an epitaph that might be put on his tomb, containing this chronogram—

QVIS SILET, INQVIRIS, SVB DIVITE MAVSOLÆO? } = 1467
 SVB CVIVS PEDIBVS DIDICIT SVBDERE GALLVS.

At page 534 is mentioned the death of Duke Charles the Bold, at the battle of Nancy. The author 'finds' this chronogram concerning him—

O MIHI SI LICEAT ALIQVANDO, RENATE, RENASCI! } = 1477
 DITABOR SPOLIIS CAVTIOR IPSE TVIS.

At page 541 is mentioned the marriage of Mary, Duchess of Burgundy, with Maximilian of Austria, on the 22d of August—

CLAMOR FACTVS EST; ECCE SPONSVS VENIT: EXITE. = 1477
 And the birth of their son Philip in the following year is thus mentioned,—'Nono Kalendas Julii, horâ tertiâ pomeridianâ, Brugæ filius Maximiliano ex Mariæ nascitur, cui nomen inditum Philippus; ejus natalem hoc rudi metro, numeralibus literis quidam expressit,'<sup>1</sup>

OMNIBVS ACCEPTVS REGNAT NOVVS ECCE PHILIPVS. = 1478

The death of this Duchess Mary in 1482 is thus commemorated in chronogram composed by Petrus Magnus, a priest of Brussels, whom the author mentions as a poet 'meritò nominandus'—

GESTIT EQVO MARIA ALIPEDES PRÆVERTERE CERVOS; } = 1482
 VI CADIT, AC BELGIS FVNERA FLENDIA PARIT.

At page 550 it is mentioned that in 1484 the monastery Caricampensis (sic) had John Le Franc for its president. He erected a beautiful cross at the principal door, and this chronogram was written to mark the date thereof—

SVM SIC AVXILIIS LE FRANCOË EXSCVLPTA IOANNIS. = 1491

At page 564 is mentioned the death of John of Arragon (the only son and heir of King Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain), of acute fever, in the flower of his age, on the 4th of October 1497, having in the year before married Margaret, whom he left 'sextam jam mensem gravidam reliquit.' The death of her husband was a great shock to her. The narrative proceeds,—Quæ, auditâ mariti morte, tanto animi dolore percussa fuit, ut ante diem infantem peperit, qui in ipso vitæ limine statim occidit.' Hinc—

IOANNI LVCTVS VBI PVLLA HISPANIA FVDIT

At page 574 it is related that Prince Philip (of Flanders), having overheated himself at a game of ball, partook of too much cold drink, and thereby took a fever, and died at Burgos, in Castile, at the age of 28. He was buried there in a sumptuous alabaster tomb, his heart being sent to Bruges in Flanders. Ottho Egmondus wrote this chronogram on the event—

DVM REX CASTELLÆ LVCTATVR FLORE IVVENTÆ,
E SVITÂ BVRCIS FEBRE PHILIPPVS OBIT. } = 1506

On the same page is this memorial of the death of Christopher Columbus, on 20th May 1506—

Item Christophorus Columbus primus novarum terræ partium et insularum inventor in Hispaniis vitâ decedit. Illi hoc chronographicum dedi epitaphium ;

CHRISTOPORVS COLVMBVS,
GENVANVS
OCCIDVI ORBIS INVENTOR
E VIVIS
ABIIT, NON OBIIT. } = 1506

In the year 1519, the Emperor Maximilian having died, Charles I., the King of Spain (and Prince of Burgundy), resigned his crown ; hence this chronogram—

SCEPTRA REGENDA TVO PIA FATA DEDERE NEPOTI :
CORPORA CONDE SACRO MAXILIANE SOLO. } = 1519

At page 589 is mentioned the defeat of the army of Francis I., King of France, at Ticino, in Italy, by the Austrians, on 25th February, in the year 1525. Concerning the victory of the latter this verse is extant—

ARMA AQVILÆ VINCVNT LILIA CELSA TRVCIS. = 1525
In the margin, 'VEL DVCI.'

Also this ancient one—

AQVILA CONCVLCAVIT LILIVM. = 1524

A marginal note explains that this took place in the year 1524, before Easter. According to the chronology used in France at this period, the year was reckoned to commence at Easter.

In the year 1527, on the 6th of May, Rome was taken by the army of the Emperor Charles v., commanded by Charles Borbonius,<sup>1</sup> who, whilst fighting before the walls, was killed by a leaden bullet. This chronogram expresses the event—

ORBIS, ROMA, CAPVT, HÆC VT TIBI FVNERA BORBO, } = 1527
 QVID GELIDÆ EFFICIENT EFFERA CORDA PLAGÆ?

In the same year, at Valladolid, the future King of Spain, Philip II., is born, the son of the Emperor Charles v. and Isabella. There were great rejoicings on the occasion, and this chronogram is extant—

GRATA DEO SOBOLES, GENERIS SPES CLARA PHILIPPVS, } = 1527
 NASCITVR, AVSTRIACO LAVREA PRIMA PATRI.

At page 603 the narrative alludes to the events of war, and particularly to the misfortunes and defeats of the French in the Burgundian territories. The year of the triumph of the victors is marked thus by the words of Psalm lxxxvi. 2—

ECCE ALIENIGENÆ, ET TIRVS, ET POPVLVS, ÆTHIOPVM, HI } = 1537
 FVERVNT ILLIC.

In the year 1539, calends of May, died Elizabeth [Isabella], the wife of the Emperor Charles 3—

POSCIT FVNEREAS VBI CÆSARIS AVLA CVPRESSVS; } = 1539
 PVLCHER VERNANTES ABSTRAHE MAIE ROSAS.

In the year 1547 the whole of Germany was subdued by the Emperor Charles. Upon this 'Cæsarean victory' the author made this chronogram—

CÆSARIAS AQVILAS VT TRVX GERMANIA SPERNIT, } = 1547
 COGITVR, AT LENI, SVBDERE COLLA IVGO.

In the year 1553, 'Teruanum,' the chief town of the 'Morini,' in the province of Artois, was besieged and taken from the French. The author remarks that it is incredible what a quantity of French blood was shed there, as expressed in this couplet—

Nunc seges est, ubi erat Morinum, resecandaque falce

Luxuriat Franco sanguine pinguis humus.

And these chronograms give the date—

<sup>3</sup> The Emperor Charles v. married Isabella in 1526. She was the mother of Philip the husband of Mary Queen of England, and died in May 1539.

In 1553 and 1554 the imperial forces besieged and took other towns in the region about Artois. The author made these chronograms on one town destroyed and another one built—

In 1557, the French having broken the treaty of peace, the war recommenced, and they were defeated at Quintinopolis (St. Quentin) on St. Laurence's day, the 20th of August. The author made this—

LVX SACRA LAVRENTI, GALLORVM SANGVINE SORDET, } = 1557

In the year 1558, on the 21st September, the Emperor Charles v. died—

In 1562 died Franciscus de Glen, bishop of Henin-Liétard ('Henniensis'). His epitaph there concludes thus—

ILICET AVFVGIT, SÆVOS EXOSA TVMVLATVS; } = 1562
 EXCIPI S HANC GRATO SED BONE CRISTE SIN.

In 1565 the Scheldt river was frozen, denying the way to ships, but affording it to horses and wagons. The author goes on thus in sapphic verse—

Anno 1566. PATRIA OB DVCTO TENEBROSA SOMNO } = 1566
 NON POTEST ACRES COHIBERE BELGAS;
 INFERI DONEC REFERET CRVENTA

Sic enim annum hunc ordior, exordium ad omnem futuris temporibus calamitatem. The narrative then adverts to the war and rebellion which desolated the country, and introduces this chronogram, an adaptation from 'Judas Maccabeus'<sup>2</sup>—

SANCTA TVA CONCVLCATA SVNT ET CONTAMINATA. = 1566

In the same year, on the 22d August, the infanta of Spain, Isabella Clara Eugenia, was born, and the author makes this—

NASCERIS, O PRINCEPS! ARDET FERA BELGICA BELLO, } = 1566
 AT NON SIC; MODÒ TV VENERIS IPSA DEA.

Several of the chronograms contained in the next of the author's pages have appeared in my former work, and need not be repeated here. I pass on to

The assassination of Henry III. of France, on 27th August 1589, is marked by this chronogram as a retribution for the foregoing one—

With this I bring to a conclusion my chronogrammatic extracts from the chronicle of Ferry de Locre.

THE SAXON CHRONICLE.

A FOLIO volume, the Saxon Chronicle, by David Chytræus (British Museum, press-mark 157. g. 9.), is contained in about 1250 pages. The title is, 'Davidis Chytræi, Historici clarissimi SAXONIA, ab anno Christi 1500, usque ad annum MDC, nunc tertium recognita' (and continued down to 1611, with indexes). Leipsic, 1611.

There is a fine printer's device of St. Christopher on the title-page and colophon. The chronograms occur mixed with, and forming part of, the text of the chronicle, and they are sometimes the only means used for giving the dates. Although the chronicle is a history of events more or less concerning Saxony, the chronograms themselves chiefly commemorate the affairs of Poland. To avoid misinterpreting the author, I give extracts in his own words and quaint expressions, correcting, however, many misprints which appear in his chronograms.

The author now treats of some of the bishops in Saxony, and here he mentions Bernhard, Bishop of Münster, who resigned in consequence of the mandate of Pope Pius v. against the licentious habits of the clergy.—'Nunc in Diœcesibus aliquot Saxoniae, Episcoporum successiones attexam. Bernhardus enim Monasteriensis episcopus, Pii v. pontificis mandatum de concubinis removendis, clero diœceseos suæ in synodo præponens, canonicorum animis jam antè adversus se exacerbatis, et nunc magis etiam, instinctu concubinarum, odiis inflammatis, post paucos dies episcopatum resignat (ET CVM SCORTA VELINT LVGENS ELECTE RECEDIS.) Cui postridie resignationis, Joannes Comes ab Hoya = episcopus Osnabrugensis, princeps ingeniosus, eruditus, eloquens et munificus, a Collegio substitutus est.' (This chronogram is faulty, because the letter D=500 is not to be counted; it would otherwise make the impossible year 2067. The chronogram indicates in what way the bishop himself was the more faulty.)

The circumstance is thus narrated; the chronogram was made by his nephew—'Hoc anno dum in thermis Carolinis noctu decumbens, cuidam nobili familiariter noto, cubiculi ostium improbrus pulsanti e lecto surgens aperit, ex insidiis ab illo confossus est, 12 Junii, cujus nefandæ cædis eteostichon a Christophoro Cæsare, fratris filio, scriptum extat;'

Page 616. The chronicle for 1572 describes the massacre of the Huguenots on the eve of Saint Bartholomew, the 24th of August, at Paris and other parts of France, under the phrase 'Nuptiæ Parisienses,' the festivities which were then being held on the marriage of Henry IV. Bourbon, King of Navarre with Margaret of Valois, daughter of Catherine de Medicis who was accused of being the instigator of the plot. The chronicle describes the slaughter of hundreds of persons in their houses and beds, neither age nor sex was spared. It describes the slaughter of Caspar Castilioneus<sup>1</sup> Amiralius, and the horrible mutilation of his body; and proceeds in these words—'Quod his ipsis verbis Gallicus scriptor commemorat. Mortui famam pontificii carminibus etiam probrosis lacerare conati sunt, inter quæ imprimis argutum est Jo Auratæ epigramma. <sup>1</sup> This Admiral Gaspard de Coligny was one of the principal leaders of the Huguenot party; a proposal has just now been put forth (March 1884), calling upon all sympathizers in the acts and sufferings of that party to contribute towards the expenses of erecting a monument to his memory at Paris. Meetings are being held in England in support of the movement, and the Times newspaper of 26th March gives, in a leading article, an epitome of historical and other explanations.

Here ends the narrative. The date of the massacre is given in my former book, pp. 222 and 365, where the above chronogram is applied to another person.

Page 821. The chronicle for the year 1590 describes a very protracted winter, so that the trees in the region of the Baltic were scarcely in leaf in the month of May. Great heat and drought followed in June, July, and August, the herbage was burnt up, and rivers and springs became dry. 'De quâ insolenti hujus æstatis ariditate, eteostichon quidam composuit;'

Page 983. The chronicle discourses about the coronation of Stephen, King of Poland, and the insignia of Poland and Lithuania, and mentions a great emblematical figure of a knight in full armour on horseback, 'Eques Cataphractus, magni Ducatus Lithuanie stemma, et Aquila Polonica, versibus artificiosis ornata, cujus memoriam conservatum non indignam chronicon in fine anni 1579 testatur.'—'In ense, majoribus characteribus, significatur annus, quo potentissimus Stephanus feliciter inauguratus est, 1576.' (The sword was inscribed with this chronogram, giving the date of the coronation)—

The chronicle then proceeds, 'A pollice dextra equitis, per cassidem, ejusdem artificii versus duo, pacis cum Gedanensibus compositæ annum continet 1577,

Then follow other metrical lines, which are inscribed on other parts of the 'Eques' and his horse, some in the form of acrostics, but not in chronogram until we come to one on the bridle, which gives the date of the slaughter in battle at Dantzic, 'In freno carmen in literis majoribus cladem Gedanensium comprehendit;'

VERA PVTO REGIS LAVS EST, DOMVISSE SVPERBOS. = 1577

(This chronogram is in my former book on Chronograms, p. 184.)

Then follow other regal emblems with verses; and afterwards at page 984 the Royal Eagle is mentioned, with this among other explanations, 'In diademate, seu corona Aquilæ, versus inscriptus, anni 1576, quo princeps amplissimus Stephanus in regem est coronatus, index est;'

The second part of the volume is the continuation of the chronicle of Chytræus down to the year 1611. The only chronograms relate to two German universities, Giessen and Leipsic; the reader is referred to another page of the present volume, where those places are mentioned.

THE BOHEMIAN CHRONICLE
PROCOPIUS LUPACIUS.

A BOOK, said to be a rare one (British Museum, press-mark<sup>9315</sup>. aa. 2), 8°, bears this title, 'Rerum Bohemicarum Ephemeris, sive Kalendarium historicum : ex reconditis veterum annalium monumentis erutum. Authore M. Procopio Lupacio. Pragæ, Anno 1574.' The dedication is signed Procopius Lupacius. This particular copy is in pigskin binding, with clasps, and the initials of a former owner, P. S. Z. Z. 1596, stamped on the outside. No pagination, but probably 600 or 700 pages. It is a chronicle of events in Bohemia, arranged under months and days, and under each day are arranged the events according to the successive years of their date. The chronograms are not printed as such, with taller date letters, but only in plain letters, and generally in italics.<sup>1</sup> There is, indeed, no indication that they are chronograms except a word, such as 'Eteostichon' or 'Numerale,' preceding the couplets of hexameter and pentameter verse, and but for that guide, they would not be recognised by an unpractised reader. I have put them into due form and tested the resulting dates by reckoning up the intended date letters. Some of the chronograms, however, are wrong, if the dates stated in the chronicle are correct. In those instances where it is not possible to introduce satisfactory emendations for the one, or to confirm the other, I have alluded to the discrepancy as an incorrigible original error. As the names of the writers of the chronograms are mentioned, it is quite safe to say that the chronograms which express dates much earlier than that of the book were made a long time after the dates which they are designed to represent. The names of those writers are thus given—Eteostichorum Scriptores.

Johannes Balbinus, Reginæ Hradecenus.
David Crinitus, ab Hlawaczowa, Nepomucenus.
Bernhardus Sturmius Paczkovinus.
Johannes Rosinus Zatecenus.

And their initials are placed after each chronogram accordingly.

The words of many of the chronograms in this group are enigmatical, so far as they are designed to indicate the period of the year in which an event happened. That indication is frequently effected by an allusion to the relative position of the sun and a particular star in a constellation, or to the sun's place in one of the signs of the zodiac on a particular day, facts well known to astronomers, while the general reader is not enlightened by the astronomical allusion. Classical phrases or names are sometimes used, such as Janus for January; also the reckoning of time by lustrums or periods of five years. The same fanciful method of indicating the particulars of a date may be noticed in chronograms obtained from other sources. They are not peculiar to this chronicle. The following examples will direct the reader's attention to these points:—

Burianus completes 'quatuor lustra,' i.e. he died at twenty-five years of age.

Carolivicus,—Lachesis cuts his thread 'ubi quarta dies Jani fulget,' i.e. he died on 4th January.

Maximilian died on a day indicated by 'Claviger,' i.e. the constellation Hercules.

Præmyslus died in January, indicated by 'bifrons Janus.'

Korland died 'ubi lux Brigittæ dilabatur,' when the day of St. Bridget departed, i.e. the evening of the 1st February.

Maximilian died 'Februi lux nona bis orta,' i.e. the 18th of February.

Mathias was born 'sex ubi ter Februi luces et quinque,' i.e. the 23d of February.

Charles v. was crowned 'octo ter Februa luce intente,' i.e. on 24th February.

Michalovicus died when 'lassus equos agiles per pisces Phœbus agebat,' when tired Phœbus drove his swift horses through the fishes, or when the sun was passing through the zodiac sign Pisces, the 6th of March, in the evening.

Gregorius died 'lux ubi currebat martis septena,' i.e. the evening of the 7th of March.

Wenceslaus 'apricas satus est in auras, martius ut nonâ fulsit ab axe vice,' or 'clauserat auroras ut ternas Martius et sex,' i.e. he is produced (or born) into the sunny air of day when March had shone from the sky for the ninth turn; or when March had closed three and nine mornings. In plain English, he was born on the 9th of March.

Ferdinand I. is born when 'ubi aurea velligeri cornua Phœbus adit,' when the golden sun approached the horns of the fleece-bearer (the zodiac sign Aries, the ram). This also points to the Golden Fleece, the badge of the Spanish-Austrian family. The day is the 10th of March.

Albert becomes Emperor on a date indicated by the same figure of speech, 'ubi sol lassabat vellera ovis,' when the sun had sunk to the fleece of the sheep, the sun's place in the zodiac on the 20th of March.

Glatovia is burnt when 'in Maio Titan ter quarto egit iter,' when the sun had made his 12th journey in May, the 12th day of that month.

Maria of Austria is born 'Phœbus ubi æstivi tetigisset brachia cancri,' when the sun had touched the arms of the summer-season crab, or when the sun had just entered the zodiac sign Cancer, the 21st of June.

Schounberg died on the 24th of June, St. John the Baptist's day, 'agnifero lux sacra,' the day sacred to the bearer of the lamb, one of the emblems of that saint.

Ferdinand died 'Jacobi lux ubi splendet,' when the day of St. James shone, the 25th of July.

Maximilian was crowned 'lances Phœbus ab axe subit,' when the sun went under the balance, i.e. into the zodiac sign Libra, = 20th September.

Codicillus died 'Lux ubi Mauricio currebat sacra,' when the day sacred to (Saint) Maurice was passing, the 22d September.

Ferdinand came to the throne 'ut pugnax fulsit rutilanti scorpius axe,' when the angry Scorpio shone in the ruddy sky, the 24th October.

Ladislav died 'sol ubi Chironis tangebatur signa biformis,' when the sun touched the sign of the two-formed Centaur (as the zodiac sign Sagittarius is represented), the 23d November. And as mentioned in the preceding chronograms, 'sunt Ladislav tribus lustris annisque duobus exactis,' there were to him three lustrums and two years, meaning that he was 17 years of age.

The apparent position of the sun in the zodiac, as a means used some centuries ago for indicating the day of the month, has in the present day become useless, in consequence of the gradual changes in the relative motions of the heavenly bodies. The old astronomers who adopted that artificial arrangement called the signs of the zodiac, made practical use of them, but now the positions of the signs are considerably distant from the constellations which once agreed with them. For instance, the sun now enters the constellation Aries at the end of April, instead of the 19th of March. The following table is that which was in use at and before the period when these chronograms were made, i.e. about the sixteenth century. It shows the times when the sun entered them, according to the observations of the old astronomers—

The sun enters	Aries	♈	March 19-21.
"	Taurus	♉	April, about 20.
"	Gemini	♊	May, about 20.
"	Cancer	♋	June 20-22.
"	Leo	♌	July, about 20.
"	Virgo	♍	August, about 20.
"	Libra	♎	September, 20-22.
"	Scorpio	♏	October, about 20.
"	Sagittarius	♐	November, about 20.
"	Capricorn	♑	December, about 20-22.
"	Aquarius	♒	January, about 20.
"	Pisces	♓	February, about 20.

The variations of two or three days of the sun entering the sign arise from the Leap-year. It caused me much trouble to acquire this tabular statement, simple as it may appear; elementary astronomical treatises and encyclopædia articles were searched in vain. I obtained it at last from a friend who is well known among astronomers and architects for his scientific attainments in each science.

Jesus Christ was born 25th December, according to this chronicle, 'A.D. a conditione mundi 3962 (sic); anno urbis conditæ 753; anno imperii Julii Octaviani 29; anno Herodis E.N.I. alienigenæ, Judæorum regis 36; Coss. EXHAVRIT QVA LVCE SYRVS VENERABILE TEMPLVM, } = 3963
FACTVS HOMO DEVS EST, SALVA VIRAGO PARENS. (B. S.)

This date, 3963, differs forty-one years from that usually adopted to express the Christian era, viz., 4004 anno mundi. It is in accordance with one of the many systems of chronology or calculation of that period for which there is no exact historical date.

Vitus Fayer, Sittavensis (of Zittau?), a renowned senator and musician, died on 26th December 1551. His epitaph commenced thus, 'Quicquid fuit mortale Fayri, conditur in hoc sepulchro; spiritus gaudet polo.' And concluded with this eteostichon—

Jacobus Camenicensus, a celebrated preacher and author, died at 'Mezercii,' on 30th December 1565, 'piè ex hac vitâ emigravit.'

A. B. C.

A VERY curious octavo book in the British Museum (press-mark 1331. a.—1, 2.); there is also a copy in the Bodleian Library, 'Das A. B. C. cum notis variorum Herausgegeben von einem, Dessen Nahmen im A. B. C. stehet.' Leipzig and Dresden, 1703. In two parts. Under each letter of the alphabet, in its turn, there is a collection of allusions, alliterations, anagrams, chronograms, puzzles, and other fanciful uses of the letters. The following extracts will give the chronograms, and show some of the other curious features; but a transcript and translation of the whole book would be required to display all of them. The book is badly printed, and blunders are too common, at least I have found it so in the chronograms. The work has very much the character of a chronicle. The chronograms relate chiefly to events in the history of Hungary, and to the campaigns which led to the expulsion of the Turks from that country.

The vowel letters, A E I O U, are sometimes found thus in old German books, and are said to indicate some circumstances in Austrian history (see my book on Chronograms, p. 141). The following extract from the work now under notice will go far to exhaust this particular puzzle. I have never before met with it:—

Austriæ	Et	Imperii	Offensæ	Volucres.
Augur	Ergo	Iste	Ostentum	Vesanum.

The five vowels also occur in these words—

AcROatERIUm. ApObAtERIUm. MOnAstERIUm. Also in the name JEhOVAh.

At page 190 these chronograms appear; the first is on the coronation of the King of Hungary on 23d May 1611—

<sup>2</sup> This couplet makes 1691; it was probably intended to make the same date as its companion. There are many printer's errors in the original, some of which baffle all attempts to set them right.

Here end the epigrams about the fortune of war at Buda. The original is very badly and carelessly printed; I have corrected several manifest errors. Several more remain, for which the anonymous author of the book is responsible. I cannot venture to correct them.

At page 195. When Sweden, having held possession of the part of Prague called the Kleinseite, were defeated there, the Jesuits of the place made this chronogram to mark the date—

VICIT ANAXAGORAS (Königsmarf) PROH DVX TRVX MœNIA PRAGÆ. = 1648

In the year 1540 there was a great drought, and all lakes and ponds were much reduced or dried up; thereupon this verse was made—

EXCICCATA LEVIS CVR FLVMINA CERVE REQVIRIS? = 1540

The year in which the town of Zittau was entirely burnt is thus marked, INCENDIVM ZITTÆ. = 1608

The year of the 'Spanish obedience' in the Netherlands is found in these words—

SAVLE QVID ME PERSEQVERIS? = 1567

See Chronograms, page 534, and Acts ix. 4.

At page 27, part 2 of the book now under our notice, it is remarked that some persons have, by means of sundry letters of the alphabet, assumed the power to prophesy when the Day of Judgment would happen. The following is an example—

Wenn man wird geschrieben diese Summ,
VENI VELOX JUDICIUM, = 1684
ALS DENN DES VVAHREN VATERS SOHN } = 1684
AVSZIEHEN VVIRD IN SEINER CRON.

At page 71 of part 2 commences an alliterative 'oration,' extending over seventeen pages, every word commencing with the letter P, and entitled PAPA PARIENS! Anno M.DC.XC. At page 76 this passage occurs, 'PAVLVS PONTIFEX PORCOS PROCREAT PAPISTICOS POPVLOS PRIMATES PLEBEIOSQVE PLANE PERVERTENTES. = 1540 perinde: Putrida, proh, pomus producit putrida poma! Propterea princeps Palatinus prorsus piissimus prædictos progrunnientes porcos papales,' etc. etc. The context refers to the Pope having elevated low and improper persons to high dignities. This rather applies to Paul IV., who reigned from 1555 to 1559. The date above mentioned, 1690, may be the year in which the scurrilous composition was written. The chronogram date, 1540, comes within the reign of Paul III., 1534-1549, and the satire may have been intended for him.

At page 264, amongst other anagrams, there is this one on the Emperor Leopold, with verses and chronograms, as follows—

Leopoldus primus imperator semper augustus.

Anagram.

Sol es! Pater gaudiorum plurium! spes posterum!

Sol es LEOPOLDUS clarus,

Et spes alma posterum!

At page 276 of part 2 these miscellaneous chronograms are recorded—

'Von dem Brande zu Greiffenberg, AM PFINGSTDIENSTAGE
BRANDE<sup>1</sup> GREIFFENBERCK AB.' = 1603

'Und von dem Brande zu Glogau, MELZER zVND ET GLOGAV AN. = 1610

The year 1611 is also marked by these words—

NON CONFVNDAR IN AETERNVM. = 1611

SIC ABEVNDVM. = 1611

DOMINVS VOCAT. = 1611

The year 1643 is marked by this, MARS ANGLICANVS VIDIT VICIT VINXIT HISPANOS. Thus it is in the original, but evidently wrong; the chronogram makes 1788. The book now being quoted was published in 1703. Perhaps the intended date was 1588, and the event the destruction of the Spanish Armada in that year.

And these give the dates of various persons and circumstances—

RVDOLPHVS, REX ROMANVS. = 1575

RVDOLPHVS, IMPERATOR AVGVSTVS. = 1576

MATTHIAS INDVPERATOR CORONATVS. = 1612

NOVA ACADEMIA GIESSENA. [See Chronograms, p. 314.] = 1607

DANCKELMANN IST LOSS. = 1701

DANCKELMANN BLEIBT GEFANGEN. = 1701

Some one having bought a bottle, or some such vessel, commemorated it by this inscription. He might have found something more appropriate—

VIVITE FELICES DOMINI FAVTORES. = 1670

The disastrous inundations which happened in Europe in 1670 were marked by these chronograms. The first is taken from Psalm lxxxvi. 10—

TV ES DEVS QVI FACIS MIRABILIA. = 1670

TERRIBILITER MVNDVS HOC ANNO NATABAT IN AQVIS. = 1670

 INSIGNITER MVNDVS HOC ANNO LABORAT IN AQVIS. = 1670

At page 278 some further chronograms are given. The first relates to the taking of Münster in Westphalia by the French, and the second to the same event; the two dates, however, do not correspond, and no explanation is given. Eboanus Hessus is said to be the author—

VIVE MONASTERIO CAPTA FRANCISCE TVLISTI } = 1540
 PRIVOLA PANNIFICI SVB JVGA REGIA OPES. }
 REGIS CARNIFICIS, VATIS, SARTORIS IN VNO } = 1535
 CIVI MONASTERII VVESTPHALA FACTA LEGES. }

The next refers to the peasant war in Germany, the most prominent one of the period was in 1524. This chronogram makes 1625; and there is nothing in itself to point to any particular event of war, but it probably gives the date of one of the wars which are so designated in the histories of Germany—

ET CIVES IPSOS CONFVNDERE TENTAT ET ARCES } = 1625
 RVSTICA VESANA CONDITONE COHORS. }

On the Landgravine Sophia of Hesse. Surely there must be something wrong in this chronogram, which makes only 1248—

HASSLE OPES SOPHIE PATRIASQVE EXPOS CIT HABENAS, POSCERE OPES PATRIAS IVSQVE PIVMQVE SINVENT.

On Henry III., King of France, who was assassinated on 28th August 1589 (see Chronograms, p. 116)—

CVLTER CLAVSTRALIS REGI EXITIT EXITIALIS, } = 1589
 VEXETVR QVISQVIS MONARCHIS ERITE EQVVS INIQVIS. }

The next chronogram is accompanied by this observation, 'the Bavarian war is thus noticed by Sleidan the historian.'

CAPTVS ERAT GALLVS: COEVNT CVM RVRE COHORTES. = 1525

This is given, but without any particular application. See Chronograms, p. 529. The words are adapted from Luke xxiv. 29—

BLEIB BEI VNS DENN ES VVIL ABEND VVERDEN. = 1578

The following is said to mark the date when Frederic v. met with some losses in battle at Prague. The precise events, however, are not explained, and the chronogram points to none—

TIBI CHERVBIN ET SERAPHIN INCESSABILI VOCE PRO- } = 1517
 CLAMANT. }

The same chronogram is given in Chronograms, pp. 196, 224. Any event of the year 1517 might be marked by it.

At p. 141 of part 2 there is the following specimen of acrostic hexameter verse on the name IESUS, in the style occasionally to be met with in books from the German press. The two concluding hexameter and pentameter Leonine verses have no apparent connection with them. They are said to relate to Frederic I., King of Denmark, whose name is made by the conspicuous capital letters—

Inter cuncta micans Igniti sidera cœli
 Expellit tenebras E toto Phœbus ut orbem
 Sic cæcas renovat IESUS caliginis umbra
 Vivicansque simul Vero præcordia motu
 Solem justitiæ Sese probat esse beati

It. FREmit in mundo DEprimit alta profundo
 Rigidum flectit CUSpis mucroque plectit.

i.e. As Phœbus, shining among all the stars of heaven, drives away darkness from the whole world, so does JESUS repair the blind shadows of darkness, and vivifying, at the same time, the heart with a true impulse, proves himself to be the Sun of Righteousness to the blessed.

Frederic goes about, he rages, he brings down to the deep the lofty things that are in the world; the spear bends the stubborn one, the point punishes him. These translations are offered with some hesitation, especially the latter one. The degree of clearness which should be present in an ordinary Latin composition is here sacrificed to the necessity of the acrostic, and obscurity is the consequence.

Among other curious conceits in the book, there are examples of the number of changes to be made by a certain set of words (at p. 210), such as 'Lex, Grex, Rex, Res, Spes, Fus, Thus, Sal, Sol, (bona) Lux, Laus, || Mars, Sors, Fraus, Fex, Styx, Nox, Crux, Pus (mala), Vis, Lis.' These are said to produce 39,916,800 changes. These words read as two hexameter lines, by dividing them where the bars are inserted. The first is a catalogue of good things, the second of bad.

A SIMILAR treatment of the alphabet is seen in another curious little book (British Museum, press-mark 12315. a. 21). 'Gepflückte Fincken, oder Studenten-Confect, auffgetragen in zwoen trachten, Jede von 100 Gerichten,' etc. etc. 'A b c d e f g h i k l m n o p q r s ss t u w x y z. Im Jahr—

BEZÄHL DV MICH NVN ITZT FVR BAAR.'

Published at Franckenau. 12°.

There are no more chronograms. But the book contains much curious matter, and occasionally some quaint verses, such as at—

The engraved frontispiece represents a lady and three men seated at a feast. The book is catalogued by all the letters of the alphabet as they occur at the foot of the title-page. There is no author's name. The subject is a collection of students' pseudo-philosophical talk, enigmas, equivoques, and puzzles, at a supposed festive table, in a mixture of the German and Latin languages.

EMPERORS OF GERMANY.

MY former work contains a large amount of chronological 'applause' offered to some of the German Emperors, enough, I imagined, to exhaust that part of my subject. Further research, however, has brought to my notice so much more, that I am induced to think there is yet more in existence worth searching for. The discovery of all that I have already put into print was gradual and unexpected, and obtained from books, etc., more or less scarce or hidden away in libraries. It is so also with all that will form the present chapter; and it is only with the aid of a friend who loves old books that I am enabled to make known much of what follows concerning the German emperors.

I commence, in order of date, with the Emperor Leopold I. It is evident from the chronograms that he was married three times, a fact that I could not fully confirm by reference either to the leading biographical dictionaries, some historical works, or to encyclopædia articles. This caused me some trouble. At length I found, at p. 463 of that huge volume, Anderson's Royal Genealogies, among the complex pedigrees and tables of genealogy, the following particulars, which will be found useful to elucidate the chronograms :—

Leopold Ignacius, emperor, was born in 1640, elected emperor in 1658, died in 1705.

He married, first, Margaret Theresia, the Infanta of Spain, on 12th December 1666. She died on 12th March 1673, aged twenty-two years.

He married, secondly, his cousin, Claudia Felicitas, on 15th October 1673. She died on 8th April 1676, aged twenty-three years.

He married, thirdly, Eleanora Madelene Theresia, on 14th December 1676. She died 19th January 1720, aged sixty-five years.

A VOLUME which I met with in the town library of Frankfurt-on-Main (press-mark E. 199.—4°), lettered on the back 'J. A. Pastorii Laurus Actorum publicorum,' is a collection of political tracts on events in the east of Germany and Hungary in the seventeenth century. The only chronograms therein relate to the emperor Leopold I. and his election in 1658. They are contained in—

Tract No. 27, by Petrus à Streithagen, entitled, 'Electio Leopoldi Austriaci,' etc. On the back of the title-page is this 'chronodistichon' of the year of his election as emperor—

O BONA FATA ORBIS ! LATIAS LEOPOLDVS HABENAS
OBTINET, ET SPRETO PROSPERA MARTE PARAT. } = 1658

Tract No. 30 (without author's name or imprint) contains these chronograms, which are followed by a set of epigrams founded thereon. The first set of chronograms forms the title of the tract.

On page 3. Epigramma in primum chronologicum—

This phrase is combined several times with the words of the epigram which follows it.

On page 4. The second epigram has this title—

This phrase is in like manner combined with the epigram.

On page 5. The third epigram has this title and combinations—

<sup>1</sup> Observe that this and the six following chronograms are the same as those which compose the title-page to the tract. The last one is not the same as the last one on that page.

- On page 8. The seventh epigram has this title, etc.—

- On page 8, and last, the tract concludes thus—

- The words of the Vulgate Version are, 'Orietur in diebus ejus justitia et abundantia pacis donec auferatur luna.' The English Bible version, lxxii. 7, is, 'In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.'

I OBTAINED, in Germany, a broadsheet applauding the marriage of the emperor Leopold I. and Margaret of Spain in 1666. The size, including the ornamental border, is 20 inches by 15½. It is probably very rare. I therefore present the reader with the accompanying facsimile (on a reduced scale), only a slight notice of the contents is consequently needed. The emblematical engraving contains several complimentary inscriptions, alluding to the defeat of the Turks before Vienna and in Hungary. Two of them are chronograms. There is also a chronogram in the printed heading, and one at the foot, which is also a trifling anagram, hardly more than a transposition of words. They are as follows:—

- ANNO DOMINI SALVATORIS IESV CHRISTI. = 1666
i.e. The festivities carried on at Vienna on December, in the year of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Observe that the day of the month is omitted. The sheet must have been issued in anticipation of the event, or my copy is, perhaps, an 'early proof.'
- SALVE AVSTRIACA DOMVS. = 1666

A BOOK (British Museum, press-mark 1315. k.), folio, has this title, 'Fürsten-Spiegel, oder Monarchia dess hochloblichen Ertzhauses Oesterreich.' By Johann Jacob von Weingarten. Prague, 1673. The narrative is in German, an historical compendium of the acts, etc., of the German emperors, kings of Bohemia, and other potentates of the house of Austria. It is dedicated to the emperor Leopold I.

At page 31, the assassination of Wenceslaus III., king of Bohemia, is narrated. His conduct had caused him to be hated by his subjects. He was assassinated at Libyssa (Ghebseh) by Conrad de Possenstein in 1306, and died without posterity, the last direct male descendant of the dynasty of Præmyslus. The date is thus given—

EHEV! NON SICCO SICARII FERRO IN VENCESLAO III.
LIBVSSÆI. È RVSTICO POSTERI. INTER QVOS PRINCIPES XXIII. } = 1306
REGES VII, INTERREGES XIII. ERANT. IIII. AVGVSTI DESIERVNT.

At page 57 the 'blind Wenceslaus' is mentioned as having founded a church, and various dates are given by the following chronograms, which are not otherwise explained. They are possibly the dates of events connected with the church, such as falling down, destruction twice by fire, and its subsequent restorations—

At page 443, the death of Ferdinand III., as king of Bohemia, Duke of Austria, and Emperor of Germany, is thus dated (Bohemia having become united to Austria under this sovereign)—

i.e. Ferdinand the Third, on the second day of April, three crowns having been put on him, and the like number of sceptres, gloriously, because by his piety and justice, entered the heavens.

A complimentary inscription to his successor Leopold I. concludes thus—

He died indeed, but rises again in Leopold the First, the shining light of the universal globe.

<sup>1</sup> By counting again the words CÆCVS which precedes the first line.

The second part of the volume has this title and dedication—
 'Monarchiæ Austriacæ pars altera.'

} = 1673

AVE CLAVDIA IMPERATRIX = 1673
 Archidux Austriæ (etc.)

Augustissimæ domus Austriacæ felicitas (etc.).

The dedication goes on to extol the empress, Claudia Felicitas (the second wife of Leopold), through two handsomely printed pages, declaring that she possessed every known virtue, for which a long list of historical personages there mentioned were individually remarkable. The volume concludes with this greeting to the emperor—

VIVAT GLORIOSVS LEOPOLDVS IMPERATOR. = 1673

A RARE tract, published at Ghent in 1685, belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, consists of only four pages 4°, and relates to the emperor Leopold I., and the successful war which he carried on against the Turks in eastern Europe. The title commences thus, 'Observationes Anagrammaticæ et chronicæ circa felices progressus Belli Austriaci adversus Turcam anno 1685 Sacræ Cæsareæ Majestati oblatae.' The author's name is Gulielmus vanden Eede, of the Society of Jesuits at Brussels, a celebrated writer of anagrams.

The leading feature is a chronogram relating to the reverses sustained by the Turks at the rivers Danube and Drave, in Hungary. The chronogram consists of 33 letters, and is the 'program' on which eleven other chronograms are formed, by using all the same 33 letters, or, in other words, eleven anagrams are formed on one and the same 'program.' It must be a task of considerable difficulty thus to use in each sentence only the same letters, and to produce by that means so many sentences strictly applicable to the same subject. The numeral letters are the same in all, and, of course, they make the same date. The sentences are, however, somewhat crabbed to translate. To this combination the term 'chron-anagram' is given. They are as follows—

Programma Chronicum, in quo

Christianus loquitur : Turca respondet :
 I TURCA, ISTRUM EBIBE ;—SAT VALIDÈ EXHAUSI. = 1685 ||
i.e. The Christian speaks: Go, thou Turk, and drink the Danube. The Turk answers: Enough! I have thoroughly drunk of it.

On this 'program' the eleven chron-anagrams are composed.

AUT, SI SITI CALES: BIBE ET EXHAURI DRAVUM. = 1685
i.e. Dost thou burn with thirst? drink up the river Drave.

The foregoing chronograms relate to the losses sustained by the Turks by drowning in these rivers. The next is said to relate to the flight of the Turkish general 'Serasquierus' at the town and lake of 'Essexius,' where the losses were 'innumerable'—

VIDI, ET ESSEXII LACUS TÛRBAM HAURIEBAT. = 1685

From this is formed the next, which relates to the flight of Ibrahim Pasha and the Turkish army—

IBRAHIM BASSA DELECTUS VIVIT; RE EXULAT. = 1685

From this is formed the next, relating to the embassy of 'Ahmet Sclebi,' with a letter to the Emperor proposing peace, which was rejected—

AHMET SCLEBI DUX VISÀ RE, ABIIT AURIATUS. = 1685

From this is formed the next, which foreshadows the fate of Ibrahim Pasha—

HÀC EXALTATUS RESTI UBI VIS, BREVIA DIEM. = 1685

From this is formed the next, which alludes to an Austrian proverb, that Providence affords help to the Emperor and his armies when in great need of it—

EST RE AUSTRIACUS; HABEBIT AUXILIUM DEI. = 1685

From the preceding chron-anagram one is formed in which the Emperor speaks to Hungary, referring to a Papal Bull of Innocent XI, about the holy name of the Virgin Mary—

SUBSIDIA TÛA JESU MATER CLARÈ EXHIBUIT. = 1685

From this again is formed another, in which the Emperor, in imitation of St. Stephen, king of Hungary,<sup>1</sup> in gratitude for assistance from the Virgin, confirms the dedication to her of his inheritance—

SIC TE (UBI EX USU) SALVABIT HAEREDITATEM. = 1684

From this is formed the next, in which Pope Innocent XI. expresses his mind in the words of Psalm xcvi. 1, Vulgate Version—

SALVAVIT SIBI DEXTERA EIUS, ET BRACHIUM. = 1685

From this is formed the next, alluding to certain conjectures about 'the great Lord of the Ottoman Porte,' the affairs of Turkey, and to Balaam in the Bible narrative—

HIC VIR A SE, ET A SUBDITIS MALÈ VEXABITUR. = 1685

From this is formed the final chron-anagram, a conjecture about the fate of the supreme Lord of the Turks, and of his armies—

AB HIS ACIE, ARMIS, VITÀ EXUTUS DELEBITUR. = 1685

The author adds thereto this pious remark, 'Utinam potius convertatur et vivat' i.e. I wish rather that he may be converted and live.

This singular tract concludes appealing to the reader's patience, and giving the name of the author, etc. 'Ad benevolum lectorem,—Patienter concinnata patienter lege,—Quæ Amicorum postulatu, supe-

A THIN folio volume, printed at Augsburg (British Museum, press-mark 564. g. 24.), bears this title—

TRIUMPHUS NOVEM SÆCULORUM

Imperii Romano-Germanici,

Carolo Magno, augustissimo Romanorum Imperatori, etc.

By Antonius Bomer, of the Society of Jesus. No date on title-page.

There are ten large and exceedingly fine engravings, representing triumphal structures, adorned with a profusion of emblematical statuary and ornaments with inscriptions, in honour of religion and various of the (German) Roman emperors, accompanied by eulogiums in Latin, from Charlemagne down to Charles VI., at the date 1725. The work was composed to do special honour to the last-named emperor. The engravings are by John Andrew Pfeffel, an artist of celebrity at Vienna, and are worthy in every respect of being reproduced in facsimile. They do not, however, contain any chronograms.

Leopold I. (the father of Charles VI.) is the only one of the emperors who is eulogised in chronograms. The composition is as follows :—

LEOPOLDO MAGNO,

Imperatori jubilæo, victorioso, pacifico,

virtutum et sæculorum compendio

Dithyrambus sæcularis.

JOSEPH I. EMPEROR.

THE Emperor Joseph I., son of the Emperor Leopold I., came to the imperial throne of Germany in 1705, after the death of his father. He had a fair share of chronogrammatic addresses in his time.<sup>1</sup> To him was given the title of King of the Romans and of Hungary before he became Emperor, and as such he is addressed in an elaborate Latin poem in chronogram by the doctors and poets of the University of Grätz, in a rare tract belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, bearing this title,—‘HERCULES AUSTRIACUS, sive Josephus I. augustus Romanorum et Ungariæ rex versu chronostico adumbratus, et honori illustrissimorum, perillustrium, reverendorum, religiosorum, prænobilium, nobilium, ac eruditorum Dominorum Dominorum neo-baccalaureorum cùm in Almâ, ac Celeberrimâ Universitate Græcensi primâ philosophiæ laureâ condecorentur. Promotore, R. P. Francisco Hochenburger, e Soc. Jesu, AA. LL. et Philosophiæ Doctore, ejusdemque professore ordinario.

Oblatus

<sup>a</sup>
POESĪ ACADEMICA.’

= 1702

The tract consists of thirty-four leaves (sixty-eight pages), without pagination or date in figures; small 4°. There is an engraved emblematical frontispiece, wherein is a bust of Joseph surrounded by figures representing war, justice, peace, the arts, etc., with this dedicatory inscription on the pedestal, ‘Josepho I. Romanorum et Ungariæ regi augusto Herculi austriaco,’ manifesting his present, and foreshadowing (adumbrans) his future greatness. Then follows an address to the ‘Neo-baccalaurei’ of the university, signed, ‘Honoris Vestri, Studiosissimi Poetæ ACADEMICI.’

= 1702 and then a dedication 'Potentissimo principi Josepho I.' etc., and signed 'Musæ GRÆCENSIS ACADEMIÆ.' =

1702

After this the main subject follows, consisting of ten poems in hexameter and pentameter verse, each with a full-page engraved emblem pointing to the important events in his career from his infancy in 1678 to his marriage with Wilhelmina Amalia of Hanover in 1699. The poems consist of 950 lines, or from 90 to 100 lines in each poem, repeating the date 1702 in 475 distinct chronograms. This indeed is a remarkable work and well done, the labour of men to whom the use of the Latin language was familiar. Allusions to the successful wars carried on by Joseph and his father in Hungary, run through all the poems, while the language of court flattery, so common at the period, is not so overstrained as is usual in complimentary addresses to imperial personages. It will suffice, as an example of the whole, to give the first poem in full, consisting of thirty-five chronograms, leaving 440 more, still unexhausted by this extract.

The first emblem, inscribed, 'Felicia Augusti Incunabula,' represents the infant in his cradle, emblems, etc., and this extract from Claudian—

Herculeæ quamvis jactent sua Numina Thebæ
At Thebis melior, Dircæis clarior oris, Quæ dedit hoc Numen regio.

Followed on the next sheet by—

The tract concludes with four pages of the names of members of the university who join in the congratulations offered to him. There is no date in figures anywhere in the tract. There are 440 more chronograms in the tract.

THE CORONATION, ETC., OF THE EMPEROR CHARLES THE SIXTH.

THE book now to be noticed, if regarded as a volume, is probably unique, being a collection of seventeen tracts printed at different places and independently published, each tract complete in itself, and with its own distinct features of interest, on one and the same subject. An old manuscript note, written on the fly-leaf of the book, thus points to its contents, 'A collection of various pieces on occasion of the election and coronation of the Emperor Charles vi.,' etc. The contents bear some resemblance to those described in my book Chronograms, pp. 473, 497, 503, concerning certain bishops in Franconia. Much has been done in chronogram to exalt the Emperor (as may be seen in Chronograms, index, p. 560), while the book from which the following extracts are made adds much more to his recorded fame. The whole volume comprises still more curious matter that is not suitable to our present purpose; it may be seen in the British Museum Library (press-mark 9315. f. 1-7. folio). We now proceed to the chronograms.

Tract No. 4 consists of twenty-two pages in German. The title-page is as follows:—'Getreuer Reichs-Burger getreuer Hertzens-Wunsch zu Gott für das neuerwelchlte Ober-Haupt der Christenheit, aus dem xxi. Psalm v. 2-8, als der . . . Her Carolus III. König in Spanien und Indien . . . zu einer Römischer König und Kayser dessen Nahmen der VI erhoben und erwählet worden,' etc. Regensburg, 1712. The author's name is Erasmus Sigmund Alkofern, a priest at Regensburg (Ratisbon). The name of that city is the concluding word of the last chronogram in the tract. The purpose of the work is to eulogise Charles vi. It has numerous Bible texts and references, and chronograms which are mingled with and form part of the paragraphs in which they occur. The first chronogram is on page 2, CARL DER DRITTE ALS KÖNIG ZV HISPANIEN INDIEN, ETC. = 1711

There is also this anagram on his name—

Carolus tertius. = Ut sol carus erit.

On the same page are these verses, beginning and ending with cvi, but not intended for a chronogram—

CVI dabis Imperii Electrix Germania pomum?

Tangendo quæris? vaticinare: CVI?

i.e. To whom, O Germania, Electress, wilt thou give the apple of the empire? By touching it dost thou seek to know? Prophecy now: to whom? Observe that the words printed in capital letters ask the question and suggest the answer if they are read as C.VI.=Charles the Sixth. The ingenious author declares this to be a riddle by which the future emperor is to be discovered. The apple (pomum) is the emblem of the imperial power in Germany, equivalent to the 'orb' which is placed in the sovereign's hand at coronation ceremonies in England. The play on the word CVI occurs again at page 175, infra.

This chronogram presently follows—

epidosis Poetae:

Lusi, ô cura!

(Each of the foregoing sentences is an anagram on the words Carolus VI., and is also the subject of some complimentary epigram—matic couplets in Latin concerning the emperor, the supposed utterances of the old poet Lycophron. This poet wrote verses whose obscurity has procured for him the epithet of 'Tenebrosus'; they were a mixture of prophetic effusions, which, as he supposes, were given by Cassandra during the siege of Troy. The mysterious letters at the commencement of this tract, the six letters C, may be taken to represent the sixth emperor Charles. The verses themselves are sufficiently obscure, each brings in the words of its accompanying anagram. The first (which follows) is a fair specimen, and so is the eighth, which is chronogrammatic.)

The subject then proceeds—Sequitur illustratio Lemmatum istorum anagrammaticorum, quam in rubro pollicitus sum, per Imagines & Symbola.

VI.<sup>us</sup> erit Carolus; certa Lycophron ait.

(This, and all the verses, seem to have been associated with some pictorial representations; the tract, however, makes no other allusion to them beyond what may be inferred from the words printed in italics, and from certain words part of the title-page. I conclude with the chronogram, the eighth couplet; the numeral is quaintly expressed, IIX is IO minus 2 = 8.)

Tract 9 consists of eight pages in German, the subject being a description of the siege of Landau by Joseph I., king of Hungary, published at Augsburg in the year

SIC TANDEM CESSIT REGI IOSEPHO. = 1704

The author's name appears at the foot of the dedication, on the back of the title-page, Joseph Friderich Leopold Burger. 9 Januar. 1705.

A handsome emblematical engraving, exhibiting a medal of Joseph I., commences the narrative, and at page 6 these chronograms appear—

HÆC NEMINI CEDIT. = 1702

IMO CEDIT CÆSARI. = 1702

TANDEM CESSIT CÆSARI. = 1702

(These chronograms will be found, with others on the same subject, in my book on Chronograms, published in 1882, page 134.)

Tract 10 has a title-page as follows:—Epigrammatum Biga, in Trigam dierum memorabilium, videlicet emortualem Josephi I. Imperatoris gloriosissimi, qui erat 17 April, et electionis Caroli III. Hispan., etc. etc. Regis potentiss. in Imperatorem Romanum, hujus nominis sextum, qui erat dies Lunæ 12 Octob. ut et coronationis ejusdem, Francofurti ad Moenum felicissimè susceptæ, die Martis 12 Decemb. (The subject of the tract is two Latin epigrams, printed in various type on two separate pages, on the death of Joseph I. and the election and coronation of his successor, Charles VI. They do not contain any chronograms besides those on the title-page, and there are no dates in figures.)

Tract 11 consists of eighty pages. It is in the German language, and contains much to interest admirers of chronograms, and engraved illustrations; the latter are particularly fine, no less than 38 in number, of folio size, and larger, representing a great variety of emblems, medallions, public decorations and illuminations (illuminated transparent pictures), at Augsburg, on the occasion of the rejoicings in 1716 at the birth of the Archduke of Austria, Leopold,<sup>1</sup> son of the Emperor Charles VI.

The title-page is, 'Das Frolockende Augspurg, wie solches wegen der hochst-begluckten Geburt dess Durchleuchtigsten Ertz-Hertzen und Printzen von Austurien Leopoldi II. Seine allerunterthanigste Freude den 17 May 1716. Durch verschiedene Illuminationes dargestellt hat.' Augspurg, 1716.

The author's name, Johann Christoph Kolb, appears at the end of the dedication to the Emperor Charles the Sixth.

On page 2, these chronograms were among the illuminations of the Rath-house—

SPEI PVBLICÆ PLAVDENTIS IMPERII = 1716
P. P.—S. P. Q. A.

HONORI AD AVITÆ MONARCHIÆ CORONAS INVITANTI. = 1716

And among a profusion of decorations and inscriptions on the windows of the Rath-house were these chronograms, at page 4, arranged in two series of six; a compliment to Charles VI.—

I. AVSTRIACI SANGVINIS HÆREDEM CERNITIS. = 1716

Followed by—

LIGAT VNA COLVMNA DVAS. = 1716

Alluding to the device of two columns, surmounted by a crowned monogram, composed of the letters c and l (i.e. Charles and Leopold).

On page 20 occurs the word signifying the dawning day of 1716. (This is one of the few words which happen to be entirely chronogrammatic)—

DILVCVLVM. = 1716

<sup>1</sup> This infant archduke was born on 13th April 1716, and died in November of the same year. Of course he never reached the throne, although he is called Leopold II. in this tract. See note on page 185, infra.

On page 21, from Psalm cxi. 2 (Vulgate Version)—

On page 27 there is a fine engraving of female figures, allegorical of the months of the spring, with this chronogram ; it was one of the illuminated decorations in a window, alluding to 'April the most blissful month' of the year, in which the baby Archduke was born—

IVRE DEHINC MENSES ALIOS PRÆCEDIS APRILIS, <sup>2</sup>
ISTA TIBI PROLES DVM VICE SOLIS ERIT.	=	1716
On page 34, some illuminations were thus inscribed—

On page 35, an illumination bore these lines—

TVÆ NATVM CAPE DIVA CORONÆ.	=	1716
HANC DABO CÆSAREIS MERITIS VENIENTIBVS ANNIS.	=	1716

At page 36, an illumination bore these lines—

CAROLVS VI. DEI GRATIA IMPERATOR ET GENITOR NATI LÆTARE.	=	1716
ELISABETHA CHRISTINA DEI GRATIA FELIX MATER.	=	1716

On page 39, some illuminations are represented with inscriptions surrounded by wreaths of foliage and flowers—

<sup>2</sup> This chronogram makes 2311. It agrees with the original. I am unable to explain its numerical meaning, unless it be an error.

On page 42 the illuminations of the College of the Jesuits are described, with numerous complimentary inscriptions; among them were these chronograms, the concluding lines of the inscriptions—

HÆC DEVOTI AFFECTVS ARGVMENTA = 1716
 CONSCRIPERE } = 1716

CORONAS QVONDAM ILLVSTRATVRO, = 1716
 Uniones Symbolicos
 INSCRIBEBAT } = 1716
 DEVOTISSIMA SOCIETAS IESV.

OVVM PASCHALE DAT AQVILA. = 1716

Below are two horsemen galloping in different directions blowing post-horns, and thus inscribed—

AB ORIENTE VSQVE AD OCCASVM = 1716
 LEOPOLDI FAMA EXCVRRAT. = 1716

On page 46 the illuminations at the 'hospital' of the Regular Prebendary Canons of St. Augustin of the Holy Cross are described, with these accompanying chronograms—

CAROLVS SEXTVS } = 1716
 IMPERATOR REX HISPANIÆ
 Io!
 EXAVDITVS EST
 PRO SVA REVERENTIA.
 Hebr. v. 7.

A representation of the Imperial eagle is given bearing on its breast these chronograms—

Anno 1711.
 EX TERRIS NVPER PIVS ADVENA CÆSAR IBERIS,
 SANGVINEO SVPPLEX VISVS ADESSE DEO. } = 1711

Anno 1716.
 AVGVSTÆ VIRTUTE PATRVM DEVOTVS AVITÆ,
 NVNC OVAT EN! PATRIS GLORIÆ, OVABIT AVI. } = 1716

On page 51 this appears among other inscriptions—
 SVRSVM CORDA AC PIA VOTA. = 1716

In an engraving on page 62 are these chronograms, surrounded by wreaths of foliage (laurel?)—

CAROLI SEXTI ET ELISABETHÆ FILIVS ERIT LEOPOLDVS REDIVIVVS PIVS IVSTVS VICTOR ET CONSENESCET.	}	ANNVS NATALIS, = 1716	VIGEAT PRINCEPS IN CVNIS LEOPOLDVS CAROLI FILIVS VT SERO FIAT IN THRONIS SECVNDVS FELIX ET SENEX.	}	ANNVS NATALIS, = 1716
---	---	-----------------------------	--	---	-----------------------------

At page 68 there is a large engraving, of which the frontispiece to this volume is a facsimile, representing the Emperor Charles VI. in armour and robes, holding up a sword, and Prince Eugene of Savoy presenting to him the infant Archduke Leopold, on a velvet cushion, whom the Emperor makes a Knight of the Golden Fleece. The cordon of the Order hangs across the infant. The following inscriptions are on scrolls occupying the upper corner of the picture—

DECORA HERVVM CÆSAR ET EVGENIVS = 1716
 Der Helden sehr und Zierde schön,
 Ist CARL LEOPOLD und EUGEN.

The accompanying text contains the next chronogram—

LEOPOLDVS CAROLI ET ELISABETHÆ FILIVS ARCHIDVX AVSTRIÆ PRINCEPS ASTVRIÆ EQVES AVREI VELLERIS VIGEAT.	}	= 1716
---	---	--------

On page 70 an illumination is described which represents a cradle containing the infant Prince, with this inscription—

LEOPOLDE SIS AVSTRIÆ ET ASTVRIÆ PRINCEPS MITIS. = 1716

On page 73 an illumination is described containing a representation of Faith, Hope, and Charity combined in one figure, with the letter L, and inscribed—

SPES FIRMA IN PRINCIPES TE NON CONFVNDIT AVSTRIA. = 1716

Another illumination represented a wood and a she-wolf lying on the ground suckling a young boy, who wears a ducal cap, intended for the infant Leopold, bearing these inscriptions, the first to illustrate a device of an eagle presenting a sword at the throat of a Turk—

EN LVNA DVCAT AQVILAM. = 1716

The second presents a parallel between the infant and the founder of Rome—

IO. LEOPOLDVS ALTER ROMVLVS. = 1716

Another device of Christ crucified on a palm-tree, which grows out of a bee-hive, ornamented by the Austrian eagle—

EIA, DEVOTIONIS MEL CLUAVIT AQVILAS.

This chronogram is carelessly printed. It probably is meant for 1716; but I do not venture to make the needful correction. The tract ends at page 80, without any more chronograms.

The next tract, No. 12, is entitled 'Mœstus Thorus Archiducalis,' etc., a funeral oration or sermon (in German) on Sigmund Francis, Grand Duke of Austria, at Sulzbach, by Francis Hoechtcl, on Psalm lxxvi, on 12th August 1665. There is a large engraving of the funeral assemblage in a church where the sermon is being preached.

It would appear that he died at the time of his marriage, leaving his widow, Maria Hedwig Augusta, to whom the following couplet (at page 7) is supposed to be spoken by him—

Sponsus eram Virgo, mansi quoque Virgo, Maritus, Nam mors invidit Virgineum thalamum.

And she is supposed to answer as an echo—

Uxor eram felix, magno vivente marito, Sum Virgo infelix hoc viduata Viro.

i.e. I was espoused as a Virgin, I also remained a Virgin as a husband, for death envied my virgin couch.

I was a happy wife, my great husband living; I am an unhappy virgin, being deprived of this husband.

This chronogram forms part of the sentence which comes next—

ERGO ISTA TIBI GRANDIS AVSTRIA COLVMNA? = 1665

The remainder of the volume contains much that is curious, but no more chronograms.

*LEOPOLD, SON OF THE EMPEROR CHARLES VI.
AND ELIZABETH.*

AN exceedingly rare book, belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, enables me to present at one view an example of the efforts made by the Jesuits to strengthen their popularity at the court of the imperial family of Germany, at the time when unpopularity was pressing on them generally throughout Europe. The feeling against them gained force from various reasons until about the middle of the eighteenth century, when the order of the Jesuits was suppressed generally in Europe, even in those countries where the order took its rise and flourished under the most powerful auspices. No potentates were so much honoured and flattered by the use of chronograms as those of the house of Habsburg, the reigning family of Austria; and especially the Emperors Leopold I. and Charles VI., and their progeny, from their cradle to their tomb. The Jesuits were very busy at this work; and in the book before us, the birth of the infant Leopold, son of Charles VI. and his wife Elizabeth, is hailed as a very important event, and hopes were fostered that he would in time succeed to the throne. In anticipation of that event the chronograms call him Leopold II., or 'secundus,' or even 'secundissimus,' meaning both 'the second' or 'the prosperous.' These hopes, however, were not realised,<sup>1</sup> and many prognostications consequently failed of fulfilment. The male issue of Charles VI. having died, leaving him the last of the male descendants of his race, he, before his death, procured such alteration of the national law that his daughter Maria Theresia succeeded, as heiress of Austria, to the throne of Hungary, and to his Netherlands dominions in 1740.

The book now to be noticed describes thirty-four festivals held at so many places in Bohemia, promoted by the Jesuits to celebrate the birth of this infant Leopold in 1716. The attendant expense and trouble must have been large, but perhaps not greater than the extent of hopes opened up to the Jesuits by the event. No people were better qualified than the members of the order to undertake the literary work; they possessed that familiarity with the classical writers needful to the selection of quotations to mingle with the poetry and chronograms, and that knowledge of the Latin language which was indispensable to the production of chronograms in such number and with such variety of treatment of the subject as are to be seen scattered throughout the book. The descriptions of the festivals follow in close succession, not in the usual form of separate tracts. The book is a folio size, 252 pages, not numbered; yet it is evidently printed all at the same time, and in the same year when the festivals took place. It contains 592 chronograms, 12 cabalas, and a few anagrams. So far as a selection can be well made, I believe that the transcripts which follow are fair representatives of the whole series. Many of the title-pages and titles are chronogrammatic. The total number of chronograms in the book is 592, of which 114 are given in the following extracts, leaving 478 which, for various reasons mentioned, I have not transcribed.

The first and general title-page is as follows:—

SOCIETATE IESV
HÆREDITARIE PROVINCIÆ BOËMÆ. } = 1716
(Printed at Prague . . . in the Clementine College, 1716.)

The opening address and dedication to Charles VI. is composed in the strongest language of courtly flattery, and grandiloquent praise is given, even in this early period of his existence, to the newly born infant Archduke, who has been already invested with the dignity and decorations of the Order of the Golden Fleece. The fireworks and bonfires which blazed on the occasion are made to symbolize the light which Austria is to experience. The Emperor is personally addressed thus,—‘Sed enim felicissime Cæsarum Carole Sol es inter tot Sidera in Cælo Austriæ.’

The first subordinate title-page in the book, which precedes the description of the grand festivities at Prague, is a good example of the conspicuous use of chronograms and cabala. It is handsomely printed, covering two pages, and reads as follows:—

‘VERNA HILARIA
LÆTO, ET FESTIVO INCENDIO ANIMATA. } = 1716

Soboles dilecta Deo, Magnum Jovis incrementum.<sup>2</sup> = 1716

307 142 59 308 358 542

This concluding line is a near adaptation of the words of a familiar line, Virgil, Ecl. iv. 49—

'Cara Deūm soboles, magnum Jovis incrementum!'

i.e. Dear offspring of the gods, illustrious increase of Jove.

The trifling alteration in two words cause the sentence to give out the modern date.

The festival was held at Prague on 3d to 6th of May, the principal object of attraction, besides the fireworks, was a 'pegma,' or structure of boards and scaffolding 116 feet high by 68 wide, containing allegorical figures, symbols, scenery, etc., with music and other accessories, and a profusion of inscriptions, chronograms, and 'cabalæ,' from which it would be difficult to make a fair selection.

The second subordinate title-page is—

'EROTEMA GENETHLIACUM

Quis putas puer iste erit?

motum olim in Judææ Montanis super sancto sanctorum conjugum Zachariæ et Elisabeth unigenito, nunc in Montibus Juliis super felicissimo sacratissimarum Cæsarearum Majestatum Caroli ter secundi et Elisabeth in una prole ter fœcundæ primogenito Leopoldo . . . resolutum in propylæo Novæ Basilicæ Sanctæ Mariæ Majoris, collegii et universitatis Societatis Jesu Olomucii anno,

Quo plusquam serenissimo ortu suo orbem illustravit

ARCHI-DVCVM PHÆBVS.'

= 1716

This festival was held at Olmütz; the subject is wrought out on the question in the title-page, the words taken from the Vulgate Version, St. Luke i. 66, where Elizabeth says, 'Quis, putas, puer iste erit?' [i.e. What manner of child shall this be?] Observe that Leopold's mother bore the name Elizabeth. The festival was accompanied by the usual exhibition of symbolical decorations, with a profusion of inscriptions and a great many chronograms. These among them give a special answer to the question of the mother—

The principal anagram in the volume is on sheet L 2; it consists of 81 letters.

The third subordinate title-page is another good example of the use of chronograms, indeed it is almost entirely in that form—

This festival was held at Breslau with the usual exhibition of decorations, and a 'pegma' 62 feet high, and broad in proportion, having a fine architectural design, allegorical figures, etc., with a profusion of classical inscriptions and chronograms, setting forth the progress and splendour of the Imperial family, which is hardly exceeded by that of the sun itself.

The fourth subordinate title-page begins with a chronogram—

'VER ARCHI-DVCVM = 1716

(On the birth of Leopold.)

This festival was held at Little-Prague with bonfires and fire-works; there was a 'pegma' 73 feet high filled with numerous symbolical figures of persons and wild animals; from each group is drawn a prognostication or prophecy of Imperial prosperity ('Vaticinium onomasticum'). The whole is minutely described, and it must have been very gorgeous and interesting. As usual classical quotations are abundant, with verses appropriate to the occasion, and some chronograms, which are scarcely intelligible without the accompanying verses and pictorial symbols. The following, however, may safely stand alone—

The fifth subordinate title is as follows—

'SERIES APPLAUSUS GENETHLIACI

Neo-nato . . . Archiduci Austriæ sub schemate

Herculis ab infantia usque ad provectam

Ætatem . . . a Brzeznitzensi collegio societatis

Jesu adornati.'

This festival was held at Brzeznitz, and on a smaller scale than the foregoing ones; among the decorations was this inscription—

HONORI HERCVLÆ SOBOLIS } = 1716

IN GAVIDIA ERIGENTIS ORBEM } = 1716

SERENISSIMI AVSTRÎÆ ARCHI-DVCIS = 1716

LEOPOLDI II.

DIES ADORNAT NATALES PLAVDENS IESV SOCIETAS BRZEZNITZII. = 1716

The sixth subordinate title of the next festival is—

'DESIDERIUM COLLIUM,' etc.

It was held 'in monte sancto ad Przibramum Civitatem Montanam in Boëmiâ sito a residentia societatis Jesu.' . . . 17 mensis Maii, anno 1716. The description of the decorations does not contain any chronograms.

The seventh subordinate title-page is briefly as follows—

'LEUNCULUS AUSTRIACUS, Agnello Paschali sociatus : Leopoldus . . . archi-dux Austriæ . . . in lucem festivissimè editus
 AB AVGVSTISSIMIS INTER SE DESPONSATIS
 CAROLO ET ELISABETHA, } = 1716
 Idibus Aprilis Feriâ secundâ Paschatis, . . . exceptus; . . . a Collegio Societatis Jesu Commotovii . . . Anno ut supra; Triduo Majali . . . (17th to 19th May 1716).'

This festival was held at Commotau in Bohemia, the 'pegma' was accommodated in the entrance ('propylæum') to the church of St. Ignatius, the subject was from Isaiah xi. 6, 'Leo et Ovis simul morabuntur' (words of the Vulgate Version). The groups and decorations were 'magnificent,' but the chronograms few.

The eighth subordinate title-page commences—

'LUX GENETHLIACA serenissimi Archi-ducis Austriæ . . . Leopoldi . . . illustrata . . . Dum communibus fidelium subditorum applausibus suos debiti obsequii igniculos adjiceret in umbra devinctissima augustissimo nomini residentia Societatis Jesu Mariæ-Scheinæ sub Grupna. Anno quo, exortum est

 SERENISSIMI ARCHIDVCIS AVSTRIAE, = 1716
 IPSIS MENSIS APRILIS IDIBVS, ORBI FELICITER NATI = 1716
 DILVCVLVM.' = 1716

The title thus ends with one of the few words that are composed entirely of the numeral letters.<sup>1</sup> The festival was held at Graupen in Bohemia. There are but few chronograms in the description of the decorations, but Latin verse is abundant. Each name<sup>2</sup> of the infant Leopold (all of them also being the names of saints), were illuminated, and each had its ample tribute of poetry, but without chronograms.

The ninth subordinate title commences, NOCTILUCÆ HOMAGIORUM PRIMITIÆ ad Augustales cunas, . . . a collegio Rosensi societatis Jesu Crumlovii Boëmorum Anno 1716 10 et 12 Maii, die intermedio per aëris intemperiem impedito.'

This is the only record I have met with of a festival being impeded by bad weather; the circumstance is quite intelligible. This happened at Krumlau. A very handsome 'pegma,' 46 feet high, is described, with its decorations and pictures, and archway beneath for the spectators passing about. The chronograms require

This festival was held at Eger in Bohemia ; there was a very grand 'pegma,' with illuminations and symbolic groups. Among the complimentary chronograms to the infant Archduke were the following, pointing to his present and future honours—

An arch was erected at Gitschin in Bohemia, with emblems and a few chronograms.

The twelfth subordinate title, 'OVUM PASCHALE seu augustales ovantis Europæ spes, quas in . . . Leopoldo . . . Cæsaris Carolo VI. primo-genito, Dum in Pascha natus fuisset, subjectissimis oculis suspexit, ac Profundissima submissione venerata est—them the 'Easter Egg' mentioned in the title was to be seen, with this inscription—

IN PASCHALE OVVM NOVA PROLE DONATA. = 1716

The thirteenth subordinate title, 'TER TRINÆ NUTRICES gratiæ, sive noveni cœlites, etc. . . . In collegio S. J. Glattoviæ, anno 1716, 10 Maii.' The festival held at Klattau, in Bohemia, is described, when the decorations consisted of illuminated pictures symbolical of the event, and exhibiting the several saints whose names the infant Archduke bore. The chronograms are not important.

The fourteenth subordinate title, 'FESTIVUM PEGMA, pro genethliaco applausu . . . Leopoldi (his other names as before), . . . erectum a collegio Glogoviensi Societatis Jesu 3 Maii anno 1716.' This festival was held at Glogau, when a 'pegma' 36 cubits high was erected. The chronograms are combined with the decorations. This one is a compliment to the infant Archduke—

NOVA STELLA DOMVS HABSBVRGICÆ = 1716

And this one closes the description of the 'pegma'—

DEVs SERVET CAROLVM, ET ELISABETH! = 1716

SCEPTROVE REGIO SERVET LEOPOLDVM! = 1716

The fifteenth subordinate title, 'VOTUM GENETHLIACUM ob neo-natum . . . Leopoldum, . . . In communi regiæ urbis Hradisstiensis applausu, a collegio Hradisstiensi Societatis Jesu . . . Anno 1716 . . . 10 Maii.' This festival was held at Hradisch, once a monastery, now a military hospital. There were extensive illuminations of the church and college, and numerous inscriptions. Among the few chronograms was this—

HONORI, ET AMORI NEO-NATI ARCHI-DVCIS AVSTRIÆ. = 1716

The sixteenth subordinate title, 'VOTORUM ET AFFECTUUM tributum serenissimis genethliis repensum, invictissimi Romanorum imperatoris Caroli ter secundi regnorum et gloriæ hæredi secundissimo

LEOPOLDO EXINDE SECVNDO. = 1716

. . . cui . . . reverentissimo homagio advovebat suis sacris majestibus, devinctissimum collegium soc. Jesu Iglaviæ.' This festival was held at Iglau. There was a grand 'pegma' 70 feet high, the summit representing sky and stars, with many emblematical groups appropriate thereto, together with symbols of imperial rule. The inscriptions were quotations from classical authors, or verses composed after classical models, with but few chronograms.

The seventeenth subordinate title is mostly in chronogram—

'FERIA SECVNDA PASCHÆ PRIMOGENITVS INFANS HISPANIÆ, = 1716

JESV.'

This festival was held at Kuttenberg in Bohemia, where there is a fine Gothic church dedicated to St. Barbara. There were several separate emblematic groups, among which that saint was conspicuous. Chronograms abounded among the decorations, bearing particular allusion to the various groups of figures. Towards the conclusion is the following, which is allusive to the silver mines which existed in the neighbouring mountains, and were sources of wealth to the town—

Mensis Maii.' There is but one chronogram to grace the decorations in honour of the imperial infant who delayed his birth.

The nineteenth subordinate title, 'FLORIDO-AUREI SÆCULI PRIMITIIS, Caroli VI. et Elisabethæ,' etc. etc. (which with festive fires, was applauded by) 'collegium Ferdinandæum S. J. Litomericii,' anno 1716. This festival was held at Leutmeritz in Bohemia, with the usual emblematical structures, poetry, and inscriptions, but few chronograms.

The twentieth subordinate title, 'OMEN FELICITATIS Luce genethliaca . . . Leopoldi, . . . inter publicos Triurbis Pragenæ applausus, . . . a minima Jesu societate Neo-Pragæ ad S. Ignatium.' This festival was held at New-Prague, at the church of St. Ignatius, where emblematical groups and pictorial subjects were illuminated with all known colours. The chronograms were numerous, and the name of Leopold appeared everywhere in them and in other inscriptions. This one alludes to the foundation, etc., of the college—

This title is allusive to the birth of Leopold in the evening, about sunset, viz., at half-past seven o'clock.

This festival was held at Neisse in Silesia, with the usual decorations and emblems, bearing appropriate inscriptions and some chronograms. The star of Austria and Asturia is alluded to in words taken from Genesis i. 14, in the Vulgate Version—

HÆC AVSTRÆ ET ASTVRÆ STELLA, POSITA

The twenty-second subordinate title, 'NOVELLUS SURCULUS in campos Austriacos ab Austriacis alaudis depositus cum acroamate: . . . Minimis Jesu sociis Novæ Domi<sup>1</sup> 10 Maii 1716.' There was a 'pegma' surmounted by the Austrian eagle, with emblems of the 'Austrian alauda' or 'lark,' the olive branch, the imperial apple or orb of the imperial insignia. Fortune offers the cornucopia to the new-born Leopold—

Prospera constantes figet Fortuna triumphos,
AVREA SÆCLA FLVENT TE DOMINANTE PVER. = 1716

The many bits of votive poetry are thus terminated—

The twenty-third subordinate title, 'PEGMA TRIUMPHALE serenissimis cunis . . . Leopoldi . . . inter festivos applausus, et universalialia tripudia erectum a Minimâ Jesu Societate in collegio Oppaveno.' Anno 1716. Mense Maio. This festival was held at Troppau. There was a grand 'pegma,' 80 feet high by 48 wide, in the form of a theatre, with many emblematical groups, inscriptions, and chronograms appropriate thereto. The last one is associated with the genius of the gymnasium or academy of Troppau—

A 'pegma,' with emblems of the usual character, was erected. The narrative concludes with this notice of the last group therein, of three kneeling genii and votive inscriptions—

CHARLES VI. EMPEROR, FONS INEXHAUSTUS.

A FOLIO volume, sumptuously printed at Prague, on 284 pages, composed by the Society of Jesuits in Bohemia, to celebrate a supposed jubilee of Charles VI. as king of the Holy Roman Empire, and which, by some interpretation of the figures used in the narrative, is made to represent the year 753 B.C., the era of the building of Rome, the year 753 A.D., the alleged year of the building of Prague, and the year 1723, that in which the book was printed; the same date 1723 is given by all the chronograms. This is all very fanciful. The plan of the work consists of nine sections, under the names of certain real or imaginary fountains of the old classical times, with appropriate engraved emblems, historical narratives, poems and odes in various metre, in which chronograms and cabalistic dates are mingled, all intended to heap up praise and flattery on the Emperor Charles VI. and his wife Elizabeth. The title is somewhat prolix; it enlarges on the idea of the fountains and the Roman era. There is a large engraved emblematical frontispiece, representing the emperor on horseback as if in mid-air, leaping from a rock from which many fountains of water spout forth, supplying peace and prosperity to his country and to Europe. It is subscribed with this metrical couplet—

Gloria et Augusti hoc manant ex fonte triumphii, Publica et Europæ profuit inde salus.

The book is in the British Museum, press-mark 1864. a 4. A former owner wrote on the fly-leaf (that he bought it at Augsburg at the small cost of 2 florins 30 kreutzers) 'Emi Aug. Vindel. 1803. Compt. 2 f. 30 x'—the present value would be at least twenty times as much. The title-page is as follows—

FONS INEXHAUSTUS immortalis gloriæ publicæ salutis augustarum virtutum, et gratiarum Augustissimus Romanorum Imperator CAROLUS SEXTUS Germaniæ, Hispaniæ, Hungariæ, et Bohemiæ rex etc. etc. (sic) Præprimis quidem recepto in augustissimum caput hæreditario ejusdem regni diademate, Subinde verò universi regni, fidelisque populi piis votorum laureolis devotissimè coronatus. Jungente humillimum quoque studium ejusdem subjectissimæ devotionis minimæ Societatis Jesu per Bohemiam provincia.

It will be impossible to describe this 'fountain' of all that is excellent, and to follow the allegory from place to place through the volume. The following extracts must suffice :—

At page 23 there is an emblem of 'Fons coronatus perennis gloriæ de augustissima domo Hapsburgica secundum illud Joëlis Prophetæ c. 3. v. 18, Fons de domo Domini egreditur ; and this chronogram follows after four lines of Latin verse—

CONSTANTIÁ, ET FORTITVDINE AVGVSTVS MONARCHA. = 1723

At page 26 this commences a 'periphrasis lyrica'—

EPITOME SPLENDORIS, ATQVE GLORIÆ } = 1723 AVGVSTVS CÆSAR.

At page 33 this precedes a Latin ode—

TER AVSPICATVM } = 1723

At page 36 another ode concludes with

Epiphonema Cabalisticum.

At page 82 this chronogram precedes an ode on the victories over the Turks in Hungary, 'Paraphrasis lyricæ epitome chronica'—

HAVD VLLIS CÆSAR SVPERATVR FORTIS AB ARMIS.

= 1723

At page 104 this cabala follows after several odes on victories over the Turks in Hungary. 'Epiphonema cabalisticum'—

Each verse makes 1723.

At page 108 this chronogram precedes an ode and some other verses on the emperor's success against the Turks—

IN CONSTANTIA, ET FORTITVDINE VICTORIOSISSIMVS.

= 1723

Another, at page 121—
 VICTORIA, ET TRIVMPHVS DE TVRCA. = 1723

And at page 144 a poem on the same subject concludes thus—

 A RECTA NON DEVIAT SEMITA IN ANFRACTIBVS.

Another at page 150—
 VT TERSO IN SPECVLO PRVDENTIA SPLENDET IN VNDA. = 1723

At page 163 another ode, on the emperor's wisdom, concludes with this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum'—

573 334 270 315 231

Amplifica est terræ, quod fluit indè, salus.

139 195 271 324 335 58 401

Each verse makes 1723.

At page 165 this chronogram precedes an inscription on a fountain, 'Fons signatus'—

 FORTITVDINE, ET CONSTANTIA SVNT CVSTODITA.

Another chronogram, at page 167, precedes some verses—

FELIX SVB ROSA FRONDET CONSILIVM. = 1723

At page 170, an ode entitled 'Plenior Hippocrenes influxus in concham Fontis symbolici,' concludes with this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum,' alluding to the 'Fons signatus'—

Quàm bene Apollineum signat custodia Fontem :

301 52 435 247 457 231

Est princeps populi scire tacere salus.

195 347 399 187 194 401

Each verse makes 1723

At page 174 the Fons sacer coronatæ pietatis (of the Emperor) is followed by an ode to him, headed by this chronogram—

IN CONSTANTIA, ATQVE FORTITVDINE PRINCEPS PISSIMVS. = 1723

And a long eulogistic poem concludes with this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum,' at page 195—

Irriguo emanant Pietatis Fonte triumphi

435      217      374      201      496
Quos compugnando Turcia victa dedit.

410      485      393      313      122

Each verse makes 1723.

At page 197 the Fons Carolinæ clementiæ is supposed to bear an inscription containing these words—

Meminit se esse Principem, et propè Patrem

Dum urget

IVDICIS OFFICIUM EST IVSTITIA. = 1723

And this line, adapted from Virgil, Georg. ii. 243—

FLVIT DVLCIS DE FONTIBVS Vnda. = 1723

[This is an adaptation of the words of Virgil; he is speaking of the treatment of a poor soil imbued with salt, and proceeds thus—

'Huc ager ille malus, dulcesque à fontibus undæ

Ad plenum calcentur,' etc.

i.e. 'Hither let some of that vicious mould, and sweet water from the spring be pressed brimful,' etc.]

At page 198 the Fons dulcis coronatæ Clementiæ (of the Emperor) is made the subject of some flattering remarks, concluding thus—

Sic

VIVA FLVIT DE FORTI DVLCEDO, = 1723

et

CONSTANS CLEMENTIA CAROLI SEXTI CÆSARIS } = 1723
NECTAREI SVPERAT OFFICIA FONTIS.

And at page 202 an ode on the same subject concludes thus—

Sic clemens Carolus Sextus micat Unus in omni, versibus ergo tuis

PLVRES NOLO CANAS CAROLOS: SED DICITO PHEBE
VNICVS EST CAROLVS. = 1723

An ode to the clemency, constancy, and fortitude of the Emperor ends at page 207 with this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum'—

Si blanda exæquat Superis Clementia Regem

99    68      682      534      213      127

Belliger in terris Jupiter est Carolus.

148    49    364    523    195    444

Each verse makes 1723.

At page 209 the Fons inexhaustus coronatæ munificentæ (of the Emperor) is followed by odes, headed by these chronograms, at pp. 212, 213—

GRANDIS REGVM THESA VRVS FELICITAT POPVLOS. = 1723
 IN MVNIFICENTIA PRINCIPIS FVN DATVR ORBIS. = 1723

And at the conclusion is this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum'—

Omnigenas effundit opes, superaddit Honores

272 370 205 553 323
 Omnino est Carolus non nisi Munificus.

219 195 444 130 148 587
 Each verse makes 1723.

At page 215 the Fons libratus coronatæ Justitiæ (of the Emperor) is followed by a lyric poem headed thus—

REGIA CÆSARIS ASTRÆA } = 1723
 DAT CVIQVE SVVM.

At page 218 there is a Latin oration of ten pages, commencing thus—

CAROLVS VI.
 IN CONSTANTIA, ET IN FORTITVDINE CÆSAR } = 1723 IVSTISSIMVS.

At page 228 a 'Carmen epicum' is thus introduced—

IVSTITIA SVB LIQVIDO SCHEMATE FONTIS LIBRATI. = 1723

And at page 244 a 'Prosa panegyrica' concludes thus, referring also to Isaiah xii. 4—

IVDICABIT GENTES, ET ARGVET POPVLOS MVLTOS. = 1723
 Epiphonema cabalisticum.

 Effundis Czechiaæ flumina Justitiæ.

360 534 306 523
 Each verse makes 1723.

At page 245 the Fons refrigerii Coronata animi moderatio (of the Emperor) is supposed to bear an inscription containing these words from Seneca de Consol. ad Marcia, 'Et verò magni Animi est magna contemnere, ac mediocria malle, quàm nimia; illa utilia, vitaliaque sunt, hæc eò quòd superfluunt, nocent.'

Nimirum

AVREA MEDIOCRITAS CÆSARI VT THESA VRVS. = 1723

And at page 247 an ode is thus introduced, having as a refrain to each stanza the last three words of the chronogram—

LEX VNA CAROLO: NE QVID NIMIS. = 1723

Two pages of eulogistic prose conclude at page 255 with this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum'—

Flectit Achillæum, medio tutissimus, Orbem

243          297          98          918          167

Carolus, et semper culmina summa tenet.

444    105    270          203          351          250

Each verse makes 1723.

At page 256 the Fons Carolinus, fons salutis publicæ coronatus, is described, concluding with these encouraging words, 'Ad hunc salutis Fontem accurrite fideles populi, quos qualiscunque mali accessio, aut rerum ægritudo infestat, infallibile hic salutis remedium reperturi; nam a CONSTANTIA, ET FORTITVDINE POPVLORVM SALVS.

= 1723

At page 259 a lyric poem is thus introduced—

TVTIOR HISCE SALVS POPVLO PROMANAT AB VNDIS. = 1723

The same words form also the concluding line. An ode next follows, headed thus—

LIMPIDA CAROLINI FONTIS

NOVI, ATQVE VETERIS ANALOGIA.

This chronogram makes 1773; it agrees with the original; the author probably intended it for 1723. At the conclusion is this 'Epiphonema cabalisticum'—

Plorandis lassata malis dum regna fatiscunt,

354          303          150          234          133          549

Fert obventuram Fons Carolinus opem.

191          708          186          493          145

Each verse makes 1723.

At page 262 the section devoted to the 'Coronatus Fons gratiarum' (of the Emperor) has a pretty engraving of the fountain, with this inscription, adapted from Isaiah lvii. 2, 'THRONUS GRATIARUM'—

'TANQVAM FONIS, CVIVS NON DEFICIENT AQVÆ.' = 1723

And at page 264 an ode in Sapphic verse is introduced by this couplet—

GRATIA REDDENDA EST FONTI, EX QVO GRATIA CVNCTA EST. = 1723

BIS CENTVM CHARITES EXPETIT VNA DYAS. = 1723

A note interprets the last word as 'Gemina Augustiss. Majestas.' This chronogram is at the conclusion of the last stanza of the ode—

Gratiæ Fontem redimite sertis

Floreis Gentes, meminisse par est

Gratiæ, dum par nequit ulla reddi

Gratia Fonti,

QVI IVSTA SVI DESIDERIA

ET IN ORIENTE ACCENDIT. } = 1723

We now reach the conclusion of this very remarkable work. At page 281 there is a Carmen Seculare, Sapphic verse, by which the Bohemian Society of Jesuits crowns the unexhausted Fountain of Graces to their Majesties Charles and Elizabeth. It contains no chronogram, and concludes with these words—

Epiphonema Cabalisticum

GERMAN DUKES AND LANDGRAVES.

DUKE OF BAVARIA.

SMALL quarto volume of congratulations (British Museum, press-mark 637. d. 15). The first congratulation is in German and Latin, adorned with emblems nicely engraved, and bears this title—

‘AURORA EXORTA,’

etc. etc.

addressed to Ferdinand, Duke of Bavaria, and Adelaide Henrieta his wife, on the birth of the Princess Maria Anna Christina Josepha Theresia Cajetana Antonia Francisca Felix Hyacinta Victoria. (Felicissimè progenita).

Anno quo

GRATIA DE CÆLIS BOIAS MANAVIT IN ORAS. = 1660

i.e. Grace from heaven hath spread into the Bohemian territory.

The author's name is Dominicus Franciscus Calin.

Monachii, Typis Lucæ Straubii.

On page 18, the last of this congratulation, is this chronogram—

SIT HONOR
DEO TRINO ET VNO
IN CÆLIS ET IN TERRA
AMEN.

} = 1660

i.e. Honour be to the Triune God both in heaven and in earth. Amen.

Then follows another congratulation in Latin prose called the ‘Rising Sun,’ addressed to the same Duke Ferdinand and Adelaide on the birth of their son Maximilian Emanuel. It was printed at Munich in 1662; it is adorned with a series of elaborately engraved emblems; the title commences—

‘SOL ORIENS.’

etc. etc.

An elaborate frontispiece next follows, of which the accompanying illustration is a facsimile, showing the following chronograms—

Maximilianus Emmanuel

BAVARÆ DOMVS FELICITAS.	=	1662
COELI } GAVDIVM. }	TERRÆQVE } DELICIVM. }	= 1662
SICVT SOL ORIENS MVNDO.	=	1662
AVITÆ SEDIS COLVMEN.	=	1662
PROMISSVS A DEO ELECTOR BAVARIÆ.	=	1662

i.e. Maximilian-Emmanuel, the happiness of the house of Bavaria.—The joy of heaven.—And the delight of the earth.—Just as a sun rising in the world.—The column of his ancestral throne.—Elector of Bavaria, a promise from God.

The text which accompanies each emblem is finished off by a sentence ending with some appropriate chronogrammatic words.

The first emblematical engraving contains the sun ; the text concludes thus—

Quapropter tu a nobis VERÈ SOL MAGNVS DICERIS. = 1662

i.e. Wherefore thou shalt be called by us truly a great sun.

A mere description would not set forth satisfactorily some of the emblems, nothing less than a facsimile copy and a transcript of a whole page of text would suffice ; I can only notice the chronograms here, and some of the accompanying words to complete the sentence. The next one concludes thus—

Liceat ergo tuis cunis, princeps serenissime, applaudere, dum præludentia tuæ nostræque felicitati DE CÆLIS MANANT AVGVRIA. = 1662

i.e. May it be permitted therefore to applaud thy cradle, O most serene prince, whilst preluding auguries proceed from heaven.

The next emblem is a cedar tree—Sicut cedrus Libani multiplicabitur BAVARICÆ DOMVS PROPAGO ET GLORIA. = 1662

i.e. As a cedar of Libanus the offspring and glory of the house of Bavaria will be multiplied.

The text belonging to the next emblem concludes thus—

Hinc nos extremâ superfusi lætitiâ, hoc Lemma tuis inscribimus aris, Tardè quidem, sed prudenter optatos PATRIÆ DAT ADELAIDA FRVCTVS. = 1662

i.e. Hence being overwhelmed with extreme joy, we inscribe on thine altar this motto, (Heaven) slowly indeed but prudently gives the wished-for fruits of Adelaide to the country.

The next emblem represents Pegasus on a rock, which he strikes with his foot, and causes a copious fountain of water to gush forth over an assemblage of ten figures seated at the base ; intended for Apollo and the Muses at the fountain of Helicon. Fave proinde serenissime princeps Heliconio Fonti, qui, ut tuis se devoveant auspiciis, ad tuas cunas NVNC PLENIS PROMANAT VNDIS. = 1662

i.e. Be favourable, accordingly, O most serene prince, to the fountain of Helicon, as they (the Muses) devote themselves to thy auspices, they now bedew thy cradle with its abundant waters.

The next emblem is the wooden horse at Troy—
 Auspice Maximiliano BAVARICA DOMVS FLOREBIT. = 1662
i.e. Maximilian being the leader, the house of Bavaria shall flourish.

The next concludes with—Tui populi applausu et lætitia exclamant io, io! TANDEM SPES PVBLICA VENIT. = 1662
i.e. Thy people exclaim with applause and joy, Huzza, Huzza, at last the public hope cometh.

The next concludes thus—Vivat Maximilianus Emmanuel invictus fidei catholicæ propugnator, et GERMANÆ LIBERTATIS ACER ET STRENVVS DEFENSOR. = 1662
i.e. Long live Maximilian-Emmanuel, the invincible defender of the catholic faith, and the vehement and strenuous champion of German liberty.

The next emblem is supposed to represent the way of virtue. The concluding words are—Feliciter, feliciter, princeps serenissime, scandes virtutis fastigium; immensumque tibi aliquando facies
 PERPETVÆ LAVDIS APICEM. = 1662
i.e. Happily, happily, O most serene prince, thou climbest the pinnacle of virtue; thou wilt at length appropriate to thyself the boundless summit of eternal praise.

The next emblem represents the youthful prince asleep in an open country at sunset, a bright star darts its ray of light down upon him.
 The concluding words are—Splende, ô splende igitur optatissime
 Bavaricæ domûs Sol nobis diutissimè; et benigno CLEMENTIÆ TVÆ
 SYDERE PATRIOS TVERE PENATES. = 1662
i.e. Shine, shine therefore upon us for the very longest time, O thou wished-for sun of the house of Bavaria; and do thou defend our country and our homes by the friendly star of thy clemency.

The next concludes thus—Cresce itaque augusto ex sanguine prognate surcule, serenissime princeps Maximiliane Emmanuel, tu gloria, spes et DECVS BAVARÆ FAMILIÆ. = 1662
i.e. Increase, therefore, thou young branch sprung from majestic blood, O Prince Maximilian-Emmanuel, thou glory, hope, and ornament of the Bavarian family!

The last emblem represents Ferdinand showing to his son the statues of their ancestors arranged in a long double line, and concluding with the chronograms which are on the frontispiece of the volume, preceded by these words—Vive felicissimè ad solatium populi! Vive, vive serenissime Maximiliane Emmanuel.

*Live most happily to the comfort of thy people!
 Live, Live,
 most serene Maximilian-Emmanuel.*

AUGUSTUS DUKE OF BRUNSWICK AND HIS FAMILY.

A THICK folio volume of 585 leaves, numbered consecutively, commencing after the introduction (which consists of about 100 more), making in all about 1370 pages (British Museum, press-mark 837. m. 5). The title is 'ARBUSTUM VEL ARBORETUM AUGUSTANÆUM, æternitati ac domui Augustæ Selenianæ sacrum, satum autem et educatum à Martino Gosky, L. Silesio Med. D. et archiatro, C. Pal. Cæs. Anno 1650.' Printed at Wolfenbüttel. There is a frontispiece, an engraved title-page, very many beautiful large emblematical engravings, portraits, and many smaller emblems. The purpose of the book is to applaud and congratulate, by prose and poetry, the Duke Augustus of Brunswick-Lüneburg and his two wives and family, on their marriages and the birth of their children, to commemorate the birthdays, and to lament the death of members of the family. It would be difficult adequately to describe the contents. The odes and poems are very numerous, often very figurative, they are serious, playful, and sometimes jocose; mostly in the Latin, sometimes in the German, and less often in the Greek, Hebrew, French and Italian languages. Anagrams occur everywhere, and chronograms are abundant. It is to the latter feature that I mostly confine my extracts.

The words of the chronograms are generally appropriate to the events. Some chronograms, especially in the later pages of the volume, have reference to that peace for which all kindly-disposed people in central Europe were sighing throughout the first half of the seventeenth century, when the country was being harassed and desolated by the successes and disasters of the Thirty Years' War. The Duke Augustus, it appears, was strenuous in his endeavours to establish this peace. In some instances the chronograms alone give the date of the circumstances described or alluded to in the accompanying text. A few of the chronograms are manifestly inaccurate through misprint or otherwise, and the text does not help to set them right, through the absence of a date expressed in figures. However, making allowance for errors, the work is a notable example of the application of chronograms to biographical history.

On the back of the engraved title-page, the object of the work is set forth in irregular short lines commencing with these quaint words, 'Lector avide et anxie, morare paululum, et cogita et examina Arbustum vel Arboretum hoc, quo etiam Serenissimi principis ac domini D<sup>ni</sup> Augusti, Ducis Brunovic. et Lunæburgi, vita, poeticè, et quidem varia carminis genere, variorum authorum commento et applausu effingitur et illustratur. Continet enim,' etc. (here follows a tabular view of the contents of the book, its divisions and sub-divisions). In continuation there is a page of engraved emblems in sixteen compartments. There is also a copious index of the names of the persons and places mentioned in the poems, which, as we are told, are by various authors. An introductory chapter is called 'Idea Arbusti' (the idea or plan of the plantation), a concise biographical narrative about the Duke Augustus and others of his family, with the dates of the leading events in his career, including his illnesses, with references to the poems where they are mentioned; such as—1579, 10th April, Augustus nascitur. 28th June, renascitur per baptismum. His going to the universities of Rostock and Tübingen in 1595. In 1597, Dysenterium laborat. He visits Italy, Malta, Belgium, London, etc., in 1603, and returns home in 1604. On 13th October 1607 he marries Princess Clara Maria of Pomerania, and on 19th February 1613 she dies. Concerning that event it is remarked, 'Cum autem spes hominum sunt fallaces, etc., nempe Clara Maria "Dux" Pomerana decimo sexto concordis conjugii anno, bis tamen immaturo foetu edito, piè et placidè occumbit, et somnum capit suavissimum, nunquam in Domini sui gremio molliter recumbens, laborem permutat,' etc. etc. On 26th October 1623, he marries again, Princess Christiana of Anhalt. The dates of the birth of their children are mentioned. In January and February 1642 there were some severe storms, 'horrenda et portentosa tonitrua et fulgetra cum grandine nivosa audita et visa.' All these events, and many more, are mentioned in the poems, with many a chronogram to mark the date.

In the 'Idea Arbusti,' the repairs done to the fortress and palace at Brunswick are indicated by this inscription—

ARX ATQVE VRBS GVELPHICA DEI AVXILIO, ET AVGVSTI
DVCIS, CONSILIO, POST TRISTIA ET EXITIOSA BELLA RESTITVTA
ATQVE RESTAVRATA. = 1644

There are many pages filled with verses addressed to the author by various friends. One eulogium bears this date—

ECCE SAT EXHAVSTI BELLIS SINE PACE FRVAMVR
SPES ATQVE IN NOSTRIS ARX BONA CHRISTE FOCIS. } = 1647
(Signed) Johan. Romschedius, P. Cæs. et Phonascus.

Some complimentary verses, applicable to the Duke Augustus, are dated by this aspiration for peace—

MARS ATROX CESSET, REDEAT PAX AVREA, NOBIS
VOX ET NOS TVRBANS, TRISTIA FATA FERET. } = 1648

And are followed by this chronogram, written by the author, of the year, day, month, and place of the birth of the Duke—

NASCITVR AVGVSTVS, DVX BRVNOVICENSIS ET LVNÆBVRGENSIS, FLOS INGENS PATRIÆ DANNENBERGÆ, LVCE X APRILIS. = 1579

On leaf 1 is this chronogrammatic dedication—

On leaf 2 some verses addressed to Duke Augustus are dated—(Signed) Paulus Sperling.

On leaf 43 the following, in the original arranged in short lines after the fashion of an inscription, mentions the universities at which the Duke Augustus studied—

VNIVERSITAS ROSTOCHIANA TVBINGENSIS ET ARGENTORATENSIS
 IN HOC PRINCIPLE BONI INGENII CREPVSCVLVM NOTARVNT. = 1597

On leaf 50, verses with this title, 'Adventum in academiam et bibliothecam Juliam,' conclude thus—Postquam Augustus Dux Br. et Lueb. peregratione tyrocinium posuisset, talis sub porticu inscriptio effulgebat ;

On leaf 51 some applauding verses are dated—Anno

On leaf 53 v. the title-page of the group of verses which occupy the next fourteen pages, combined with nicely engraved emblems, all in praise of the Duke, contains this chronogram—

ET FORTVNÀ ET HEROICIS VIRTVTIBVS PARENTIS VESTRI
 GRATIOSIORIS HODIE, ITA ET PERPETVÒ FRVIMINI. = 1649

The arrangement of a sentence in the form of a square, capable of being read a great many times over (perhaps several hundreds) in all directions, was a favourite device in applauses. There are several examples in the book now under notice, but only one in chronogram, which the reader will see on the next page.

A group of epigrams contains, on leaf 58, the following 'eteostichon' on the Duke's motto, 'EXPENDE SINGULA,' which has been the theme of some preceding verses and epigrams. The square can be read in every direction, commencing with the large central letter A. The words are, AVGVSTVS PRINCEPS EXPENDIT SINGVLA RECTÈ.

The last two words are at the corners; those on the left hand must be read backwards—

There is no explanation of this. The words of the square, together with the line which follows it, are a chronogram of the year 1647, when the Duke seems to have exercised good judgment about some public benefaction.

On leaf 62, among some congratulation poems, etc., on the marriage in 1607 of the Duke Augustus with Clara Maria, Duchess of Pomerania, etc., the widow of Sigismund Augustus, Duke of Mecklenburg, this chronogram occurs—

AVGVSTO EX POMERANÁ GENTE VXOR VIRTVTIBVS FLORENS
DESponsatVR. = 1607

On leaf 71 v., a madrigal in French, on the portrait of the Duchess of Brunswick and Lüneburg, is thus subscribed—Tertium matrimonium exprimebatur hâc chronographiâ

SOPHIA ELISABETHA PIA ET EGREGIA
MEGAPOLITANA PRINCEPS } = 1635
AVGVSTO CONIVGALI VINCVLO SOCIATA.

This lady, the Princess Sophia Elizabeth of Mecklenburg, was the third wife of Duke Augustus; they were married on the 13th July 1631.

On leaf 101 v. congratulation verses to Prince Rudolph-Augustus are thus dated—Calendis Januarii, Anno

PAX SILET VT, CHRISTE O EXAVDI VOTA TVORVM. = 1648

On leaf 111 the birth of the third son of Duke Augustus, Antonius Udalricus, is applauded—Anno

Vel.

INFENSOS HOSTES IVSTO PROSTERNE FVRORE } = 1633

(Signed) Gosky.

On leaf 140 the birth of a son of Duke Augustus and Sophia Elizabeth, Ferdinand Albert, is applauded—Anno

FERDINANDVS ALBERTVS DVX BRVN. ET LVNÆB. = 1636

On leaf 141 v. their daughter Maria Elizabeth is mentioned as being born, and born again in baptism, at Brunswick, on 27th January 1638. Some applauding verses are followed by this chronogram, formed on the words of the prophet Amos (v. 13), 'Therefore the prudent shall keep silence in that time; for it is an evil time'—

VVEIL EIN KLVGER CHRIST MVST GANTZ STOCK STILL SCVVEIGEN, IST EIN RECHTE BÖSE ZEIT. = 1638
i.e. Because a prudent Christian must altogether keep silence, it is a right bad time.

On leaf 144 the birth of another son, Christian-Francis, is thus dated—Calend. Augusti horâ intra 4 and 5 matutinâ auspicatò natus, et ex aqua et spiritu 29 Septemb. . . . renatus esset . . . Anno æræ Christianæ

QVO FVIT AVGVSTI LÆTVM POST NVBILA SIDVS. = 1639

And on leaf 158 the Duke is congratulated on the event by verses thus dated—Anno AVGVSTI DVCIS BRVNSVVICENSIS ET LVNÆBVRGENSIS FILIVS BRVNSVVIGÆ SACRO LAVACRO BEABITVR DEVS VORTAT BENÈ. = 1639

On leaf 161 v. this couplet occurs, after a group of verses—

EROGO DEO VIREAS AVGVSTI DIA PROPAGO } = 1642 ET VIREAS NOBIS FRONDIBVS AVCTA NOVIS.
(Signed) Martin Gosky.

This concludes the congratulations concerning the Duke's numerous family.

A group of 'Eucharistica,' complimentary verses and odes, commences at leaf 163, addressed to various persons. The following chronograms occur:—

On leaf 165 v. some verses are dated—

IN PRIMA FERIA ADVENTVS NOSTRI CHRISTI. = 1616

On leaf 171 v. the following occurs, called a 'Distichon Dædalicum,' which is previously explained as 'Distichon Dædalicum seu Cubus, ex quo tam Hexameter quam pentameter versus, in unâ eâdemque tabulâ legenti compluries occurrit.' The words, however, are not in this instance arranged in a square or labyrinth, only as follows—

MAGNA SELENE PROBIS DAS O VIR LAPSVS AB AXE = 1622
O BENE! TV MVLTO VIVE SELENE DIES. = 1622

This name 'Selenus' is a pseudonym of Augustus II. Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg, who was a noted student and writer on the subject of shorthand and secret writing (see my previous book on Chronograms, 1882, p. 230). He is eulogised in the part of the work now under notice, in poems very characteristic of his own manner of composition. The word 'Selenianæ' occurs in the title-page. Vide ante, p. 209.

On leaf 175, in the same group, an ode is preceded by this date—

Anno
EN LIBRO HARMONIAS VVLGAT TIBI BRVNSVIGIVS DVX, = 1646
vel

VITÆ CONCORDANS QVÆ AVGVSTO A PRINCIPE IVNCTA } = 1646

Another ode to Duke Augustus concludes, on leaf 182 v., with this date—Anno

PAX IO, PAX DATA IO, VT NVNC FVIT, ARMA RVVNT. = 1648

On a page opposite to an engraving having a page No. 216, there are some laudatory verses on the entry of Duke Augustus into Brunswick, with this date—viii Septembris, Anno

GLORIA IN NVBIBVS DEO, PAX SIT IN TERRIS
HOMINIBVS BONA VOLVNTAS. } = 1643

These words, with very slight variations, have been frequently used for a chronogram. The same chronogram is quoted from another work by Gosky in my former book on Chronograms, p. 295.

At leaf 218 and following, there are some 'Dædalean distichs' or cubes (i.e. sentences arranged in the form of a cube), such as that which I have printed at page 212, ante. As these, however, are not chronograms, I pass them over.

On leaf 221 v., among the 'Epinicia,' is this chronogram—
Annus erit memorialis.

ARX ATQVE VRBS GVELPHICA

Apollo igitur ad Cytharæ suæ sonum suaviter modulatur, etc.

On leaf 252 this 'chronodistichon' is at the conclusion of some laudatory verses—

CHRISTE DIV EXOPTATA HAC DA NOS PACE FRVISCII:
VTPOTE QVÆ CVNCTAS AVREA PRÆSTET OPES. } = 1644

The leaf 254 v. is filled with a star of eight rays, each consisting of an hexameter and pentameter couplet, sixteen lines in all. The title is, 'STELLA PACIS AUREA.' In the centre of the star is this chronogram, the words being arranged in a ring—

LVX VOBIS REDEAT, REDEAT PAX AVREA CHARA.
ADSIT QVIES ET AVREA. } 1 and beneath all, ANNO

AH MARTIS DENSAS PROPELLE JHOVA TENEBRAS

(Signed) M. Johanne Tzschoppelio, Chemn. Misn. Paro.

<sup>1</sup> This chronogram must be wrong. The first line makes 1186, the second 512; the total 1698. The author does not notice it in his 'errata.'

On leaf 257 v. a long ode is dated—Anno

DVX PIVS AVGVSTVS PATRIÆ DEDIT OCIA TVTA. = 1644

On leaf 284 a laudatory poem on the occasion of a religious ceremony at Brunswick, has at the end this date—Anno quo

HARMONIA AVGVSTI PRODIT PERFECTIOR : ERGO
AVGVSTO FERTE GRATIAS
ANNOS FOVETE AVGVSTI. } = 1641

Four fine engravings accompany this 'plausus,' representing a stately church, with a procession of the visit of Duke Augustus, the ceremony within, and a fine representation of the tower and spire. This concludes the 'Epicedia.' Then follow 'Neniæ seu Epicedia' on the death of various members of the family. That one on the death of Clara Maria, the wife of Duke Augustus, has an emblematical engraving, in which, among the accessories, there is a crown with the sceptre erect and the motto 'Hodie rex,' and the same device reversed with the motto 'Cras nex.' On leaf 290 there are these verses in which she speaks—

BIS NOVIES SOL ORTVS ERAT LVCE ECCE SEQVENTE
ASSERTA ÆTHEREO EST CLARA MARIA POLO. } = 1623
Clara Maria vocor. conjux ego namque duobus

Corporis exuviis positis nunc tertia Christi
Clareo sponsa, jugi qui mihi Phœbus erat,
Magna Urbs, et cum Castro splendida Luna valete
En solis radiis Clara corusco mei.

On leaf 291 v. there is this chronogram on the year, month, and day of her death, the 19th February 1623—

SOL FEBRVARIO ERAT BIS NONVS : ET ECCE SEQVENTE
LVCE POLO ASSERTA EST CLARA MARIA : SAT EST. } = 1623

And this distich : the first line gives the day, the second the year of her death—

FEBRVA BIS NOVIES EN PRÆTERIRE : SEQVENTI = 19
VIXI AC LVCE COLO CLARA MARIA POLOS. = 1623

On leaf 295, verses composed for the epitaph of Henry Augustus, Duke of Brunswick, who was born in 1625 and died in 1627. He was the son of Duke Augustus, junior, and Dorothea.

On leaf 297, the epitaph and various verses on the death of this Dorothea of Anhalt is followed by this date—Titulus chronographicus

On leaf 315 the death of Prince Christian Francis before mentioned is thus dated—

Another, on leaf 341—Anno

At leaf 345 a group of poems commences, under the title 'Strenæ,' (gifts or presents of good omen), addressed to the Duke Augustus and others of his family, 'olim et nunc.' The introduction, on leaf 346 v., concludes thus—Anno

An alliterative poem of thirty-four hexameter lines, every word commencing with the letter A, next follows.

At leaf 348, 348 v. These chronograms are associated with verses—

On leaf 369 are these verses to the Duke Augustus, alluding to the calends of January and his own 'last calends'—

<sup>1</sup> This chronogram makes 1642; according to the text it should make 1647. The author does not notice this discrepancy in his errata.

The group of 'Strenæ' poems on the year of Jubilee ends thus at leaf 387 v.—

Calendis Januarii Anni

On leaf 389 commences a group of poems and birthday odes addressed to the Duke Augustus, under this title, 'Encaenia, more veterum et majorum, non Stalagmia, Monilia, Phialas, Trabeas, Murenulas, aut Dactylithecas, non Toreumata et simulachra vermiculata, aut dædala alia opera, gemmarum, argenti et auri: non exquisita mensæ ingenia et struices patinarias: Sed tacito labello suspendo et introrsum sub linguam murmuror, Favente Deo, Applaudente choro, Ovante foro, Exultanteque thoro, Augusti, Ducis Brunovici,' etc. etc.

This is followed by an engraving, representing the Duke and his family at a feast out of doors under an emblematical tree, with the motto 'Natalis diei Memoria.' There are but few chronograms; the poetry is very fanciful.

On leaf 395, a birthday ode has at the end this motto—Anno GLORIA IN NVBIVS DEO, PAX IN TERRA HOMINIBVS BONA
VOLVNTAS. = 1641

On leaf 440, an ode in German is dated at the end thus—Anno

On leaf 452 this couplet occurs—Anno
ÆTHERE FLORIFERI LVX NONA VT FVLST APRILIS } = 1642
CONFECTVM LÆTÆ EST NOBILE PACIS OPVS.

On leaf 468, a group of 'Encænia,' called 'munera natalia,' birthday presents, contains this Chrono Tetrastichon.

Quæ tibi Natalem signet adeste Diem.

On leaf 478, some birthday verses are dated 9th April—
AVGVSTE O PRINCEPS, ANTIQVI NESTORIS, OPTO, } = 1647
VIVAS VT SEROS INNVMEROSQVE DIES.

On leaf 487, this couplet to the Duke Augustus, on having completed his sixty-eighth and commenced his sixty-ninth year, on the 10th April—

BIS QVINTA AVRORA APRILIS, NATALIS ERAT QVÆ } = 1647
AVGVSTI HEROIS, FAVSTA, DEVM ORO, VT EAT.

On leaf 504 v., some verses to the Duke on reaching his seventieth year, are dated—Anno quo

debitæ gratitudinis devotè et submissè porrigebat.

(Signed) Andreas Schwartz, Ecclesiæ Schelensis minister.

On leaf 512, the Duke having reached his seventy-first birthday, a group of verses commences with the title 'Currus fructiferus, etc.,' and this date at the end thereof—Anno

} = 1649

A large and curious engraving next follows representing a procession; in the sky the zodiac is represented, Leo (the Lion of Brunswick) occupying the centre, and the rays of the star in his breast descending on the Duke Augustus, riding in his 'fruit-carrying' chariot; numerous allegorical figures of peace, plenty, etc., form the procession.

Some miscellaneous poems come next, and among them, on leaf 557 v., some verses are dated—Anno

FORTVNA HEROICIS VIRTVTIBVS TVIS

DIGNA FAVORE PERPETVVM.

} = 1646

On leaf 564 v., a poem of fourteen lines, in which 'the Duke speaks of himself,' has this chronogram for its last couplet—

BELLVM TRISTE FVGIT: REDIT AT PAX AVREA TERRIS:

JVSTITIA ET PIETAS, ORBE FAVENTE VIGET.

} = 1649

On leaf 569 v., a short poem to the Duke concludes with this line—

VIVE DIV EX VIRTUTE, SOLVM GENITALE GVBERNA.

= 1649

And another poem following, commences with this motto—

JESV DVX VITÆ: FER TV NOVVA TEMPORA PACIS.

= 1638

The poem contains these lines—

Felici auspicio dicat ingredientis et anni

QVO TANDEM EX TVRBIS NOS EXTRAHAT HISCe JHOVA

= 1638

Cunctaque fausta petita orbi cum pace redonet.

The poem concludes with the following couplet, and the curiously arranged chronogram of the date 1638, which is designated 'Proteum Poeticum palindromum,' on the subject of peace long wished for—

ABSINT BELLA FAMES, PESTIS VIGATQVE REDVX PAX: = 1638

PAX VT IN AVSPICIO, MEDIO VTQVE IN FINE SIT ANNİ. = 1638

The line in the cross-ways of the circle may be read 4 times as a chronogram, and 24 times in all. (See next page.)

<sup>1</sup> This chronogram makes only 1644; there is probably an error, but the author does not notice it in his 'corrigena.'

AUGUSTUS WILLIAM, DUKE OF BRUNSWICK. 223

On leaf 577 v. there is a congratulation poem, addressed to Christian-Lewis, Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg, on 29th January—

Anno
 PRINCÍPI ET HEROÍ GRATIOSO
 CHRISTIANO LVDOVICO DVCI BRVNÖVICENSI ET } = 1649
 LVNÆBVRGENSI, PATRI PATRIÆ.

This remarkable work comes to its conclusion at leaf 585, without any more chronograms. The last date mentioned is 1650, at some verses on the jubilee of that year, with the title 'Lusus jocoserius.'

The Duke Augustus died in 1666; his son Rudolph-Augustus succeeded him, who associated his next brother Anthony-Ulric in the government from 1685 until 1704, when he died. Anthony-Ulric now ruled alone; he became a Roman Catholic in 1710, and died in 1714. Some medals relating to these Dukes are mentioned in my book on Chronograms, 1882, page 150.

AUGUSTUS WILLIAM, DUKE OF BRUNSWICK.

A VOLUME of tracts, thirty-four in number, labelled 'Panegyrics, etc.' (British Museum, press-mark 836. m. 23.) Tract No. 8 describes the illuminations at Jena to celebrate the birthday of Augustus William, Duke of Brunswick, on 8th March. Among the decorations and complimentary inscriptions were the three following. The first chronogram marks the date, 1715, the first anniversary of his accession; the second is not explained; perhaps it relates to his mother—

VIVAT
 AVGVSTVS
 GVILLIÆLMVS
 DVX
 AVELPHERBITANVS
 PATER
 PATRIÆ. } = 1715

i.e. Long live William Augustus, Duke of Wolfenbüttel, the father of his country.

VIVAT

Long live Elizabeth, the great delight of the world.

VIVAT

 ET LVNÆBVRGENSIS. } = 1715

i.e. Long live the august House of Brunswick and Lüneburg, and may it flourish for ever.

The next two tracts in the volume are, first, a cantata performed at Jena; and, second, a congratulatory oration spoken at Jena, in honour of his birthday. They contain no chronograms; nor are there any in the other tracts in the volume.

CARL THEODOR, COUNT PALATINE.

MEDAL to Charles Theodore, Elector-Palatine, to commemorate his visit to Heidelberg on 15th August 1746, taken from the engraving in the vol. for 1851-54 of the Proceedings of the Historical Society of Middle Franconia, p. xiii. Ob. his portrait. Rev. represents a lion in the sky, whose body emerges from the sun with rays in all directions, beneath is a city with a river in front; another lion rises from a hill in the background, and stands rampant towards the first lion. The medal is not explained; it bears this inscription, composed in hexameter and pentameter verse, around the device—

IRRADIAT MONTES CAROLI PRÆSENTIA NOSTROS
ET VELVT EXORIENTS PHŒBVS AB AXE VENIT.

} = 1746

i.e. May Charles irradiate our hills by his presence, even as the rising sun comes from above.

LUDWIG, LANDGRAVE OF HESSE.

IT is desirable that I should repeat here what may be seen in my former book on Chronograms, pp. 125, 126, in order that I may give a more complete extract from the volume there mentioned, and bring to notice a somewhat different copy of that rare book. And first, as to the folio volume in the Lambeth Palace Library (press-mark 13. c. 10). The engraved title-page represents a handsome sepulchral monument, with skeletons and emblems of mortality, with this title in the centre, 'Ehren Gedechtnus dess Durchleuchtigen Hochgebornen Fursten . . . Ludwigen Landgraven zu Hessen.' Marburg, 1626. There are curious engravings of the funeral pageant of Ludwig Landgrave of Hesse, many pages (from engraved plates) of complimentary verses enclosed within very pretty floral borders, genealogical trees, etc., also funeral orations and sermons to his memory at a later part of the volume.

At page 110 the members of the University of Marburg record their lamentation on the loss of their patron Ludwig, and invoke the blessing of God on his successor, the Landgrave George, concluding with this hexameter chronogram—

SCEPTRA REGAT FAVSTVS MODERANTE GEORGIVS AXE.

= 1626

i.e. May George reign happily, heaven moderating his rule.

A funeral sermon, at page 152, by Martinus Helvicus, with the text '2 Corinthians. v.,' is preceded by this chronogram couplet, alluding to the Thirty Years' War—Anno

HEV! PASSIM VLTRICI TERRET BELLONA FLAGELLO, } = 1626
 NOS PATROCINIO CHRISTE TVERE TVO!
i.e. In this year; Alas! Bellona everywhere terrifies us with an avenging whip; do thou, O Christ, defend us with thy patronage.

The second part of the volume is dated 12th November 1626, and has this chronogram at page 153—

DISPERGAT REX VIRTUTIS NOSTROS INIMICOS. = 1626
i.e. May the king of virtue scatter our enemies.

Among the 'grief and groans,' at page 180, is this 'Eteostichon,' expressing the date of Ludwig's death, the 27th July 1626, and of his funeral, the 18th September 1626—

JVLIVS EN NOVIES TER CELSO VT LVXERAT AXE, } = 1626
 PRINCEPS LVDVICVS LETVS AD ASTRA VENIT.
 BIS NOVIESQVE VBI LVX SEPTEMBRIS FVLSERAT, ECCE } = 1626 PRINCIPIS EXVVIAS, HEI, CAPIT VRNA LEVIS.
i.e. When July had thrice nine times shone in the lofty sky, Prince Lewis joyfully went to heaven.—When the light of September had shone twice nine times, behold the slight urn receives the mortal remains of the prince.

The other copy, above alluded to, was in the sale of the 'Beckford Library' at Sotheby's in December 1882, lot 1959. It is thus described in the catalogue (the title being the same as that of the Lambeth Palace volume), 'Engraved throughout and ornamented title, coats of arms, full-length portraits of the Landgrave and his wife, emblem, Landgrave lying in state, his family standing around the coffin, funeral procession, vault, chapel, genealogical tree, portrait of George Landgrave of Hesse, and elegant borders, red velvet binding, gilt edges; folio, Marburg, 1626. ** Very scarce; unknown to Brunet and Grasse.'

This copy contains the same engravings as those in the Lambeth Palace copy, with the additional one occupying the space of two folio pages, representing the deceased prince clothed in regal costume lying in state on his funeral bier; on the reverse side, within an ornamental funereal border are these chronograms, first the motto of the Landgrave, showing the year of his death—

IN REBVS DVBIIS TVNC TIBI FIDO DEVS. = 1626
i.e. In uncertain affairs, then I trust on thee, O God.

Then follow the two couplets given above containing the dates of his death and funeral, and this additional chronogram couplet—

ANNUM MORTIS BIS EXHIBENS.
 DISCE MORI IN VITA, POST FATA VT VIVERE POSSIS, = 1626
 HÆC PRÆSENS DVBIÀ EST: QVÆ SVPER AXE MANET. = 1626
i.e. Learn in life to die, that after death thou mayest be able to live;—this present life is uncertain, that in heaven above is permanent.

The Lambeth Palace volume contains 490 pages of letterpress more than the 'Beckford' volume. The latter was sold for £7, 10s.; the purchaser, without having seen it, was attracted by the catalogue note *.*. I cannot find a copy in the British Museum, and I know of none other than the two volumes here noticed.

I possess a volume very similar in character and subject to that last mentioned. It is a thick folio, containing about 720 pages and 83 plates, describing the funeral of George II., Landgrave of Hesse, at Darmstadt in 1661, and giving the particulars of the funeral pageant, and the whole of some exceedingly long sermons in German, and orations in Latin, preached and spoken on the occasion, both there and at Giessen University. The emblematical engravings are very curious, with their lugubrious accessories or prettily composed floral and other borders. The funeral procession must have been inconveniently long for those who attended it, it is chiefly interesting now for depicting the costumes of all classes of persons who were present. Other engravings represent full-length portraits of several members of the family in grand costume, and of the deceased Landgrave lying in state, the sepulchral vault, armorial shields, and genealogical tree. Altogether the engravings much resemble those in the last-mentioned work describing the funeral of Ludwig. The name of the compiler of the volume, and the author of whatever may be therein of his own original composition, is Johannes Tackius (or Tacki), doctor of philosophy and medicine at Hesse-Darmstadt, chief physician, etc.

The work is in two parts, with separate paginations. The first part contains the preachings, etc., in 480 pages; the second contains 238 pages of orations, epitaphs, verses, etc.; the latter bears this title—'Cedrus, æternitati nominis et famæ serenissimi principis ac Domini Georgii secundi Hassiæ Landgravii principis Hersfeldiæ, etc. etc. etc. Principis dum viveret optimi maximi virtute meritis gloria, nomine totius academïæ Gissensis, inter suspiria et lachrymas oratione publicâ devotissimè consecrata per Johannem Tackium,' etc. etc.

Among the engravings, that which is numbered 40 is a fair example of the doleful ones, and it is the only one with chronograms, which appear as if inscribed on a recess cut in a rock. Its character is likely to be overlooked in glancing over so many engravings, therefore I give in the accompanying illustration a facsimile of it somewhat reduced in size. The inscription is to be read plainly thus—

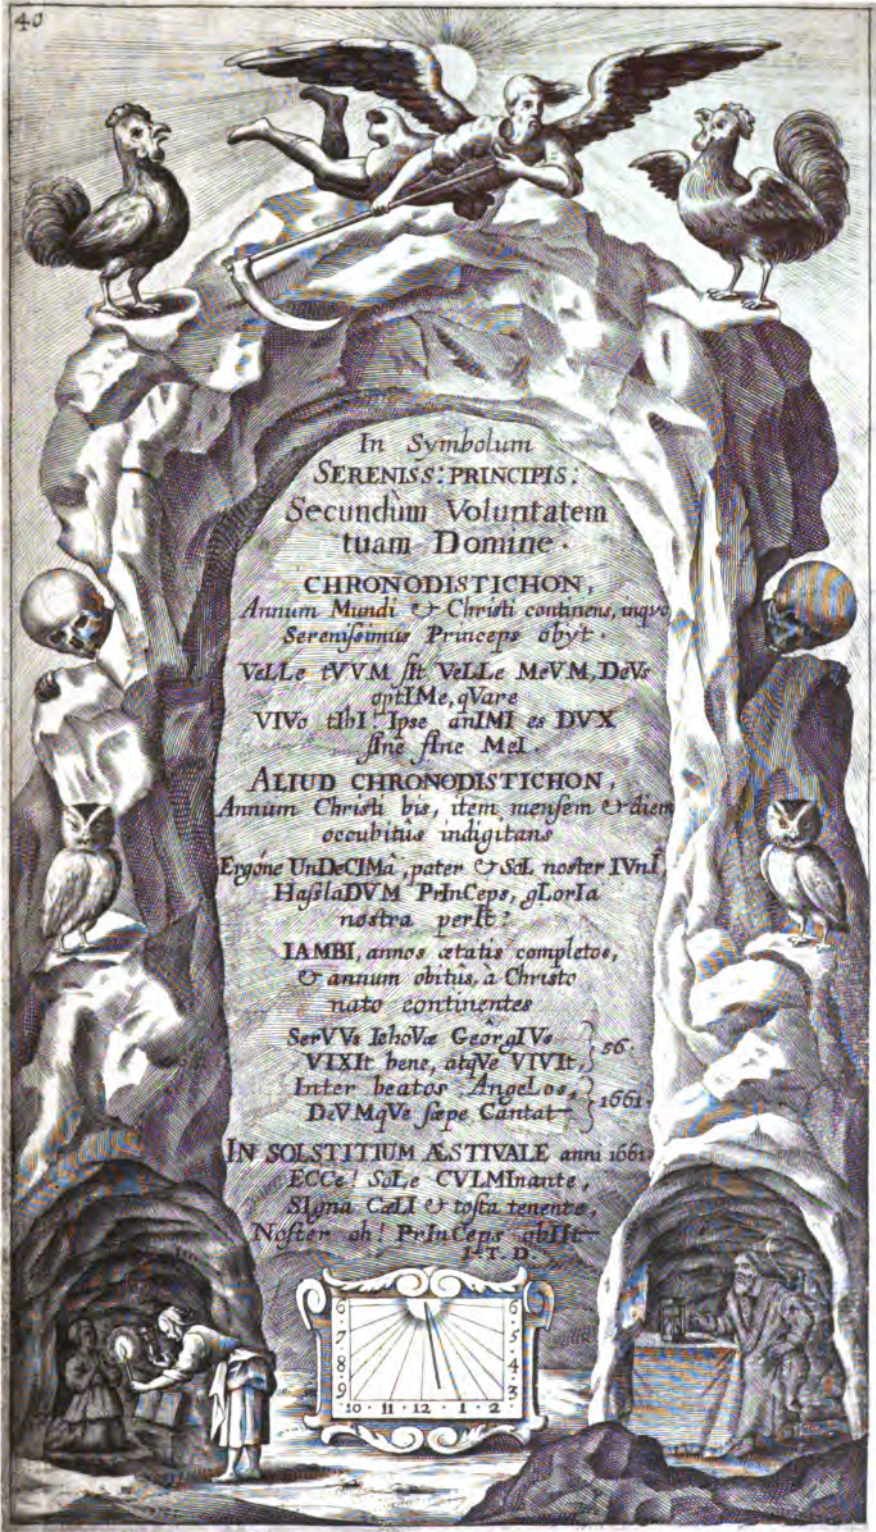

In symbolum serenissimi principis, secundùm voluntatem tuam Domine.

At page 385 of the first part a preaching with this title—‘Concio exequialis, gehalten von Johann Adolph Rüheln, Definitorn und Pfarrern zu Rheinheim. M.DC.LVIIIHII.’ A funeral oration in German, in which the speaker wisely brings to the front the Landgrave Ludwig, the living successor of George. The chronograms at the head of the discourse decidedly point to him; they follow immediately after the above curiously expressed date, meaning 1661—

IN NOMINE DEI; CHRISTI SALVATORIS:	=	1661
ET REGIMINE LVDWICI PII,	=	1661
DEI GRATIA SERENISSIMI NOSTRI PRINCIPIS HASSIÆ	}	=	1661
ET HERSFELDIÆ (sic).

i.e. In the name of God; and of Christ the Saviour: and in the reign of Ludwig the pious, by the grace of God our most serene Prince of Hesse and Hersfeld.

By correcting some of the errors in the original print, I have made the second and third chronograms to give the right date. The author of ‘Concio exequialis’ concludes at page 399 with the following

chronograms on the second year of Ludwig's reign, 1662, and introduces his own name in the third line from the end—

Anno Christi MDCLVII.

The second part of the work, after giving seventeen sets of lugubrious and complimentary verses, breaks out in chronograms. The ode number XVIII., at page 181, is as follows—

The next set of verses at page 182, and numbered XIX., are in a more cheerful style. They congratulate Ludwig in a most devoted manner on his succession to his title and dominions.

The first gives the day, month, and year of his birth, the 25th January 1630—

The remaining pages contain no chronograms.

In a topographical work, printed at Wiesbaden in 1821, I find this chronogram relating to William II., Landgrave of Hesse, who died in 1504. At this date all the territory of Hesse was under one government. At subsequent periods it was divided into the three principalities of Hesse-Darmstadt, Hesse-Cassel, and Hesse-Homburg. (I quote from a copy in the Homburg Library, C. 91)—

HASSO CREMAT TRISTI FACE FLENS PERIT ACCOLA RHENI. = 1504

GERMAN BISHOPS.

CLEMENT AUGUSTUS, DUKE OF BAVARIA, BISHOP OF PADERBORN.

VOLUME of panegyrics in Latin prose and verse, bearing the title CASTOR ET POLLUX, was addressed to this bishop by the Society of Jesuits at Paderborn in 1719. It is full of curious and fanciful compositions, and it abounds with chronograms. The copy in the British Museum is entered in the catalogue under 'Clement Augustus, Duke of Bavaria,' press-mark 9930. h.—folio, pp. 84.

The career of Clement Augustus is remarkable. He was born at Brussels on 16th August 1700. When but a youth he was appointed coadjutor to the Bishop of Ratisbon on 19th December 1715, and he was made Bishop of Münster and Paderborn in 1719, his complete election being on 12th March of that year, when he was barely nineteen years old. On the death of his uncle, Joseph-Clement, Archbishop of Cologne (to whom he had been coadjutor), he was elected to that see, and succeeded to all the territorial possessions and dignities attached thereto. He was chosen Bishop of Hildesheim on 8th February 1724. His own hereditary rank and title was that of Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, Elector of Bavaria, besides the rank of his several bishoprics, all of which he continued to hold for his lifetime. On the death of the Emperor of Germany, Charles VII., in 1745, he allied himself with France, in order to help the pretensions to the empire of his brother Maximilian, the Elector of Bavaria. The competition for the throne of Germany gave rise to an almost general war. The politics and intrigues which then existed engaged much of the attention of Clement. It is needless here to follow the troubled history of the period; but passing on to the end of this powerful prelate, and the cessation of all his work on earth, we find that he died of 'colic' at Ehrenbreitstein on 5th February 1761.

The chronograms now to be noticed relate to the year 1719. In the following poem, if it may be so called, the bishop and his deceased brother, Philip Maurice, are represented as Castor and Pollux, equals in their divinity, but only appearing on the earth day by day alternately. Philip (i.e. Castor) dies, and Clement (i.e. Pollux) survives and takes his turn of earthly honour and ecclesiastical rank for the rest of his mortal life.<sup>1</sup>

In another section of the poem the bishop is represented under the figure of a Phœnix, having his origin from the ashes of two renowned but remote predecessors, both named Liborius, one having been the first Bishop of Paderborn in the year 780, the other the patron saint of Paderborn, who was Bishop of Mans, and died about the year 397, and whose remains were translated to Paderborn in 836.

The volume has an inserted portrait of Bishop Clement Augustus at a more advanced period of his life than nineteen years. It shows a handsome profile, but tells not his age. The title-page is here given in full. It is too complex for abbreviation, and it contains two chronograms, one of them is also a logogryph.

Castoris et Pollucis felicissimorum siderum divisa immortalitas, sive Clementis Augusti, et Philippi Mauritiî fratrum serenissimorum virtutis, et gloriæ siderum duplicata felicitas, cùm serenissimo fratre

QVÆ MERITIS SANCTI PLAVDEBAT LÆTA RVPERTI. = 1719

<sup>1</sup> This allegory does not strictly follow the heathen fable, which is related by various heathen writers somewhat in this manner:—Castor and Pollux were the progeny of Jupiter, Pollux alone having the gift of divinity. They became powerful in the country of their residence, and set to work to rid the seas of pirates. In one of the battles with them Castor was killed, upon which Pollux, who was immortal, desired of Jupiter that they might share the immortality between them. This was granted, and thenceforward the two brothers are said to live and die by turns every other day, so far at least as the presence of one of them here on earth is concerned.

This 'logogryph' chronogram ends the title-page, and gives the date of the book, which was printed at Paderborn.

An address to the youthful prince-bishop follows, occupying ten pages, printed in a varied manner in long and short lines, and occasionally in single words, after the fashion of some inscriptions, including a few chronograms. At page 4 is this sentence—

Verùm non ità cœlitus visum est (Ovid, 4 de Pon. Ep. 9): nasciturus promittitur; atque ante vota occidit, et suorum gratulationes. Jamjam nasciturus superabatur: Ipsoque in ortu extinguitur. Nostro vix ostenditur horizonti Spem nostram, terras, deseruitque simul.

cœleste sede receptum. (Ibid.)

CVM FORTVNATIS SVSPICOR ESSE DIIS. (Ibid. lib. 3. de = 1719 Pon. Ep. 3. v. 54).

The subject continues to praise the two brothers Clement Augustus and Philip Maurice, under the form of Castor and Pollux, in a very elaborate manner, introducing this quotation from Ovid, lib. i. Trist. Epist. 3. v. 66—

VTERQVE
 O MIHI THESEA PECTORA IVNCTA FIDE! } = 1719

And further on, at p. 7, is this quotation, also from Ovid—

SACRA HVNC
 VIRTVS ADDIDIT ASTRIS. } = 1719

This string of praise and flattery of these 'Dioscuri' terminates at page 12, without any further chronograms.

A large engraving next follows, showing a portion of the Zodiac containing the constellation 'Gemini'; one of the twins bears in its forehead a bright star, which shines down direct on the city of Paderborn; it is not quite clear whether this is the star 'Castor,' the deceased bishop, or the star Pollux, the new bishop, the 'novum sidus' already mentioned, probably the latter. Then immediately follows a poem of applause of the new bishop as Pollux, it also describes the fireworks displayed on the occasion of his rising as a star in the diocese, and laments the setting of Castor, his fraternal predecessor; it has this title—

POLLUX

Festivos inter applausus Padernæ exoriens;
Sed occidens subito,
Succedensque

CASTOR

Sive
Ad fraternas infulas evocatus frater.

Then follows at page 17 a series of Eulogies on various Bavarian bishops from the year 1162, leading down to those who are the subject of the present eulogy on Castor and Pollux; the introductory page bears this title—

Passing over the 25 pages not containing any chronograms, we find at page 42 the conclusion of the eulogies, and these words, 'Hæc Leonis Siderii triumphalis Corona est, Isti de stemmate et sanguine Bavarico nominatiores episcopi. Hi viri sunt, qui suâ sibi cælum pepererunt Fortudine, Astra virtute, Gloriosissimosque Stirpis suæ Duces Sacrà serie, et luce circumdant. A panegyric fills the next five pages, on some of the Dukes of Bavaria and Bishops. Towards the conclusion the Duke Maximilian-Emmanuel (the then reigning Elector) is brought prominently into notice. The same subject is carried into a poem, filling nine more pages, but without chronograms. At page 64 commences—

Claud. in Cons. Mall. v. 226.

Some chronograms occur mingled with the text, and are here extracted; by being so treated, however, they lose something of their meaning and application—

Notwithstanding this expression, the prose concludes with a volley of flattering ejaculations. The poet then gives five pages of hexameter and pentameter verse, commencing thus—

This couplet is twice repeated in the poem.

This very remarkable book now draws to a conclusion, occupying two pages, which I here give, as nearly as possible, arranged as in the original. Observe these 'Logogryph verses,' a good example of that curious form of composition, and in this instance they are likewise composed in chronogram—

THE applause to the youthful Bishop Clement Augustus is continued in a gratulation by the Minorite brethren at Münster, composed almost entirely in Latin verse, and, with few exceptions, in chronogram of the year 1719. The British Museum copy has the press-mark 12301. m. 7 (catalogued under Clement Augustus, Duke of Bavaria). The title-page is as follows—

VOTUM GRATULATORIUM
 in adventu

Serenissimi, et reverendissimi Domini,

CLEMENTIS AUGUSTI

Episcopi Monasteriensis, et Paderbornensis, præpositi veteris ecclesiæ Ottingensis, utriusque Baviaræ, ac superioris palatinatus Ducis, comitis Palatini Rheni, Landgravii Leuchtenbergensis, Burgravii Strombergensis, S. R. I. principis, comitis Pymontani, ac domini in Borkelohe et Werth, etc. etc.

Domini nostri clementissimi humillimè oblatum, et dicatum à

Fratribus Minoribus S. Francisci conventualibus
 Monasterii ad S. Catharinam

1719.

Two portraits of the bishop at a later period of his life are inserted in the volume. The first is supported by the Bavarian lion holding a sword and the crozier in his right paw, inscribed beneath, 'Pietate et magnanimitate,' with an armorial shield. The second portrait is copied from a painting by Demarais, and engraved by Tardieu, engraver to the King of France in 1748.

The dedication to this young bishop, aged only nineteen years, follows next; it is contained in two pages full of flattery. It calls him 'Sol novus, sol lucidus, sol amabilis, sol gratus sub firmamento Ecclesiæ Catholicæ in Horizonte Monasteriensi exoriens,' and declares that 'Turres ære campano applaudunt, reboantia tormenta bellica fragore suo sydera feriunt, ignes missiles per aërem circumvolant, mirantur juvenes, applaudunt senes, populus universus congratulatur et jubilat, et jugem observantiam erga serenissimam domum Bavaricam contestatur; and so forth, down to 'Ita vovemus . . . humillimi clientes . . . Fratres Minores, etc.' The next page is filled by 'Logogryph verses,' commencing with this chronogram, and as the verses are a good example of that curious form of composition, I here transcribe them also—

VOTVM CÆNOBII DIVÆ CATHARINÆ = 1719
IO LÆTARE! ERIT NOBIS DVX CLEMENTIÆ. = 1719

Ut princeps magnus subjectâ â gente vocaris
Non secus ac clementi mente bearis

Agnus bile caret quamvis quis fata minetur
Pastori paret sibi ferre ingrata videtur

Talis es indutus naturâ et more bidentis
Mansuetus tamen benè dignus a clientis

Artâ bile caret novisti dura subire
Candidus apparet nequit hæc natura perire

Hæc te rectorem fecit natura bidentis
Gentis ad ardua majora futura videtur

Ordine quam læto quâ te pietate sequentur
Quam pede mansuetum post te probitate ferentur

Judico felicem tua quem benè cura tutetur
Sortis habere vitam si jussa et jura sequentur

Ut dux defendis populum multum que docetis
Ut lux accipit populum nulli que nocetis

Quisquis delato tibi ter gratetur honore.
Quisquis tuo gratato semper lætetur am.

These logogryph verses are printed in the original without punctuation until the full stop at the end.

A full-page engraving represents the armorial shield of the bishop overlaid in the centre by that of Bavaria; that is followed by a page of Latin verses describing the heraldic devices as typical of the character and virtues of the bishop, but they are not of sufficient importance to reproduce here. The verses are preceded by this chronogrammatic title—

BISHOPS OF PADERBORN, COLOGNE, OLMÜTZ, AND FREISING.

INSCRIPTIONS at Paderborn in Westphalia, from a work entitled 'Monumenta Paderbornensia ex historia . . . eruta, novis inscriptionibus,' etc. By Ferdinand prince-bishop of Paderborn and Münster. Lemgovizæ, 1714. 4°. (British Museum, press-mark 206. a. 13.—Fuerstenberg. F.) This bishop was also Baron Fürstenberg. At page 284, inscription in the vestibule of the Theodore Academy at Paderborn, in dedication of the building by Bishop Theodore, bears this date—

ANNO EPISCOPATVS
SVI. PADERBORNENSIS } = 1615
TRIGESIMO.

This Bishop Theodor von Fuerstenberg was elected in 1585. He built ('erigit') the University of Paderborn in 1614, and, according to the chronogram, dedicated it in 1615, the thirtieth year of his episcopacy.

At page 299 is this 'Inscriptio curiæ præposituralis Paderbornæ' (inscription at the bishop's palace at Paderborn; the first line alludes to a device in the armorial bearings of the family of Fürstenberg)—

At page 315. The epitaph in the Fürstenberg chapel in the cathedral, on the tomb of Ferdinand Antonius, Baron Fürstenberg and Canon of the Chapter, who died in 1711, commemorates also his relatives, William Francis Adolphus and John Adolphus, who were also priests, and buried at another place, is dated by these lines—

i.e. I hope that the three flowers of the clergy, created from the princely mount (Fürstenberg) have departed hence propitiously, and that lifted up into heaven they have been born again. What could they do, they have had enough of both lowly and high life; they lived rightly, therefore they continued here long enough. O reader! bewail not their but your own funeral. Do right, pray here (in this chapel), perhaps in this very hour you may die.

BISHOP OF COLOGNE.

ATRACT of four pages (British Museum, press-mark 837. k 11.-73), a poem in Latin hexameter verse addressed to Joseph Clement, Archbishop of Cologne . . . Prince and Elector . . . Bishop and Prince of Hildesheim, Ratisbon, etc. . . . Duke of Bavaria . . . Count Palatine, etc. etc.

In sacra solemnitate Patroni sui S. Josephi, pie et feliciter natalizanti,
Carmen.

Et vocavit nomen ejus Joseph. Gen. xxx. 24.
(Here follow the verses.)

At the conclusion is this epigram—

Si laus Pontificis pietas, pastoris ovili

This archbishop is the same who is mentioned at page 230 ante, as the predecessor of Clement Augustus.

WOLFGANG, BISHOP OF OLMÜTZ.

MEDALS to Wolfgang, Cardinal Bishop of Olmütz. I have mentioned him before, in Chronograms, pp. 247, 249.

A medal to him bears on the reverse side—

VITA ET ACTA VVOLFANGIDE SCHRATTENBACH EPISCOPI AC
CARDINALIS. = 1721

The medal is further inscribed with the dates of the various steps in his career, from his birth, in 1680, to dignity of cardinal in 1721.

Another medal is inscribed—

PROTECTORIS FAVORE ERGA SVOS || QVATVOR CATHEDRALIS = 1725
ECCLESIE PRÆLATORUM SACRIS INFVLIS DECORAVIT. = 1725

Another medal is thus inscribed, it is dedicated by the bishop to Saint John of Nepomuk—

HONORES. = 1731
SVB ISTIVS SANCTI PATROCINIO DOMVS VTRAQVE STABIT. = 1731

Another medal issued in 1730 by the bishop, to commemorate the confirmation in 1728 of certain indulgences by the Pope; the dates are thus indicated—

SVB FELICI GVBÑIO PRINCIPIS A SCRATBACH ANTISTITIS
OLOMVCENI RECVSA EST. = 1730
LAVDETVR IESVS CHRISTVS SVB GLORIA ETERNA AMEN. = 1728

JOHN THEODORE, BISHOP OF FREISING.

ARARE tract belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, folio, pp. 50, printed at Munich, bears a title to this effect :—The most happy union of the Lion of Bavaria and the Bear of Freising, celebrated by the muses of Freising on 19th November 1723, when the most serene and reverend Lord, John Theodore,<sup>1</sup> Duke of Bavaria and the upper Palatinate, Count Palatine of the Rhine, Landgrave of Leuchtenberg, Bishop of Ratisbon, was elected Bishop-coadjutor of Freising. The title-page, verbatim, is as follows :—‘ Leonis Boici, et Ursi Frisingensis unio felicissima, cum coadjutor Frisingensis, die 19 Novembris, An. MDCCXXIII. eligeretur serenissimus ac reverendissimus dominus, Dominus Joannes Theodorus utriusque Baviaræ, ac super. Palatinatûs dux, comes Palatinus Rheni, Landgravius, Leuchtenbergæ, episcopus Ratisbonensis. Celebrata a musis Frisingensibus. Monachii, typis Joannis Lucæ Straubii.’

<sup>1</sup> John Theodore was elected Bishop of Ratisbon on 29th July 1719, Bishop-coadjutor of Freising on 19th November 1723, Bishop of Liège on 23d January 1744; was made Cardinal in 1746; he died 27th January 1763.

Page 3. Dedicatory address in Latin to the most serene prince, in which the authors propose to offer congratulations to the 'Bavarian Lion' on the occasion of union with the 'Freising Bear.' This is accordingly done in the succeeding pages of prose and poetry, frequent allusion being made to the Scripture narrative of Samson, and the lion in whose carcase honey was found, and pointing to the well-known fondness for honey so natural to the taste of the bear; this allusion is intended as a symbol of the appropriate union of the episcopal functions consequent on the election of this bishop. In following up this cause of gratulation the muses are supposed to have promoted the erection of triumphal arches with emblematical decorations and inscriptions. To follow the description of them would be tedious. The praise given to the bishop may be ingenious, but the language used is florid, and the flattery is more than any one in the present day (except perhaps in Germany) would willingly endure. The best service performed by these triumphal arches is to bear the chronogrammatic inscriptions, which I shall proceed to transcribe.

At page 12, in allusion to the honey, it is asked, 'et quid urso charius melle?' The arch bears the answer in gilt letters—

ET DE FORTI (LEONE) EXIVIT DVLCEDO. ( Ibid. )	=	1723

These quotations are from the Vulgate Version, with slight variation, where Samson propounds his riddle. Again it is asked, at page 14, what can be more delightful than what is expressed in this couplet, which was borne by the second arch prepared by the Muse Urania—

The muse Terpsichore prepares the third triumphal arch, inscribed with these words, alluding to the house of Wittelsbach<sup>1</sup> as being so productive of bishops—

The Muse Thalia undertook the decoration of the fourth arch, which was inscribed with compliments to other bishops of the house of Wittelsbach—

The narrative now passes into a vituperation of Gebhard, Archbishop of Cologne,<sup>1</sup> who was declared guilty of heretical and scandalous conduct in the matter of his marriage—'Coloniensis ecclesie prædo, non præsul, lupus vorior, quàm pastor appellandus. Sceleris socia Agnes Mansfeldia fuit,' etc. etc. These chronograms follow—

GEBHARDVM COLONIÀ EXPVLSTI.	=	1723
GEBHARDO LVPO COLONIAM SVBTRAXISTI.	=	1723

An 'elegy' in hexameter and pentameter verse follows at page 29, wherein the Lion and the Bear are represented in strong opposition to Gebhard and his wife Agnes;<sup>1</sup> and at page 32 a punishment of their iniquity by those animals is hurled at them in words taken from the Vulgate Version of the 'Wisdom of Solomon,' xi. 16, 18—'Pro cogitationibus autem insensatis iniquitatis illorum non impossibilis erat Omnipotens manus tua immittere illis multitudinem URSORUM, aut audaces LEONES.' The denunciation of their conduct, enforced by allusion to the same offence committed by Luther, is accompanied by these chronograms—

DISPERGITVR LVTHER: LEONES EICERVNT EVM.	=	1723

Will a Lion roar in the forest when he hath no prey?

The Muses Calliope and Erato are said, at page 34, to preside over the emblematical decorations of the sixth arch, wherein the Lion is prominent; the first of the chronograms is from the 'Song of Solomon'—

VENI SPONSE DE CVBILIBVS LEONVM.—Cant. iv. 8.	=	1723
DIRIPIET LATERI, VIS, VIRGINIS, VLLA, LEONEM?	=	1723

<sup>1</sup> See remarks at page 256, infra.

A column bore this inscription, and Erato speaks an ode

Another column was dedicated and inscribed to Joseph-Clement,
'nomen jam astris receptum,' Archbishop of Cologne, lately dead—

IOSEPHO CLEMENTI

STELLIS INSERTO.

} = 1723

The seventh arch was prepared by the Muse Clio, 'magnis laboribus septimum generosa Clio arcum paravit.' It was decorated with Fauns, Satyrs, Hamadryads, and Oreads, to do honour to the bishop; the Lion is still prominent and supported by texts from the Bible, some of which are made into chronograms—

SIMILIS FACTVS ES LEONI IN OPERIBVS TVIS

IOANNES THEODORE.—1 Maccabees iii. 4.

Some passages are adapted from the poet Claudian in further praise of the bishop, including this one from Statius—

. . . SERENATIS PERFVSÀ NVBIBVS AVRÀ

METAS NESTOREÆ PRECOR EGREDIARE SENECTÆ.

} = 1723

The Muse Clio concludes the allegory in praise of the bishop in five pages of heroic verse, concluding with this address to him—

Magne Frisingani Comes, atque Adjutor Atlantis

Collibus Herculeo nostris succede lacerto :

Auguriis electe Deum, qui solius alto

VIRGINIS auspicio, LEO Boice, jungeris URSO.

GEBHARDT, ARCHBISHOP OF COLOGNE.

THE bishop who is alluded to at page 255 ante, is Gebhard II., Truchsess von Waldburg, Prince-Elector and Archbishop of Cologne; he was elected in 1578. He married Agnes Mansfeldt. This and other public acts of heresy brought him formally under the notice of the Pope, Gregory XIII., who addressed to the archbishop a pastoral letter alluding to rumours which had reached him, and remonstrating generally on his conduct. In my search for some information on this passage of history, I became acquainted with a very small book at the British Museum (press-mark 698. b. 46—Gebhardt, Elector and Archbishop of Cologne). The title is—'A declaration made by the Archbishop of Collen, upon the deede of his marriage, sent to the States of his Archbishopric. With the letter of Pope Gregorie the 13 against the celebration of the same marriage and the Bishops answer thereunto. According to the coppie imprinted at Collen 1583.—London, printed by John Woolfe. 1583.' It is an English translation, and printed in black letter. The Prince-bishop declares his adoption of the articles of the Augsburg Confession, and proclaims to all persons within his Archbishopric-see, not only the liberty of their conscience ('always agreeing with the Word of God'), but also the assurance that they should not be grieved, molested, or troubled by any governors or magistrates whatsoever, and he proceeds to declare freedom in other matters relating to their religion. This document is dated 16th January 1583. The Pope then addresses a strong remonstrance to him. The archbishop replies at some length, defending his conduct, and, after quoting the ancient authorities, goes on to say—'I am resolved, following the laws of the Church above mentioned, to leave that indiscreet vow of the "Celebat," which is not in my power to perform, esteeming that this is lawful for me, for avoiding of a greater evil, and for the better observing and accomplishing the vow of chastity which I made unto Jesus Christ; and in so doing I have framed myself according to the commandment of God, submitting to His providence, and staying His protection, not caring what evil men may judge, nor for the threatenings, dangers, or any other thing whatsoever, and having in memory that which Theodorus hath written in his fourth book, the tenth chapter, of the ancient Christians,' etc. The tone of this letter is firm and temperate, the archbishop asserts his own freedom of action, without defying the Pope, and exhorts him to 'cast away from him' those who offend in all the particulars which he specifically mentions, to the end that 'the Roman Church might recover her ancient dignity.' No doubt some great dissensions and controversies arose out of this affair in 1583, the remembrance of which was revived 140 years after, viz. in 1723, the occasion of the foregoing chronograms alluding to Gebhardt and Luther, prompting the bitter words which accompany them.

I find in Didot's Nouvelle Biographie G n rale, xlv. 678, that Gebhardt married clandestinely Agnes, Countess of Mansfeldt, Canoness of Gersheim, at Bonn, in January 1582, and publicly espoused her on 2d February 1583. The Pope and the Emperor interfered, and the States of Cologne declared that he should be deprived of his functions; the sentence was confirmed by the court at Rome, and he was excommunicated accordingly. Ernest was nominated to the archbishopric. After many troubles, and failing to engage the assistance of the German princes, he retired to Strasburg with his wife, and died in a state approaching to misery on 21st May 1601.

*FRANCIS-ARNOLD,
BISHOP OF MÜNSTER AND PADERBORN.*

A REMARKABLE, and probably a very scarce tract, belonging to my friend the Rev. Walter Begley, printed at Münster in Westphalia in 1710, folio, pp. 38, bears a title to this effect,—The temple of honour built up with every episcopal virtue to the eternal glory of Francis Arnold, bishop of Münster and Paderborn, etc. etc., Baron of Wolf-Metternich, by the college of the Jesuits at Cosfeld, on the occasion of his dedicating the church of St. Ignatius. The title-page itself is somewhat complex, and concludes with four chronograms. It is in substance thus—‘TEMPLUM HONORIS comportata ex episcopali fundo principalium virtutum materie extractum, et æternæ gloriæ Reverendissimi et celsissimi principis, et domini Domini Francisci Arnoldi episcopi Monasteriensis et Paderbornensis, . . . etc., Liberi Baronis à Wolf-Metternich in Gracht, domini sui clementissimi, In perennis animi Monumentum ab Collegio Cosfeldiensi S. J. consecratum. Quando Celsissimus hic Antistes Templum Ignatianum solenni ritu dedicabat; Nempé, Observe that the title contains no date in figures; also observe the logograph or network arrangement of the words of the last chronogram.

There is an engraved portrait of the bishop, which is subscribed with his titles, and gives the additional information that he was a prince of the Holy Roman Empire, that he was born 9th May 1658, elected coadjutor of Paderborn 15th September 1703, succeeded his uncle in the bishopric of Paderborn 23d May 1704, and elected bishop of Münster 30th September 1706.

The subject of the tract is entirely in Latin. On the back of the title-page there are many complimentary expressions to the bishop, in the form of Scriptural allusions to the Temple of God, which glide into this rhythmic peal,—

Poetica Campanarum Compulsatio, quæ
 Respublica latina, Gloriæ Wolf-Metternichicæ studiosa ad Templum Honoris evocatur.

Pages 12 to 34 are filled with panegyrics in prose addressed to the bishop, alluding to his genealogy and his armorial bearings, particularly to the Wolf and to his title combining that word; then proceeding in prose and poetry to represent the 'Temple of Honour' in various stages of its construction, comparing them to the virtues possessed by the bishop and to his mental and physical endowments; then passing on to the altar, the pavement, and the tower of the allegorical temple, until it is difficult to say whether the structure or the bishop is most honoured by the comparison. At page 34 we arrive at what here follows, viz. the utterances of Apollo and the nine Muses in chronogram, composed as 'logogryphs,' or network arrangement of the words. It is the longest composition of the kind I have met with throughout a prolonged search into the subject of chronograms. It first gives the finishing touch to the 'temple.' The whole is printed thus—

THE ARCHBISHOPRIC OF MAYENCE.

A HISTORY of the affairs of the diocese of Mayence, or Mainz, by various writers, entitled, 'Rerum Mogunticarum, etc. etc.' collected by Georgius Christianus Joannis, printed at Fraukfurt, 1722-1727. 3 vols. folio. (British Museum, press-mark 9325. h.) The archbishops of Mayence (Latin, Moguntium) were powerful prelates and princes of the Holy Roman Empire. Chronograms seem not to have flourished in the diocese with the same degree of luxuriance as in the neighbouring dioceses of Bamberg and Würzburg. The work now to be quoted being similar in character to the works by Gropp already noticed, is almost bare of chronograms, when abundance might have been expected, and some other of the local histories which I have searched may be included in the same comparison. The three thick folio volumes have yielded only those which here follow.

Vol. i. p. 987. Lotharius Franciscus, archbishop and elector of Mayence, was elected rector of the University of Erfurt. A medal thereupon bore this inscription—

HIS S̄VBNIXA THOLIS GERANA ACADEMIA SVRGIT,                      } = 1695 RVRSVS ET INSIGNI FONTE RIGATA VIRET.

Vol. ii. p. 994. Archbishop Lotharius was also Bishop of Bamberg. He consecrated his nephew, John Philip Francis, as Bishop of Würzburg on 9th November 1720. Medals thereupon were inscribed in hexameter verse—

INGENTI MAGNI PATRVI DE LVCE AFVLSIT.                      = 1720
 IN CONSECRATIONE NEPOTIS QVARTO IDVS NOVEMBRIS                      = 1720

 PRÆP. MOG.                      = 1720
 EN SACERDOS MAGNVS VNCTVS A PATRVO NEPOS.                      = 1720

Vol. ii. p. 905. Archbishop Joannes von Bicken was elected in 1601, and died in 1604. Both dates are contained in his names introduced into these verses—

SICUT ADAM A BICKEN BENE NOMINE DENOTAT ANNUM                      = 1601 INFULÆ : AD EXEQUIAS NOMEN ITA OMEN HABET.
 NAM IOANNIS ADAMI A BICKEN NOMINA RITE                      = 1604
 SI DIRIMAS, OBITUS SIGNA, NOTASQUE GERUNT.

Vol. ii. p. 450. Ambrosius Saibæus was made suffragan of Mayence—

DOCTOR AMBROSIVS SAIBÆVS SVFFRAGANEVS FIEBAT. = 1723

At the convent of St. Clara at Mayence, these verses were put up in the church to commemorate the date and the names of the benefactors who built it—

QVANDO POLI CLAVES DENVS GREGORIVS ATLAS, = 1272

ET VASTO MICHAEL OCTAVVS IN ORBE GVBERNAT, = 1272

Vol. ii. p. 799. The title-page of a catalogue of the abbots of the Benedictine Monastery of St. James, near Mayence, is thus dated by the author's name, etc.—

Vol. ii. p. 842. At the monastery of the Carmelites in Mayence, a statue of the Virgin Mary was placed by Charles Duke of Lorraine in 1689, in commemoration of the victories of the imperial army over the French, with this inscription—

VIRGINI MATRI

The Prior of the monastery subsequently added this—

THE DIOCESE AND BISHOPS OF WÜRZBURG.

ARTAUNUM has been regarded by the older geographers<sup>1</sup> as, according to Ptolemy, the ancient Latin name of Würzburg, and Herbipolis as the 'vulgar' Latin. The latter seems to be a translation of the German name into that language. Wirceburgum, another Latin name, has probably its origin also in the 'vulgar' Latin. Franconia Orientalis is the Latin form of Franconia, the territory in which the city lies; and Eoo-franconia has the same meaning. These names occur often in this present chapter. There is, however, another claimant for the name Artaunum, or Artaunon; the ancient Roman fortress in the Taunus Mountains, a few miles from Homburg in Hesse, known as the Saalberg, has been identified to the satisfaction of some German antiquaries with the place mentioned by Ptolemy; it may be that the two places bore the same or a similar name. I have before remarked that a search for chronogram inscriptions in public places and churches at Würzburg is disappointing, and it is remarkable that the place having been very productive of printed books containing a superabundance of chronograms, so few should now be visible there. It is possible that the restorer and destroyer have been at work, and that chronograms have met with the common fate of being 'improved away.'

A history of the diocese of Würzburg is contained in two thick folio volumes in my possession, consisting together of about 1817 pages, by Ignatius Gropp, of the order of St. Benedict, Prior in the monastery of St. Stephen at Würzburg, professor and librarian, and priest of the Scotch church of St. James. Very many chronograms are therein, which I shall proceed to extract, together with such portions of the narrative as may be needful for their elucidation. The work is replete with interesting and curious historical narrative, both sacred and secular, such as the lives of the bishops who had the rank of princes of the Roman empire and dukes of Franconia, and had supreme jurisdiction within their own territory; the other clerical dignitaries, the public institutions of the city, churches, monuments, epitaphs, shrines in the diocese, and the miracles said to have been wrought at them, copies of documents, liturgies in use in the diocese, forms of blessing the crops and of exorcism, legendary matters in verse, essays on morals, faith, and doctrine, the cause of the Swedish-German war (the Thirty Years' War), notices of civil and local history, and chronicles of events, plague, pestilence, and famine, storms, tempests, and floods, genealogies and memoirs of emperors, princes, and prelates, and, what most concerns my purpose, a harvest of chronograms. This is but an imperfect outline of the contents of these volumes. The whole is in Latin. There are many good engravings of buildings, and of the coins and medals struck by the bishops, and a fine engraved frontispiece to the second volume. The work is compiled in honour of the one thousandth anniversary year of the bishopric. The title-page commences, Collectio novissima scriptorum et rerum Wirceburgensium a saeculo XVI, XVII, et XVIII, hactenus gestarum, pro coronanda decies-saecularia aetate episcopatus Wirceburgensis adornata, etc. (the principal contents are mentioned). Opera et studio P. Ignatii Gropp, Ord. S. Bened., etc. Printed at Frankfort, 1741.<sup>1</sup>

Page 107. A chapter is devoted to a notice of the 'ancient burials of the hearts of some bishops of Würzburg in the church of the monastery of Ebrach,' a town in the diocese. The heart of bishop Julius, who died in 1617, was buried there, and subsequently removed to the university church, where it was entombed in a handsome cenotaph, described at page 621, with an inscription commencing 'COR JULII,' and concluding—

HONORATÈ HIC RECONDITVM. = 1707

Page 143. Many persons of distinction were buried at Ebrach. The following chronograms were among the epitaphs:—A pious benefactress, Matilda Teuffel (the name is put in the feminine form, 'Teuffelin,' literally she-devil), was buried 19th August 1330. That date was thus given<sup>1</sup>—

LVX PROFESTA FVIT BERNARDO, DESII VT ESSE, } = 1330

The death of her son Conrad, on the 23d May of the year 1348, was thus given—

The remains of Matilda were removed in the year expressed by her name—

MËCHTILDIS. = 1652

The abbot Peter, on 27th February, caused this removal when restoring the buildings destroyed by war, and this chronogram, 'complectens diem, mensem et annum translationis, et nomen reverendissimi domini translatoris,' commemorates the event—

TERQVE NOVEM FEBRVVS CLAROS CONSPEXERAT ORTVS, } = 1652

Page 76. Bishop Julius<sup>4</sup> rebuilt the church of the miraculous Virgin (Templum B.V.M. Thaumaturgæ) at Dittelbach, which was consecrated with great solemnity in 1613. Hither came often kings and princes, hither came the bishops of Würzburg, hither came the faithful of every age, and a multitude of both sexes came seeking her benign help. When, in consequence of the length of the journey, or from other causes, people were prevented from coming, they made valuable presents to the church. A splendid altar, with an image of the miraculous virgin made of silver, was given to the church by Prince John Philip of Greiffenclau, bishop of Würzburg. The accompanying facsimile of the engraving represents the throne, and the chronograms above and below it give the date—

And a medal thus marked the year of the jubilee—

Page 199. An educational institution, called 'Gymnasium Münnerstadiense,' at Würzburg, was opened in 1685; the first commemoration jubilee there was held in 1735, when these chronograms were made, 'in perennem ejusdem jubilaris anni memoriam inter alia, sequentia disticha chronographica ediderunt'—

In addition to the date of the jubilee, 1735, the first distich alludes to the peace which followed the war on the Rhine, between the emperor and the king of France; the second alludes to the return of Prince Charles to Vienna after his visit to Würzburg, the three events occurring in the same year.

Page 215. Johannes Godefrides of Aschauen, Duke of Franconia, the sixty-second bishop of Bamberg and Würzburg, from 1617 to 1622.

He is described as a man of austere habits, observing the most severe rule of life to insure the practice of every moral and religious duty; some of the particulars are very curious. He reigned at Bamberg thirteen years, and at Würzburg five years. He died at the age of 47, in the year thus given in his epitaph—

GODEFRIDVS VERVS D. G. EPISCOPVS. = 1622

Another inscription to his memory is thus dated—

GODEFRIDVS DVX FRANCONIÆ. = 1622

And another is dated thus—

PRÆNOBILIS FRANCONIÆ AVLA PÏO AFFECTV AC SERIO } = 1622
GEMITV ACCINEBAT.

Another inscription, alluding to the place of his birth, Aschauen, concludes with these words—obiit,

e comitiis Germaniæ Ratisbona abiit,

in cœlum ut speramus;

SIDERI PVRISSIMO SVO ASCHAVSIA TRISTIS. = 1622

Page 228. An elegy relating to his good deeds commences thus—

Page 281. Philippus Adolphus of Ehrenberg was the sixty-third bishop of Würzburg, from 1623 to 1631; the year, month, and day of his election was marked by the following 'chronophænomenon'—

Page 303. Jodocus Wagenhauber was made suffragan bishop of Würzburg; he was celebrated for his learning. He appears in the historical page as a 'bright star,' 'Annum mensem, diemque, quo per inaugurationem episcopalem ceu Mystica Stella suo splendore primum Franconico solo radiare cœpit, applaudentes sequenti chronodisticho animadvertebant;'

The narrative says that he was admitted to the cathedral chapter in 1618; and was raised to the dignity of suffragan in 1620, and consecrated to the episcopate by bishop Johannes Godefridus, 'propriis manibus,' on 18th September 1622.

Page 515. Petrus Philippus was the sixty-seventh bishop, from 1675 to 1683. There are some fine engravings of his coins and medals. One of the latter bears this inscription and device; it marks the university jubilee—

In the centre a hand holds by a ribbon two shields, each bearing three devices, the first being three rings for bishop Julius, the second three hearts for bishop Peter. The university was founded by bishop Julius in 1582.

Page 537. Joannes Godefridus of Guttenberg was the sixty-ninth bishop, from 1684 to 1698. On the decease of bishop Conrad in 1684, he was elected as bishop while only in deacon's orders. His election was confirmed by Pope Innocent XI. in 1686, and he was consecrated to the episcopacy on the day of St. Thomas of England (i.e. of Canterbury) the 29th December of that year. The date is thus given—

QVO SACRA CVRREBAT LVX THOMÆ PRÆSVLIS ANGLI } = 1686
 CONSECRATA ROSA EST NOBILIS HERBIPOLI.

The word ROSA in italics alludes to the rose, his armorial device.

Page 547. Here begins a collection of epitaphs of bishops and persons of distinction, occupying about sixty pages: many of them are dated by chronogram. At page 558, the eulogistic epitaph of Christopher Francis von Rosenbach, dean of Würzburg, is thus dated (observe the play on his territorial name)—

The epitaph of another lady in a church at Würzburg, who died on 31st August 1679, thus concludes—

The public lamentations of Franconia on the death of the German Emperor, Joseph I., were commemorated with the assistance of Bishop John Philip, by the erection, in the cathedral of Würzburg, of a great funereal structure called 'Theatrum Doloris,' which was loaded with emblematical ornament and inscriptions. Among the latter was the following, arranged in short irregular lines, but which I transcribe in a form more convenient for the reading of the chronograms—prince-bishop, on 13th January 1712. Triumphal arches and other decorations, adorned with pictures and statuary, were put up, all having appropriate mottoes in words taken from the Bible and several of the ancient classical authors. A description of the pictures would be tedious, and the inscriptions, when taken alone, are somewhat pointless; but as the latter were chosen to give out a modern date chronogramatically, they become noteworthy and curious. They are as follows—

He is described as 'Princeps magnarum virtutum, magnæ sapientiæ, magni animi.' His reign was short. He died, according to the concluding words of his epitaph—

There are no more chronograms in these interesting volumes. Not the least remarkable feature in the work are the copious indexes; they direct the reader's attention to a great many curious circumstances, and are a pattern for any one having to make that highly important appendage to a book.

Note on 'the Devil and his Mother.'

THE serio-jocose narrative at a preceding page (273) is further elucidated in another work by Gropp (the author of the two volumes we have had under our notice), a copy whereof is in the British Museum (press-mark 200. a. 17. 4°.) The title-page is, Monumenta sepulchralia ecclesiæ Ebracensis, Imprimis Cordium episcoporum Wirceburgensium. Deinde Gertrudis Augustæ, et ejusdem filii Frederici ducis Suevorum; Irenes item Augustæ et aliorum quorundam nobilium, Figuris æneis illustrata. Accedunt alia quædam monumenta historica. Colligit et edidit P. Ignatius Gropp, Ord. S. Ben. ad. S. Stephanum Wirceburgi Professor et Bibliothecarius. Wirceburgi, 1730.

The work is principally an account of the sepulchral monuments in the church of the monastery of Eborach in Franconia. At page 40 is mentioned the burial there, of the heart of Bishop Julius, and the subsequent removal and second entombment of it, at Würzburg already noticed. Among the burials of members of noble and distinguished families at the monastery at Eborach, we find at page 81 that of a benefactor, 'Nobilis Conradus Teufel cum matre;' the narrative goes on to say, Among the many benefactors of the monastery whose remains the church has received, are those of not the least of the Würzburg nobles, named 'the Devil' ('die Teuffel dicti'); this singular name is treated quite seriously; these members of the family of the Würzburg Devils ('Diabolorum Herbipolensium') repose under a handsome monument, an engraving of which exhibits them in full proportions of life-size in the costume of their period; 'they both lie buried here' ('die Teuffel und sein Mutter') Conrad and Matilda, they are described as good and benevolent people, and he was one of the poor brethren of the monastery. The fame of this monument was widely spread through the surrounding country, and crowds of people were attracted to come and see where the Devil was buried in a church. One of the abbots of Eborach made some verses and chronograms about them, which our author here 'opportunistically' repeats.

Then follow the chronograms already given at a former page (273), and then some complimentary verses concerning these renowned persons ending with this couplet—

DÆMON (non Stygius) cum genitrice suâ.

The monastery having been desolated during a war, was restored 'even beyond its pristine splendour' by Peter the forty-first abbot; the bones of the 'Devil and his mother' were exhumed, and deposited in wooden chests at the high altar of the Virgin, on 27th February 1652, as alluded to in the last of the chronograms concerning them at page 273 ante. Eborach is not mentioned in the ordinary guide-books (Murray or Baedeker), but in Zedler's Universal Lexicon, viii. 83, it appears that Eborach, Ebrach, Eberaw, Eborau,—Latin, Eboracum, Ebracum,—is a Cistercian monastery in Franconia in the vicinity of Bamberg.

THE Würzburg Chronicle, 'Würzburgische Chronick,' also by Ignatius Gropp, Würzburg, 1748-50. 2 vols. folio. In volume ii. p. 337, relating to the history of John Philip, the seventieth bishop, there are some verses in German on some great injury in 1658 by lightning to the Rath-haus, which was afterwards rebuilt by the council. This chronogram, said to have been inscribed on the dome of the tower, precedes the verses—

HÆC QVÆ FORTÈ, LEGES, PRÆSTANS CONCEPTA SENATVS } = 1568
SCRIBERE CVRABAT, POSTERITATIS AMANS.

ALMA PROLE FVNDASTI VACVOS PENATES; = 1716
NEO-NATE ARCHIDVX RECREAS ORBEM. = 1716

This prince was Leopold, the son of Charles vi.; he lived only a few months. At another place in this volume I have transcribed numerous chronograms composed in honour of this infant.

CHRISTOPHER FRANCIS, BISHOP OF WÜRZBURG.

A RARE tract belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, pp. 8. folio, contains a congratulation to Christopher Francis,<sup>1</sup> of the noble family of Hutten, who was elected Bishop of Würzburg in 1725. The subject is treated, firstly, in a series of eight poetical stanzas in Latin, with German versions printed side by side, the first of which is preceded by a 'programma' in chronogram, and then each stanza in succession is preceded by a chronogram which is an anagram on the 'programma,' and is also the theme of the verses which accompany it; this is a notable instance of eight chron-anagrams composed with the letters of the same original words. Secondly, some 'cabbala' lines give the date 1725, and some conversational chronograms draw a moral from the wet weather which happened on the occasion. Thirdly, the event is applauded in a chronogrammatic ode in Sapphic metre. And lastly, there is a curious feature, viz., a long conversation between two men of Franconia, one of whom asks the questions or makes the remarks, the other answers in chronograms; the first eight of his replies are in 'pure' chronogram, i.e. every letter counts as a numeral; occasionally, however, the sense is somewhat sacrificed to the exigency of the chronogram. The remaining replies are made in appropriate quotations from the Bible, Vulgate Version. The subjects under their discussion are various, such as the character and disposition of the new bishop, the circumstances and ceremony in the cathedral of Würzburg, the chattering and laughing of some of the female spectators there present, the architect of the new palace and what he said to the sculptor employed in the ornamentation of it, the soldiers with beards two feet in length, the people who quarrelled after drinking too freely, the conversation is concluded by the two worthy Franconians drinking the bishop's health and going forth to see the illuminations. I have given a full transcript of this amusing colloquy. It appears from the last line of the tract that the authors were certain brethren of the Franciscan monastery at Würzburg; it commences thus—

EUCCHARISTICON.

Franconiam, Novum Phoebum
Suspirantem, Echo solatur.

Then follows a set of echo verses, during the recital of which Phoebus is supposed to be present; Franconia then pronounces the i.e. Hurrah! twice and thrice hurrah! long live Christopher-Francis, Duke of Franconia, and by the grace of God the new light, the new bishop of Würzburg, the father of his country!

Then comes the first anagram on the foregoing chronogram<sup>1</sup>—
 HIC VIR SVA VI SPIRITV, VERÈ EXCELSVS PONTIFEX EST, PRO TE O! BONA STIRPS, GLORIA HVTTENIANA, AC PRO TE O!

i.e. This man by his own force and spirit is truly an exalted prelate, for thee O good branch is the glory of the Hutten family, for thee O Würzburg is he sacrificing to God on the holy altar.

The second anagram.

The seventh anagram.

 RORE VNCTVS AARON FACTVS PVRA DEI PACIS HOSTIA, HONORI
 EXCELSI IN PIETATE SACRA. (This makes 1724.)

The eighth anagram.

HEVS Ô! BONA, PIA, Ô! DEO PRONA STIRPS HVTTENIANA HIC
 TIBI EST PONTIFEX, VARIO AC GRAVI SPIRITV EXCELLENS, VERÈ RARVS PRO TE ILLI DEO SACRIFICANS.

(This chronogram is sic in original and must be wrong. It makes 1770.)

<sup>1</sup> I am under the necessity of remarking that on testing the accuracy of the eight anagrams, each is found to be imperfect to the extent of one to six or eight letters, a matter for which the printer of the original is by no means responsible. The number of letters to be used is 112, and it would have been a triumph of ingenuity if the anagrams had been faultless by using every letter of the 'programma' throughout the series; all anagrams should be thus strictly composed, but as the rule is not so carefully followed here the anagrams must be condemned, in that respect, as exceptionally bad. Some are also faulty as chronograms. It will be seen, on translating the anagrams, that they draw a comparison between the bishop and the Jewish priestly characters in the Old Testament.

The author's fancy then runs wild in praise of the new bishop in a threefold set of questions and answers to account for the gentle rain which happened on the occasion, the answers are given in 'cabbala' sentences which contain the date, and by chronograms composed on appropriate Biblical quotations giving also the same date.

preach the gospel to the German idolaters in Franconia. These missionaries converted and baptized great numbers at Würzburg, and, among others, Gosbert, the duke of that name, who had married his deceased brother's widow, and being reminded by Kilian that such a marriage was condemned, and void by law, he promised to dismiss her. She, in revenge, sent assassins, who privately murdered the missionaries in 688. Their remains were translated to Würzburg Cathedral by Bishop Boniface in the following century. The murderers are said to have perished miserably. Several authorities are quoted for these and other facts, in Butler's Lives of the Saints, under the calendar date of 8th July.

There was Conrad I., Count of Franconia and King of Germany in 912; Conrad II., Duke of Franconia and King in 1024; and five bishops Conrad, at the respective dates 1197, 1266, 1519, 1540, and 1683.

<sup>1</sup> These are all called 'pure chronograms.' Perhaps there are not more than thirty Latin words that could be so used.

<sup>2</sup> The quotations are made from the Vulgate Version of the Bible. The places are the same as in the English translation, with but few exceptions.

FREDERIC CHARLES, BISHOP OF WÜRZBURG AND BAMBERG.

SOME tracts contained in a volume in the British Museum (press-mark 1230. i.), relating to the Bishops of Würzburg and Bamberg, similar in character and purpose to those mentioned in my former volume on Chronograms, page 473. Würzburg,<sup>1</sup> in the province of Franconia, one of the most ancient and historically important towns of Germany, has for upwards of 1000 years been the capital of an episcopal see, over which 82 bishops have successively presided.

Tract 2 has this title, 'Illustrissima Domus Schönborniana Infulâ et Pileo Ducali jam tertio gloriosa . . . quando . . . D. Fridericus Carolus S. R. I. princeps et episcopus Bambergensis,' etc. (was elected bishop of Bamberg on 18th May 1729. It is a congratulation by the Society of Jesuits there, in a series of Latin odes and epic poems, concluding at page 27 with this chronogram—

Tract 3 has this title, 'Beschreibung deren illuminationen und Freuden-feuren,' etc. A description of the illuminations on the occasion of the festival held in honour of Friedrich Carl, Bishop of Würzburg, on 18th May 1729. All in German, about 24 pages.

Among the public decorations of the streets of the town there were many Latin and German inscriptions, and these chronograms—

FRIDERICO CAROLO
PRINCIPI PIO, SAPIENTI, PACIFICO,
VITA, ET DIVTVRNA FELICITAS. } = 1729

His illuminated portrait bore this inscription—

FRIDERICO CAROLO
EPISCOPO BABENBERGENSI ET HERBIPOLENSI
FRANCIÆ ORIENTALIS DVCI,
PIO, GLORIOSO, SAPIENTI,
TER EXOPTATO. } = 1729

And underneath the portrait was this inscription—

PERPETVOS SVOS IN IGNE AMORES,
ET PERENNIA OBSEQVIA
ACCENDVNT ET OFFERVNT: } = 1729

J. M. H. J. H. F. J. P. L.
(These are the initials of the donors of the work.)

A representation of a fountain bore this inscription—
FONS SACER IN CÆLIS, HESTERNO SOLE CORVSCAT.

And another fountain bore this, alluding to the bishop—
QVANDO NOVO TERRIS HODIE FONSPVLCHER HONORE
EFFVLGET. } = 1729

SACRIS HIS COMITIBVS, IVSTITIA ATQVE PRVDENTIA REGNABIT. = 1729
QVARE LAVDATE EVM IN SONO TVBÆ, IN PSALTERIO ATQVE

A statue of Mercury greeted him with this verse—

ICH BRINGE DIR AVS GV TEN MVTH

This complimentary inscription was conspicuous—

ES ERLEBE DOCH VNSER GROSSE FVRST FRIDERICH CARL

The picture of the imperial eagle was inscribed—

DEI GRATIÀ, ET FAVENTIBVS AQVILIS

And a portrait of the bishop accompanying it had this bilingual inscription—

A lion in an emblematical picture was inscribed—

A picture of a stag at a water-brook was inscribed with words adapted from Psalm xlii. 1—

SICVT CERVVVS SITIENS FESTINAT AD FONTES AQVARVM. = 1729

Another emblematical picture was inscribed—

Another picture, an emblematical representation of the sun, was inscribed—

VIVAT LONGÆVAS FRIDERICVS Vt IMPLEAT HORAS. = 1729

Some other emblematical decorations bore this inscription—

PRÆCIPVVM VIRTUTE TIBI DECVS. = 1729

An illuminated picture was inscribed in Spanish and Latin—

Some emblematical pictures, put up by a certain physician, representing flowers and a botanic garden, bore these inscriptions, wishing long life to the bishop—

The words printed Ij count as Y=2.

Lucem redde Tuæ Dux bone Patriæ!
Instar Veris enim vultus ubi Tuus

AFFVLGET POPVLO, PVRIOR EST DIES,
ET SOLES MELIVS NITEVNT. } = 1729

Some illuminated decorations, put up by a certain goldsmith, bore these chronograms among other inscriptions—

TVTA PER HOC OMNIBVS ATQVE INDVBITATA SECVRITAS. = 1729

SCHVTZ VND GEVVISSE SICHERHEIT VOR DEN FEINDEN. = 1729

A picture illuminated, representing a flower which blossoms in May, out of which proceed a bishop's cap and a ducal hat, the head-gear of the Prince Bishop of Würzburg, and alluding to the month of May, when this festival was held. It bore this inscription—

INTEREA TIBI DIVINABO, OPTATVS CAROLI FLOS IN MAIO
EXISTENS. = 1729

A picture shield, on which were painted a lion and a submissive lamb. The lion in this and some of the foregoing decorations seems to be connected with the bishop's dignity of a duke, and no doubt it was well understood by the people of Franconia and Würzburg. It bore this inscription—

EGO SVM PASTOR BONVS, FONVS LENIS, DICTVSQVE PATER PATRIE
GLORIOSVS. = 1729

Some decorations represented fountains as the sources of rivers—the rivers Main and Regnitz, which flow through Würzburg and Bamberg. They were thus inscribed with words adapted from the Book of Esther, x. verse 6, and made in allusion to the bishop as the fountain of the gifts and graces of the Spirit—

Fons, qui crevit in fluvium, et in Lucem Solemque conversus est, et in aquas plurimas redundavit. Esther
x. 6.

The verses extend further, but not in the form of chronograms; they are followed by this inscription, which was placed under the ducal arms—

ES LEBE EIN LANGES LEBEN FRIDERICH CARL GEBORNER GRAF
VON SCHONBORN, VVVRTZBVRGER BISCHOFF, HERTZOG DEREN
FRANCKEN. = 1729

This was followed by a picture of a fountain and flowers inscribed, in allusion to the vivifying influence of the bishop—

QVI HIC HAVRIS AQVAS, VIDE, VT FONTEM CORONES. = 1729

EIN IEDVVEDER ER SO HIER VVASSER SCHOPFFET CRONE DIESEN
BRVNNEN. = 1729

Komm Ober-Unter-Franckenland
Crone diesen brunnen,
Dann das gute euch wohl bekant,
So daraus geronnen.

There were some decorations inscribed with many quotations from the Old Testament, relating to Solomon, the throne of David, and the attributes of mercy and judgment, and applying all more particularly to Würzburg and Bamberg, and to the bishop—

ER SATZ AVF DEN THRON SEINES VATTERS DAVIDS, SEIN REICH WAR VBERAVS STARCK BEFESTET. 3 Reg. 2 Cap. v. 12. (= 1 Kings
ii. 12.) =

ICH WILL SEINEN THRON BEFESTEN EWIGLICH, ICH WILL SEIN
VATTER SEIN, ER SOLL MEIN SOHN SEIN. 1. Paral. xii. = 1729

This reference is to Paralipomena, i.e. the Book of Chronicles. The subject of the chapter here mentioned does not apply; it is possibly intended for 1 Chron. xxii. and xxiii.; or more likely for 2 Samuel vii. 13 and 14—‘He shall build an house for my name; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son.’ See also 1 Kings v. 5, 1 Chron. xxii. 10, and xxviii. 6. The chronogram makes 1666, and probably in that respect is erroneous, and I cannot explain or rectify it. That year is not that of the bishop’s birth; he was born in 1674. See my former book on Chronograms, page 499.

The next inscription invokes the blessing of long life for the Franconian bishop—

ES LEBE FRIDERICVS CAROLVS, BISCHOFF ZV WIRTZBURG, HERTZOG ZV FRANCKEN LANGES LEBEN DER FRANCKEN! = 1729

Among other decorations the following inscriptions were put up—

SVRREXIT LEO FORTIS EX NOBILI DOMO SCHONBORN. = 1729

ESTO PRINCEPS NOSTER
POPVLVS TVVS SALVTARI SPERAT IN TE DOMINE. } = 1729

FRIDERICVS CAROLVS A SCHONBORN FRANCONIÆ DVX
CÆLO CONSENTIENTE,
PROSPERÈ REGAT! } = 1729

The remaining two pages of the tract are full of compliment, eulogy, and praise of the bishop, but not in chronogram. This anagram occurs, on his name, which is made to represent the aspiration that he may flourish in Franconia—

Fridericus Carolus.

Anagram.

Circa rus (puta Franconiæ) flores diu.

JOHN, BISHOP OF CRACOW IN POLAND.

AN applauding poem was addressed to John, Bishop of Cracow, by Michael Glosowicz. The following is a transcript of the entire tract in the Bodleian Library (the present press-mark, Libb. Polon.—pp. 4, size 7 × 6 inches). It is probably a very rare one, and I know of no other copy. Owing to the peculiar arrangement of the words of the Latin title, it is difficult to render it precisely in English; but its intention may be expressed in the following translation, and I place it before the original, so that it shall not interfere with the continuity of the Latin composition. Poetical gratulations of this sort were frequent in Flanders, and in many parts of Germany (examples are given in this, and in my former volume on Chronograms), addressed to the Austrian and Spanish governors of the Netherlands, and to some of the German Emperors, the rectors of universities, the bishops in Franconia, and other persons of note; but this is the only one that I know of belonging to Poland, and it may be presumed that the author of it was a native of that country. A long search among works relating to the bishops of Cracow has not disclosed to me any similar effusion. At the period of the composition, the Latin was, and had been for a long time, the language of the Court and of the higher literature of the nation.

It will be noticed that the author 'sings' his chronograms in hexameter and pentameter Leonine verses, each couplet making the year 1742; and that he introduces another conceit after the fashion of German writers, in the nature of an acrostic. The initial letters of the hexameter lines of the acrostic on page 304 infra form the words IOANNES VIVE DIU—(i.e. O John live long), by reading such letters down the columns as arranged, five times repeated ; and he concludes with an apology in hexameter and pentameter verse. The notes are from the original. Now for the translation of the title—

GERMAN MONASTERIES.

UNDER this title in my former book on Chronograms, at page 235, several monasteries are mentioned with only a few associated chronograms, and at page 244 the monastery of Olmütz with quite a harvest of them ; at other places in the same book, chronograms originating at monasteries, and having some special historical or local allusion, are arranged with the panegyrics and pageants. The present chapter will contain chronograms from some other monastic institutions which my extended researches have led me to observe.

THE MONASTERY OF AMORBACH.

THE commemoration, on 12th to 19th September 1734, of the completion of 1000 years since the foundation of this Benedictine monastery<sup>1</sup> in the archbishopric of Mayence, is related in a folio volume in my possession entitled 'Ætas mille annorum antiquissimi et regalis monasterii B. M. V. in Amorbach, Ord. s. Bened. in archi-diocesi Mogunt,' etc. By Ignatius Gropp.<sup>2</sup> Printed at Frankfort, 1736. There is a handsome engraved frontispiece, representing the Virgin Mary above in glory, accompanied by four saints, from whom proceed rays of light shining downwards on the model of the monastery church, supported by the hands of two kings,<sup>3</sup> one prince and a saint, who had been patrons and benefactors, standing in the foreground ; the well of Saint Amor, 'Amors-brunn,' giving its name to the place, is also represented in the left-hand corner of the engraving. Among the groups of figures are seen inscriptions on scrolls, floating about as it were in mid-air ; one of them is in chronogram, thus—

ISTIS SVB PATRONIS EXTAT MILLE ANNIS.

= 1120

---

<sup>1</sup> The Monastery of Amorbach is in the vicinity of the village of that name in the Odenwald, near Michelstadt, and some distance north-east of Heidelberg. It is now suppressed ; it once contained a fine library.

<sup>2</sup> See pages 272 to 286 ante, other monastic histories by the same author. A copy of this work is in the British Museum.

At this time the monastery was ruled by prior Engelbert; his portrait is accompanied by a special dedication to him on the occasion of the jubilee, signed thus by the author—

HISCE, PIO EX CORDE
SERVVVS GRATABATVR INFIMVS } = 1734
F. Anselmus Gropp.

Ord. Erem. S. P. Aug. presbyter indignus.

Five pages of complimentary verses in hexameter and pentameter metre next follow, accompanied by acrostics on the name Engelbert, with the following intervening chronograms connected with the subject.

B LANDIOR AT PRO TE SORS, ENGELBERTE, REFVLsIT
EX ISTIs ETENIM BIs TIBI QVINQVE LEGES. } = 1734

He is addressed as the new Samson, more powerful than Samson the son of Manoah. The verses include this chronogram, in which he is addressed as 'Manuade,' i.e. O son of Manoah—

AC TOT, IO PÆAN! TOT, IO! ANNI NONNE SVBACTI
SVNT TIBI, MANVADE QVOT PERIERE VIRI. } = 1734

The angelic sound of his name is alluded to in the next verses, concluding thus—

CLARIOR HIC VT TE, sIT IN HOc LONGÆVIOR ORBE:
CVNCTA INIMICA TERAT, QVÆQVE BENIGNA FERAT. } = 1734

His similitude to Samson is further shown by declaring that sweetness comes from his strength; the verses conclude with—

QVOS COLIS ANTISTES SED, O ENGELBERTE, PENATES
DIRVERE ID NEQVIIT, SEGNIVS HISQ: FVIT. } = 1734

The series of verses are followed by a wish by the author that he may enjoy uncommon happiness for many years, concluding with—

ISTO BREVI CARMINE
GRATVLARI QVO AVSVS ET APPLAVDERE } = 1734

The next verses, still alluding to Samson, include these lines—

QVARE AGITAS DIGNIS SOLENNIA FESTA TRIVMPHIS
FASQVE IVBET LÆTOS INTONVISSE CHOROS. } = 1734

The last set of verses are addressed to the author, Ignatius Gropp, by one of his admiring brethren. Allusion is made to the name of the monastery, Amorbach, derived from that of the first Abbot Saint Amor, and to the fountain of healing water flowing at the place. This is the concluding chronogram—

HÆC NOVA SVNT ERGO GVSTANTI RARAQVE MVNDO
SI POTERIS, FRATER, TALIA PLVRA REFERT. } = 1734

The history now commences. At page 1 of the book an engraving represents the monastery enclosed within walls, with young and full-grown angels floating in the air above, the former bearing the armorial shields of benefactors, inscribed respectively—

FVNDATVR AB ISTIs. = 512 } = 734
LOCVPLETATVR EX ISTIs. = 222 }

The latter are blowing trumpets with banners attached, inscribed—

ENGELBERTVS ABBAS IVBILÆA MILLENARIA, = 1214 } = 1734
 FESTIVIS RITIBVS ADORNAVIT. = 520 }

The first chapter says that the monastery is situated in the Odenwald (ad Sylvam Odonicam) between the rivers Nicer and Main, on the boundary of the dioceses of Mayence and Würzburg, seven miles from Würzburg, five from Aschaffenburg, fourteen from Mayence, and one from Amorbach (i.e. German miles). The date 734 is assigned to the foundation, and St. Boniface and other early preachers of Christianity in Germany first attracted the high patronage which led to the establishment of the monastery. The narrative gives many interesting particulars of its varied fortunes; it was greatly damaged by various wars, and by accidental fires and lightning; and at the time of the jubilee it was again threatened by the French, who were carrying on war in the country. Passing over the history of the long line of abbots, we come, at page 123, to the epitaph of the sixty-first abbot, Joseph Haberkorn, containing these chronograms—

 QVOS ISTE SEPVLCHRO DIVES INFERT! } = 1727
 DEFVNCTVS PERFRVATVR PACE, ET REQVIE SEMPIETERNA. = 1727

The next abbot is Engelbert himself; he was elected in 1727, as thus expressed—

APOSTOLI HI DIVISI CONVENIVNT IN ENGELBERTVM. = 1727
 A congratulation was offered in this 'very elegant' chronogram<sup>1</sup>—

The epitaph of John Francis Sebastian, free-baron of Ostein, 'Satrapie Amorbacensis supremum præfectum,' is dated thus—

VIATOR PIE DEFVNCTO REQVIEM PRECARE. = 1718

The jubilee festival was marked by these chronograms, among other inscriptions which were put up on the occasion—

AT the conclusion of the British Museum copy of the foregoing work [Press-mark, 488. i. 4.], viz. after the History of the Monastery of Amorbach, there is a collection of tracts, essays, preachings, etc., at the festival, to commemorate the completion of 1000 years since the foundation of the monastery. At page 101 is this chronogrammatic Trisagion, in the words of the above Thema, with a slight alteration at the end—

BERG MONASTERY NEAR MAGDEBURG.

AT the end of the volume last quoted there are some tracts relating to Petrus Ulner, who held the office of Abbot at the monastery of Berg near Magdeburg. The last one contains the services and preachings at his funeral on 6th September 1595, and on page 27 are the following chronograms, showing the foundation of the school and library at Berg ('Monte Parthenopolitano'), its destruction during the Peasants' War ('seditio'), the restoration of the school in a more humble building by Bishop Peter, his rebuilding of the library, and lastly his death.

The last page is filled with lamentation verses for the death of the before-mentioned Petrus Ulnerus, 'archimandrite' of Parthenopolis (Magdeburg), concluding with this memorial of his death—

The writer of the memorial goes on to express his true sorrow, and gives the date of the year, month, and day of the death of Peter Ulner in this 'distich,' which makes playful use of his name.

THE MONASTERY OF OBER-ALT-AICH.

A BOOK in my possession (4° pp. 628), procured at Frankfort-on-Main, bears this title: 'Historischer Entwurf Der im Jahr tausend siben hundert ein und dreyssig tausend-jährlichen Obern Alten Aich,' etc. etc.; or, in plain English, 'Historical Sketch made in 1731, the thousandth year of Ober-Alt-Aich; or a short chronicle of the ancient free Bavarian Benedictine congregation, under the title of the holy angel keepers, the incorporated college and abbey of Ober-Alt-Aich (Upper-old-oak), in Lower Bavaria, in the Bishopric of Regensburg, wherein are set forth in five parts, not only the founders, restorers, and abbots, and their traditions, rights, and privileges, but also the miraculous image of the Virgin Mary being brought to the sacred Bogenberg; . . . besides other wonderful things which have happened there in the last 1000 years. By Æmilianus Hemmauer, Ord. S. B., Professor of the College, and Prior in 1731. Printed at Straubing.' This verbose title renders needless any further description of the book, except to mention that there are some chronograms incidentally mingled with the narrative, wherein will be seen some punning allusions to the Oak or Oak-tree (the name of the monastery); there are also two examples of the numerical power of letters, in the cabalistic use of them, to signify the date of certain events. The whole work is in German, with occasional passages in Latin.

The introduction is in the form of a praise to the Trinity, and to God the 'Alpha et Omega,' the 'Principium et Finis,' the Beginning and the End; and it leads to this chronogram verse, marking the 1031st year of the existence of the monastery—

PRINCÍPIA AC MEDIA EN TVA SVNT, VN-TRINE TRIVNVS. = 1731

OMNIA NÆ TVA SVNT, CLAVSVLA QVANDO TVA EST. = 1731

i.e. Lo! the beginning and the middle are thine, O thou One in three, Three in one! All things truly are thine when the end is thine.

'And all voices continually proclaim'—

GLORIA PATRI, ET FILIO, ET SPIRITVI SANCTO, SICVT ERAT IN PRINCÍPIO, ET NVNC, ET SEMPER, ET IN SÆCLA LONGÈ INFINITA. = 1731

i.e. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit, as it was in the beginning, so it is now, always, and for endless ages.

This is followed by an address to the reader by the author, concluding with these words—

VT IN IIS OMNIBVS SOLVS GLORIFICETVR DEVS. } = 1731

i.e. So that in all these things God alone may be glorified.

At page 19, the history, after having touched on the pristine condition of the locality, and noticed the foundation of the monastery in the year 731, arrives at the one-thousandth year from that period, viz. 1731, and goes on thus (the italics are, of course, interpolations)—

Zwar heftig oft sausen und prausen die Wind,
 Doch sich unbeweglich die Aichen noch findt
 Semper enim Quercus, quæ quantum vertice ad Auras Ætherias, tantum Radice ad Tartara tendit.

i.e. 'As the Alpine north winds by their blasts strive to overturn a sturdy ancient oak, the tree itself cleaves fast to the rocks, and as high as it shoots up to the top in the ethereal regions, so deep it descends with its root towards Tartarus.'—Virgil, Æn. iv. 444.

Therefore confess with David in all humility, DASS TAVSEND } = 1751
 IAHR IN OBER-ALT-AICH VOR GOTT, ALS VVIE GESTRIGER }
 TAG, DER VORIBER GANGEN.

MILLE ANNI QVERCVS VETERIS, VT DIES HESTERNA, QVÆ PRÆTERIIT. = 1731

i.e. A thousand years at Ober-alt-aich before God are in truth but as yesterday past and gone.

A thousand years of the old-oak are but as yesterday which has passed.

The same is expressed by a double Cabala of the year 1731, composed of the following hexameter and pentameter lines—

Sæcula signarem Centum ? quid Numine Coram ?

O ! velut hesternus, præteriêre, dies !

This is the key : observe that each letter has its numerical value—

1731 || 1731

At page 32 the fifth chapter concludes with this exclamation—

FIAT REX SÆCVLORVM, DEVs SOLVs! = 1731

At page 201 it is related that in the year 1315 (and in the preceding year), by reason of excessive wet weather, all the corn in Germany was thoroughly spoilt, causing great famine, sickness, and death, and it was feared that a third part of Germany would be abandoned by the remaining inhabitants. The particular year was marked by this rhyming hexameter line, the last word containing the date, every letter being a numeral—

Ut lateat nullum tempus famis, ecce CVCVLLVM. = 1315

i.e. So that the time of the famine may not be forgotten, behold the date in the word cucullum.

The word literally means 'a hood,' or 'a monk's hood.' It has no connection with the event. The line is merely epigrammatic and merorial, having a single word in the form of a chronogram, to be used as such to the exclusion of a similar use of all the other words in the line. The line, therefore, is not a chronogram; it is only a line containing a word to aid the memory. On this point the reader is referred to my book on Chronograms, preface, p. ix, and to p. 12, where a similar use of 'cucullum' is noticed.

At page 413 it is related at the end of the chronicle of Abbot Benedictus, who was the forty-eighth in succession, that on 13th August 1699 Marcus, a Capucin monk, died. He was a friend of the abbot, and was noted for his piety and miraculous powers; the 'Emperor Leopold honoured him with these chronograms'—

PATRI MARCO DE AVIANO VERO IESV SERVO REQVIES ET LVX
PERPETVA. = 1699

PATRI MARCO AB AVIANO CAPVCINO CONCIONATORI
EVANGELICIS VIRTVTIBVS EXORNATO. = 1699

VIENNÆ AVSTRLÆ IN OCVLO DOMINI SVI SVAVITER
EXPIRANTI = 1699

LEOPOLDVS AVGVSTVS, AVGVSTA SVA, FILIIQVE MÆSTI
POSVERE. = 1699

i.e. To father Marcus of Aviano, a true servant of Jesus, be rest and eternal light. To father Marcus of Aviano, a Capucin orator adorned with evangelical virtues, dying calmly under the eye of his God, at Vienna in Austria, the august Leopold, his august (spouse), and his sorrowing sons, have placed (this memorial).

At page 426 it is mentioned that, in the year 1719, the Electress of Bavaria erected a church in honour of St. Clara, and it is remarked that doubtless she would follow the footsteps of that saint, and of St. Barbara and other holy women. Such a hope is expressed in this chronogram verse—

i.e. By what step she began there, so by that may she always go!

At page 433. In the year 1729 the holy and costly relics which from time out of mind had been collected in the church were placed in a new reliquary adorned with silver ; the number of them in 1630 was 100, but they were subsequently augmented to the number indicated by this verse—

QVOTQVOT SINT QVÆRVNT SACRA IN ALTHA LIPSANA, TOT SVNT } = 400
HIS QVOTQVOT CERNENT, VERSIBVS ESSE LEGANT.

The increased number was thus expressed by another writer—

VVAS VOR HEILLIGE VEREHRET VNSER ALTE AICH, } = 450
IN ZVVEN VERSEN HAST ES ZVGLICH.

i.e. They ask how many sacred relics there are at Alt ; there are as many as they may perceive and read to be in these verses.

The holy things that our 'Old-Oak' reveres are set forth in two verses.

At page 437. In the year 1731 the church was restored, the towers repaired, and all the altars, sculptures, and decorations were renovated, as shown by this sentence<sup>1</sup>—

RECDANT VETERA: NOVA SINT OMNIA } = 1731
IN SVPERIORI ISTA QVERCV.

i.e. Let old things pass away ; let all things be new in this 'Upper-Oak.'

'Any person observing this monastery within and without would truly say'—

ALLES IST NVN NEV } = 1731
ODER DOCH
VERNEVET VVORDEN.

i.e. All is now new, or else has been renewed.

The writer of the chronicle concludes the subject with this remark, 'We and our descendants will be able to say, as in old days,—

EX EO BENEDIXIT EI. Genesis xxvi. 4. } = 1731
AND INTER BENEDICTOS BENEDICETVR. Ecclesiasticus xxiv. 4.

At page 514 the chronicler acknowledges that the Benedictines enjoy God's gifts and graces, and he attributes to the favour of the Virgin Mary much of their prosperity, and offers to her this prayer—

VVIR BITTEN } = 1731
VERBLEIBE VNSER LIEBSTE
ALLERGNÄDIGISTE MVTTER!

i.e. We entreat thee, abide our most beloved and all gracious mother!

At page 532 a chapter of descriptive panegyric to the miraculous image of the Virgin contains this verse from an ancient hymn—

VIRGO SINGVLARIS } = 1731
LVCENS HIC AB ARIS
CVLPÄ NOS SOLVTOS,
MITES FAC, ET CASTOS.

i.e. O singular (or extraordinary) Virgin shining here from thine altars, make us free from sin, mild, and pure.

At page 547 we arrive at another cabala. It relates to 'Albertus,' whose history is given in several chapters, and we learn that after having passed many years in extravagant expenditure and riotous living, he became converted, and was received into the monastery by the good Abbot Poppo, who reigned from the year 1260 to 1282. Albert had been compared, on account of his bad life, to a raven, a black bird; the writer of the chronicle, taking this as his theme, composed the following cabalistic epigram, the words of which make the date of the current year 1731 (not the date of Albert's conversion), according to the usual key, which is given at page 312 ante.

En subitò monachum, Veneris, Bacchique Philekma!<sup>1</sup>

O jam mollis olor, qui modò corvus erat!

i.e. Behold! suddenly he is a monk, who was a companion of Venus and Bacchus! O what a delightful odour from him who but just now was a raven.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> There is no such word as 'Philekma'; it is an expression constructed by the chronicler, meaning φλημα = osculum, and which is sufficiently translated here as 'companion.' The letter κ is inserted ingeniously enough to get the required numeral, 10.

<sup>2</sup> The word 'olor' has a double signification; in the translation I have taken the meaning to be the 'odour of sanctity' attributed to Albertus; the word also means 'a swan,' whose white colour may be typical of the purity of conduct of this reformed monk, in comparison with that of his earlier life.

Some short verses follow in the German language, concluding with this chronogram—

NVN
DISE VERÄNDERVNG ALBERTI
IST IA EIN VVERK GÖTTLICHER
HÄNDE?

} = 1731

i.e. Now is not this conversion of Albert certainly a work of the divine hand?

According to the narrative, which fills the remainder of the book, prodigies happened, and miracles were wrought by Albert, or through the influence of his relics, after he died.

At page 557 this wholesome maxim, adapted from the words of Ovid, is introduced with reference to the career of Albert—

PRINCIPIS NI OBSIS, TIBI VIX MEDICINA PARATVR. = 1731

i.e. Unless you resist the first advances, hardly is there any remedy provided for you.

There are no more chronograms to demand any further extracts from this curious chronicle.

UNIVERSITIES.

SOME of the universities on the continent of Europe commemorated their foundation, and the conferring of academical honours and degrees on their deserving members, by elaborate compositions in chronogram. To almost every cathedral and monastery of Europe there had been, from a very early period, attached schools, in which all candidates for priestly orders, and such laymen as could afford it, were educated. These institutions, in the course of several centuries, acquired for themselves fixed privileges, and under the assistance rendered by influential personages developed into independent universities. Their growth throughout Europe was rapid, and especially so in Germany, where they became numerous; and it is probably owing to the literary tastes fostered in the Germanic universities, that we are indebted for the contents of this chapter; not that the talents of the members were confined only to the particular compositions here to be noticed, but we are led by them and similar works to recognise their influence in the greater part of the chronogrammatic literature which fills my two volumes.

WÜRZBURG UNIVERSITY.

ATRACT, folio size, in my possession<sup>1</sup> relating to the University of Würzburg, on the occasion when the Reverend Georgius Haan, of the Society of Jesus, 'crowned' four members thereof, or, as we should say, conferred on them the degree of Doctor, on 26th June 1691. The title commences, 'DOMUS SAPIENTIÆ quatuor nobilissimis Columnis recenter aucta, solidata, illustrata, quando reverendus in

Christo pater P. Georgius Haan e societate Jesu . . . coronavit,' etc. etc. 26 Junii MDCLXXXI. Printed at Würzburg. The merits of the four Doctors are set forth in Latin poems, accompanied by poems in short metre, the lines of which are arranged so as to form the shape of four columns, or pillars with capital and base. All the printing is more or less in fancifully arranged lines, and allusions to the pillars of Hercules are obviously introduced.

The only chronograms occur at the end of the tract, where it concludes with 'Lusus chronogrammaticus.' This consists of addresses in epigram to the 'Promotor' by name, and in like manner to each of the new 'Doctors' under their figurative position as the four pillars of the university. Playful use is made of all their names in the epigrams, and the chronograms are reserved to do playful honour to the 'Promotor' and to all the Doctors in one group. I transcribe the epigrams.

To the Promotor George Haan. (Alias Gallus, a Cock)—
Pergere plus ultra poteras de jure Georgi,
Sed te stare loco fixa trophæa jubent.

To the Doctor Philip Braun—
Cur tibi Thejosophum placet ultima gloria, Epomis?

To the Doctor Peter Scharpff. (Alias a Shaft or Pillar)—

FINIS.

A TRACT in my possession,<sup>1</sup> printed at Würzburg in 1700, may be called in English 'May-wreaths placed on learned heads,' on the occasion when Philip Braun, Doctor of Divinity, etc. etc., at the University of Würzburg, crowned four distinguished members thereof,

conferring upon them the degree of Doctor. This Philip Braun was, doubtless, the same who took his degree, as we are told in the foregoing extract, and now conferred the same degree on others. The tract consists of twenty-four pages folio, and contains Latin poems and odes such as the 'Muses of Rhetoric' of the university were wont to put forth in print on similar festive occasions, and with such remarkable variety of poetic imagery; in this instance they are mostly composed in chronogram, coupled with the allegory of 'Wreaths,' as appropriate to May, a month sacred to the goddess Flora. The title commences and concludes thus—

'COROLLÆ MAJALES doctis verticibus impositæ . . .
oblatae A Musis Rhetoricæ Herbipolensis 5<sup>o</sup> die Maii, Anno 1700.'

The work commences with a poetical address to the goddess Flora in plain hexameters, with this chronogrammatic rhyming conclusion—

The same done into English—

May the Doctorial head preserve these verdant honours; so, God willing, may it flourish through all time!

This Greek chronogram cannot be put on the same level of merit with any good Latin chronogram, for this reason: all the letters of the Greek alphabet being numerals, it is needful to omit from the reckoning several of the letters contained in the chronogram sentence, and to use only sufficient of them to make the intended date. The original, moreover, is incorrectly printed; the large letters therein make only 940, I have therefore ventured to make the needful correction, by printing more capital letters to make the intended date 1700.

I have added the Greek alphabet numerals so far as they are within the compass of this chronogram, so that the reader may test it without trouble.

α β γ δ ε ς ζ η θ ι κ λ μ ν ξ ο π ρ σ τ υ φ χ ψ ω
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 20 30 40 50 60 70 80 90 100 200 300 400 500 600 700 800

It must be obvious to a careful observer, that a Greek chronogram cannot be constructed on the same basis as a Latin one, where only certain well-ascertained letters can be used, and all such letters in the sentence must be used. The sum-total required for the above Greek chronogram might be arrived at by some other selection of letters in the same sentence, but there would be no defined means for detecting error of intended date by misprint or otherwise. The same remarks will apply to chronograms in the Hebrew or Arabic languages.

A TRACT in my possession,<sup>1</sup> printed at Würzburg in 1703, may be called, in English, 'The new year of the great Emperor Leopold, happy and glorious for the three laureated men, when the most noble and reverend John Blasius Weigandt, professor at the university of Würzburg, bestowed upon them the degree of Doctor of both laws,' etc. . . . in the year 1703. The title-page is long and complex. It contains chronograms, and commences and concludes thus—

'NOVUS ANNUS

LEOPOLDI MAGNI CÆSARIS = 1703
 in triumviris laureatis ter felix et gloriosus, quando nobilissimus . . .
 Joannes Blasius Weigandt . . . [here are the names and titles of the 'triumvirs'], in alma Herbipolensium universitate ritu majorum

 MAGNÆ MOLIS ERIT, ROMANAM CONDERE GENTEM = 5652
 [the next line explains this date],

Est annus à Mundo condito quinquies millesimus sexcentessimus, quinquagesimus secundus, juxta computum calendarii' [i.e. Anno mundi 5652, according to one mode of computation].

It may be inferred from the poems which fill the tract that the year 1703 was one of good omen to the German Emperor (Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire), and through him to the university of Würzburg. The day and month of that year are not mentioned; but it may be gathered from the first words of the title-page, and the use of the word 'strena' (meaning a new year's gift) in the second chronogram, that the time was the month of January. The writers of the tract have carefully avoided the mention of any date in simple figures. That the year was 1703 is evident from the chronograms. The period is enigmatically indicated in the following epigram, which occupies the back of the title-page. The reader has to discover it by reference to the Roman Calendar and the rules for finding the Golden Number of the year.

<sup>1</sup> I believe a rare one; for, unfortunately, as will presently appear, I do not know of any other copy.

** Numerus

[This puzzle tells us that the 'Promotor' has promoted 9 times. He has now promoted 3 doctors, and 1 year added makes 13. That number is the Golden Number of the year 1703. The number, so called from its having been formerly written in golden letters in the almanacs, is the year of the cycle of 19 years in which the current year falls. To find it, add 1 to the year of the Christian era, and divide by 19; the remainder is the Golden Number of the year; but if there be no remainder, then 19 is the Golden Number. The subject is a complex one. See Handy Book of Rules for verifying Dates. By John Bond. pp. 114-124.]

The first poem is an address by Janus (January) to Phœbus in Latin hexameters, the last line being a chronogram.

TVM SVPER AXE NOVVS FELIX DESCRIBITVR ANNVS. = 1703

The Roman emperor, Julius Cæsar,<sup>1</sup> is, in imagination, brought into the scene in an epigram. He is mixed up with the German emperor, with the 'Promotor' on the present ceremonial occasion, and with the three new doctors in a chronogrammatic address, which I transcribe as it stands in the original. This title precedes the address—

C. Julius Cæsar post triumphos innumeros et lustratum victoriis Orbem, hinc laboribus, inde viginti tribus conjuratorum telis confectus suæ se involvit purpuræ, et quiescit, succedentibus in Imperio Triumviris.

At page 14 the 'Annus Novus' is made to do honour in epigram, chronogram, and odes, to Andreas Hoffman, the first of the three crowned doctors; an epigram to Augustus on his closing the doors of the belligerent god Janus, at the return of universal peace to the world; followed by a symbolic allusion to the three suns which were seen at Rome in the time of the Emperor Augustus, and were regarded as a thrice happy omen; and this motto 'Tres portendunt aurea soles Tempora.' The chronograms then follow, alluding to all these subjects—

Hiatus valdè defendendus!! My copy of this remarkable tract is here defective. Pages 19 to 28 were torn out before ever I saw it. I know not what they contained, and I am unable to supply the absent odes and chronograms (?) because I know of no other copy. The torn inner margins of the pages testify to their former presence in their right place. By way of consolation, however, I am tempted to declare that the foregoing extracts are quite long enough. The next extract, from page 29, almost says so—

IO! FLOREAT SEMPER DOCTORALIS TRIAS TER BEATA,	= 1703
Jam
TRIADEM <sup>2</sup> CECINISSE SAT EST.	= 1703

The tract concludes thus at page 30. The words of the chronogram are literally those in the Vulgate Version of Psalm xviii. 2 (English Version xix. 1)—

Omnia ad Majorem,
Quam
CÆLI enarrant GLORIAM DEI.	= 1703

A TRACT in my possession, printed at Würzburg in 1716, and which will bear the English appellation of 'The Olympiad formerly in Greece,' on the occasion when the Doctor's degree was conferred on four members of the University of Würzburg, on the 12th May A.D. 1616. The title-page is long and involved; it begins and concludes thus—

<sup>2</sup> From this it may be inferred that there were two other sets of chronograms, one each for the second and third crowned doctors.

'OLYMPIAS OLIM IN GRÆCIA

The occasion is thus likened to a contest at the Olympian games in ancient Greece. The tract consists of thirty folio pages full of Latin odes, epigrams, etc., and only a few chronograms, which are put as mottoes to the poems; they are quotations mostly from the Bible and some classic writers, and exhibiting much ingenuity in their application to modern dates.

These last two lines precede an epigram, and do not appear as quotations. The epigram contains some quaint echo verses.

The only chronograms are at p. 13, in the 'Consecratio et descriptio aulæ honoris.' I transcribe them as examples of the

ALTORF UNIVERSITY.

A FOLIO volume of academical tracts in prose and poetry, emanating from the University of Altorf (British Museum, press-mark 732. l. 1) bears this title—

ACTA SACRORUM SÆCLARIUM

quæ favente Deo immortalis sub auspiciatissimo . . . imperio Caroli vi. . . . senatus Norimbergensis . . . celebravit Academia Altorfiana.—1723.

There is an engraved emblematical frontispiece, and at page 32 there are portraits of certain of the 'Curators,' who are afterwards mentioned in the chronograms, also many other engravings. There is a narrative of the founding of the university, with chronograms on the year 1723, when the first commemorative jubilee festival was held, and a list of the names of the curators and professors of the university, with complimentary remarks, all in chronogram of the same year.

At page 160 a pretty engraving shows a figure standing at an altar, emblematical of the 'Noricum' Muse, or Learning, in the province of that name, inscribed—

IVBILA LAETA DEO NORICA MVSA VOVET. = 1723

At page 189 are described medals commemorative of the jubilee, bearing these chronograms—

IVBILAEO PRIMO VNIVERSITATIS ALTORFINO-NORICÆ. = 1723

A medal representing the university buildings bears these mottoes, which are explained at page 194 of the volume—

At page 309, after passing over all the intermediate pages, full of university orations and descriptions of ceremonials, we come to some gratulations in poetry and prose; and the names of the Emperor Charles vi. and of the several dignitaries of the university, in chronogram as follows—

Some verses follow, in which the exploits of the German emperors are praised, concluding with a summary of the names of the before-mentioned four 'Curatores' of the university, as follows—

The remaining gratulations do not contain chronograms.

At the end of the volume are two separately printed tracts, addressed to the Austrian princes, with title-pages commencing with chronograms to give their date.

1st. IVSTITIA CACVMINE INSIDENS. = 1716

It is addressed to the Archduke Leopold, son of Charles VI., born in 1716. The author is Jacobus Narzyski, a noble of Poland.

2d. JOSEPHVS HAVD OCCVMBENS. = 1716

This relates to Joseph, the late emperor, brother of Charles VI. The author is Fridericus Guillelmus Ponikau, a knight of Silesia.

This university again appears in one of a set of seven volumes, noticed again at page 335, infra; in volume i. Tract 2 is entitled— 'Actus promulgationis privilegiorum,' etc., at Altdorf in 1697, on the occasion of the Emperor Leopold having raised the university up from its previous condition of a school. At page 22 is this anagram and verse containing the words of the anagram, highly complimentary to him—

Leopoldus Caesar; Deus Apollo, creas!

Omni jure Deus meritoque vocaris Apollo,
Per nos, Doctores tot, Leopolde, creans!

There is also an engraving of the medals struck on the occasion, but not showing any chronograms. At page 159 and following pages we find the programme of the ceremonial in bold print, and these chronograms—

PROGRAMMA PHILOSOPHICUM.

WITTEBERG UNIVERSITY.

A VOLUME of tracts (British Museum, press-mark 525. d. 5, 1-44.) contains a collection of Disputations at the University of Witteberg, in Latin, by various members there. Anno 1607. No. 25 is between Jacobus Martinus, Professor of Logic, and Petrus Gædicus.

It concludes with some Latin verses addressed by the former to the latter, and subscribed thus—

ΕΥΧΟΡΤΙΧΟΝ Ejusdem ad Eundem.

ILLE TVVS FELIX LABOR: HÆC MEA SVNT TIBI VOTA: } = 1607 SIS LVCENS PATRIÆ FAX, PRECOR IPSE, TVÆ.

i.e. This is thy successful labour: these are my vows to thee: mayest thou, I pray, be a shining light to thy country.

HALLE UNIVERSITY.

A THICK quarto volume (British Museum, press-mark 823. e. 1.) of tracts describing the festivals held in 1740 at many of the German universities to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the discovery of the art of printing, labelled 'Hilaria typographica,' and catalogued in 'Academies, Erfurt University.' Tract No. 5 relates to Halle University, and at p. 285 there are some verses preceded by this title—

TYPOGRAPHIÆ DIVINITORIS ENCOMIA } = 1740
VTPOTE QVÆ IVRE IPSI CONVENIVNT.

The rectors of this university, for ten years in succession, were commemorated in chronogram, giving the dates 1694 to 1703. The reader is referred to my former book on Chronograms, page 374, where these rectors are so mentioned.

DANTZIG UNIVERSITY.

TRACT No. 6 in the foregoing volume describes the proceedings at Dantzic University when the commemoration of the invention of printing was held. There is no pagination, but in sheet N this bilingual chronogram occurs—

DATVR EX VOTO ARTI TIPOGRAPHICÆ } = 1740
LAETITIA MAGNA IN IVBILAEO TERTIO FAVSTO
IETZO IST DER BVCHDRVKKER KVNST DRITTES } = 1740
IVBELFEST IN VERGANVEGEN ZV HALTEN.

i.e. It is given as an offering to the art of printing with great joy at the third propitious jubilee.—Now is the third jubilee festival kept, of the art of printing.

The commemoration by chronograms of the invention of printing will be seen also in my former book on Chronograms, pages 293, 294, where the festival held by the printers of Augsburg is described.

A small book (British Museum, press-mark 273. a. 16.), entitled 'Athenæ Gedanenses,' etc., by Ephraim Prætorius, printed at Leipzig in 1713, contains an account in Latin of the origin of the University of Dantzic, the names of many of the rectors, professors, and others belonging thereto, with a list of the works written and published by them. I gather the following chronograms from its pages.

At page 8, a medal gives the date of the first foundation jubilee—
ANNO GYMNASIO GEDANENSI SECVLARI. = 1658

And at page 9, there are two couplets on the same occasion, written by Doctor John Maukischius (or Maukisch)—
ARTIS AMOR LVCET: NOBIS ACCVRRE BENIGNO } = 1658
AVXILIO EXCELSI IESVLE (sic) SVBVENIENS.

Also
ARTES ACCERSES? LEGES NON ASPERA BELLA } = 1658
ACCEPTAMVS? EROS ISTE SATISFACIET.

It is explained that the numeral, and certain others, of letters printed large in the original, are the initial letters of the names of the scholars. An anagram on the names and title of the same writer is given at page 102, and the title of one of his works is thus given—
FAMA LAVRENTII EICHSTADII. 1660, folio. = 1660

At page 37 Joannes Kittelius, a pastor and preacher, is said to have died, in the year given by this quotation from Matth. xxiv. 13, Vulgate Version—
QVI PERSEVERAVERIT VSQVE AD FINEM, IS SALVVS ERIT. = 1590

At page 189 it is mentioned that one of the schools was established in the year thus inscribed over the door,—Anno quo VLADISLAVS QVARTVS BINOS REGNI HOSTES BARBAROS VIDENDO SVPERAT. = 1634

At page 194, another school was established in 1640, and the date was given in the last couplet of some verses inscribed over the door—
HIC EST VIRTVTI NOVA FABRICA APERTA, POLITOS } = 1640
HINC CAPIVNT PATRIÆ CVRIA TEMPLA VIROS.

The reader is referred to my former book on Chronograms, pages 184, 185, for some further chronograms relating to this university.

BASLE UNIVERSITY.

A COLLECTION of tracts in seven volumes, relating to a considerable number of German and other universities, as to their foundation ceremonies, jubilee commemorations, the conferring of degrees, disputations, appointment and death of rectors, etc. etc. (British Museum, press-mark, 731. e. 1-7.) Chronograms are found only in those tracts relating to the universities under German influences.

Vol. 2. Tract 1 is a 'secular oration,' at the commemoration jubilee in 1660 at the University of Basle, the 200th year from its foundation, which was in 1460. The title-page is as follows:—
'ORATIO SECULARIS, de academiæ Basiliensis ortu et progressu; In publicis ejusdem comitiis, pro felici seculi terti (sic) auspicio, pridie nonas Aprilis Anni CI<sup>O</sup> I<sup>O</sup>C LX. Illustri et frequentissimâ Panegyre in æstivâ theologorum aulâ, dicta a Luca Gernlero, rectore.'

The oration is in Latin, it occupies 57 pages and concludes, according to the customary form, with the word DIXI.

It is followed by several sets of verses, etc. 'Carmina secularia,' contributed by various members of the university, in praise of the institution and of the various eminent men who had been educated there. The first verses are associated with this chronogram—

ACADEMIA BASILIENSIS VIGeat! = 1660

At page 69 is a 'Carmen reticulatum,' in twelve hexameter lines. At page 70 is a 'Carmen mathematicum de voce ACADEMIA, in quinquaginta voces resolutâ;' in every line there is introduced a fragment of the word or some transposition of the letters, so as to make proper Latin words in the 54 hexameter and pentameter lines which compose the 'Carmen.' On page 73 there is 'Carmina Acrosticho-Tautogrammaton,' a set of 19 hexameter lines of five words each, the initial letters of which when read down the columns as the words are arranged, make the words Academia Basiliensis, but they have no chronogrammatic meaning. On page 73 there is the 'VOTUM CHRONOLOGICUM,' the facsimile of which, taken from the original, is given on the opposite page.

The words in the circle are a chronogram, and read thus—

AB INITIO ACADEMIA VIRET FLORERE PERGAT. = 1660

The radiating lines are hexameters, and read thus—

Arceat à nostris oris Altissimus armA.

Irradiet nostris piA mentes Gratia ChristI.

Optima Pax vireAt Musis nostroque LyceO.

Exulet à PatriA tristi mors noxia falcE.

The chronodistichon beneath the circle reads thus—

NASCITVR AMBROSII LÆTO HIC SCOLA PATRIA SOLE, = 1460

AMBROSII CANTAT IVBILA GRATA DIE. = 1660

Explanation.

In the above ingenious lines the initial and the terminal letters are the same, and they are found also in their proper place in the circular chronogram, whilst the great A in the centre of the circle is also the central letter of these lines. The whole may be translated thus—

The academy is full of strength from its beginning, may it continue to flourish.—May the Most High keep war at a distance from our land. May the pious favour of Christ enlighten our minds. May the best peace be prosperous to the 'Muses' and our Lyceum. And may death with his hurtful scythe be exiled from our country.

These peaceful aspirations are not to be wondered at, when we remember how much central Europe had suffered from the desolating Thirty Years' War. The chronogram below the circle has this meaning—

Here rises under a happy sun the paternal school of Ambrose. Grateful thanks it sings on the day of Ambrose in 1660.

Now we arrive at the meaning of the great A in the centre of the circle. Saint Ambrose, here indicated by his initial letter, must be regarded as the patron saint of the school; his day in the calendar is the 4th of April. The title of this tract tells us that the jubilee was held 'pridie nonas Aprilis,' which in the Latin calendar is equivalent to the 4th day of April as we now express it.

At page 78 we come to the last chronogram in this tract—

ACADEMIA BASILIENSIS SIT VIRENS! = 1660

GIESSEN UNIVERSITY.

VOLUME III. of the series mentioned at page 335 supra, in Tracts 4 and 5, there is an account of the ceremony and proceedings at the University of Giessen on the occasion of its reconstitution by George II., Landgrave of Hesse, with the orations, congratulatory verses, and votive poems. Written by Johannes Tachius, one of the professors there, and published at Darmstadt in 1650. There is also an engraved title-page. The verses commence at page 153 under the title of 'Carmina votiva,' and are addressed to George, the then reigning Landgrave of Hesse, who is praised throughout as a munificent benefactor and patron of learning; the Latin verses conclude with this 'Eteostichon continens, cum pio voto, annum restaurationis'—

CHRISTE SCHOLAM EXAVGE, PRINCEPS HANC GEORGVS HONORI, } = 1650 NVNC PLANTAT GISSA RVRSVS IN VRBE, TVO.
i.e. O Christ, increase the school exceedingly, the Prince George now replants it in the city of Giessen to thy honour.

At page 164 the sixth set of verses concludes with this 'chronodistichon'—

O PATER, VT VIGEAT GISSENA ACADEMIA, FAXIS } = 1650 VIRIBVS EGREGIIS, PERPETVISQVE BONIS.
i.e. O father, thou wilt bring it to pass that the academy of Giessen shall flourish with surpassing strength, and perpetual good fortune.

At page 175 various sets of verses are addressed to the Landgrave, commencing as follows—

Ad serenissimum et celsissimum Principem ac
 Dominum, Dn. Georgium II. Hassiæ Landgravium, etc.
 Academiæ hujus Instauratorem.
 QVIS GISSÆ REFOVET MVVAS? VAH TVTE GEORGI } = 1650 HAS REVOCAS, AT TE QVIS FOVET? IPSE DEVS.
i.e. Who cherishes again the Muses of Giessen? Ah, it is thyself, O George, who recallest them, but who cherishes thee? God himself.

Palindromon incluso Eteosticho.

Thespiades, duce Te, conscendunt pulpita Gissæ, Vindice Te, redeunt Pallas et Eunomia.
 Cattigenæ mera laus gentis, Dux Inclyte, surgit,
 Postera laudabit Te pia progenies.

PERFVGIVM TIBI SĪT IESVS, PAX, ANCHORA, VITÆ, INTEGRA STĪRPS SVBITÒ NE TVA DISPEREAT. } = 1650

i.e. The Muses, thou being their guide, ascend the platform at Giessen; thou being their guide, Pallas and Eunomia return. The genuine praise of the people of the nation of the Catti (Hesse), O renowned prince, is lifted up. A future pious offspring will praise thee. May Jesus be the refuge, the peace, the anchor of thy life, may thy whole offspring not be lost suddenly.

Then follows an anagram and chronogram combined, a somewhat difficult sort of composition; the name, etc., of the Landgrave is the

Programma.

Georgius II. Hessiæ Landgravius, instaurator lumenque universitatis Gissenæ.

And the distich chronogram, indicating the date of the university, is the

Anagramma.

OH ES LAVS ATAVIS INSIGNIS, VIRQVE SVAVIS, GLORIA GERMANÆ GENTIS VIRTUTE RENIDES. } = 1650

i.e. George II., Landgrave of Hesse, the restorer and the light of the University of Giessen.—Oh, thou art an illustrious fame to thine ancestors, a delightful man, the glory of the German nation, thou art resplendent with virtue.

A simple anagram then follows, exhibiting much ingenuity in adapting the same 64 letters to a double use, and to a twofold meaning, as will appear in the epigram—

Programma.

Academia Gissensis purè restaurata.

Anagramma.

Ara resignata es Musis ac edita rupes.

Then follows the hexameter and pentameter epigram, showing that the Landgrave George is the New Parnassus. The first line is literally the above anagram line—

Epigramma.

Ara resignata es Musis ac edita rupes,
De qua prospiciunt Suada Minerva, Themis,
Quam recolunt Phœbus, Charites et turba Novena,
Hinc te Parnassum suspicor esse novum.

A literal translation is offered:—Thou art an altar, an elevated rock, opened to the Muses, from which the German Minerva and Themis revisit us; hence I suspect thee to be the new Parnassus.

The allegory of the altar is again used, at page 178, where another section commences, intituled 'Ara Votiva,' addressed to the Landgrave George by John Justus Wynkelmann, historiographer. A dedication to him concludes thus—

VIRTVTIS PATRONVS,	17	}	= 1650

 Luceat HOC Christo; et HÆC verbi pascua carpat;
 HIC defendat Apes dulcissima mella legentes;
 Sic voveo; Votum tu consummato Jehova!

The words printed in small capitals allude to the armorial insignia of Hesse. The chronograms may be thus interpreted—
Long live the patron of virtue, the restorer and nourisher of the University of Giessen.—Long live the new Apollo!—Long live the foster-children (the scholars) of Helicon, and may the school of Giessen be renewed in our land!

The verses which occupy page 179 are preceded by an anagram, which is also a chronogram—

Programma.

Georgius Hassiae landgravius et Heros gratiosissimus est prælargus Universitatis nostrae

Giessenae restaurator et reparator.

TV IOVA TVTARIS REPARATAS EIA RITE	= 19
RE NOSTRAS.
	Summa, 1650

The program and the chron-anagram may be thus interpreted:—George, Landgrave of Hesse, a most popular hero, is the munificent restorer and renovator of our University of Giessen.—O generous George, thou restorest freely to Hesse the endowed muses of Giessen, in the reign of <sup>1</sup> It will be observed that the context immediately following the 'programma' points out that one letter A must be dropped; the fact is it contains one diphthong Æ more than is required to make the perfect anagram. The second line of the chronogram gives the date 1612, when the Emperor Rudolph II. was reigning; he died, however, afterwards in that year.

Rudolph; mayest thou, O Jehovah, defend our possessions (oh joy!) duly recovered.

The alliterative verses which next follow carry on the gratulations of Giessen and the glorification of George; the translator craves excuse for not giving an English version in the same form—

GISSA.

At page 180 the tract concludes with a set of verses, which terminate with this chronogram—

ANNO EIA IAM NOSTRIS REDIIIT PAX AVREA TERRIS. } = 1650 TEVTON SVB FICV POST IBI TVTVS ERIT.
i.e. Oh joy! now has golden peace returned to the land, the German shall henceforth be safe there under his own fig-tree.

The remaining volumes relate to German and some French and Italian universities, but do not contain any more chronograms or anagrams.

THE Saxon Chronicle by David Chytræus, Part II., quoted at page 128 ante in the present volume, contains some chronograms relating to the University of Giessen. At page 127 thereof it is related that in 1607 the Emperor Rudolph II. confirmed and enlarged the privileges of the university; the particulars of the charter are quoted, and the names of the patrons and high officials are given in chronograms which indicate the date of the event, thus—

SOME DISTINGUISHED PERSONS.

IN my former book on Chronograms there is a long chapter devoted to 'Distinguished Men,' extending over 33 pages, commencing at page 349. The following chapter comprises the names of a miscellaneous assemblage of persons of distinction, extracted from numerous books; the right of many of them to the appellation is obvious, but others are unknown to fame, and some have even passed out of memory. All, however, are to be judged here on chronogrammatic principles, and in order that they may be placed on an equality of right, I venture to assert that when a chronogram on any one is made and printed, it is a mark of distinction conferred on that person. And I may add that whenever I have found such a chronogram in the by-ways of research, or in books discovered almost by mere accident, I have carefully preserved it; and all are placed here which do not fall conveniently into any other group that I have made for their classification.

THE first name is a very famous one, it has been the theme of many chronograms. Here are a few more in addition to those previously collected in my former volume. I find them in a Latin work in my possession, 'Rerum Germanicarum Scriptores,' etc., put together by John Georg Leukfeld, printed at Frankfort-on-Main 1707, folio. In the section 'Thanatologia'—

Martin Luther died 18th February 1546—
 OCCVBVIT FEBRVO FATALI MENSE LVTHERVS } = 1546
 ALTERA EVANGELII GLORIA PAVLE TVI.
i.e. Luther died in the fatal month February, another glory of thy gospel, O Paul.

EXORITVR BIS NONA DIES VBI FEBRVA CHRISTI } = 1546
 CÆLICA PROPICII REGNA LVTHERVS ADIT.
i.e. When the twice ninth day of February arose, Luther entered the kingdom of the merciful Christ.

Luther is mentioned in a 4<sup>o</sup> volume of tracts, funeral orations, etc. (British Museum, press-mark 489. g. 23). Tract 13, consisting of eight leaves only, 'De viro sancto Martino Luthero puræ doctrinæ evangelii instauratore, ex hâc mortali vitâ ad æternam Dei consuetudinem evocato.' Vitebergæ, MDXLVI.—'Durch M. Joannem Stigelium,' (so catalogued) contains an elegy on Luther in hexameter and pentameter verse concluding thus—

FORTIS AT EXTREMÆ VERAX ÆTATIS HELIAS } = 1546 CÆLSA PIVS CÆLI TECTA LVTHERE SVBIS.
i.e. Thou bold and true Elijah of this latter day, O pious Luther, goest up to the heavenly abode.

A slightly different version of these lines is given in my book Chronograms, page 340. In addition to the Luther jubilee medals mentioned in Chronograms, pp. 340, 341, I find in Zedler, xl. 675, the mention of another which was struck at Strasburg, inscribed—

MARTINVS LVTHERVS THEOLOGIÆ DOCTOR. = 1717
 SPES CONFISA DEO NVNQVAM BONA VOTA FEFELLIT. = 1717

Another, also from Zedler, liv. 1339, in commemoration of the festival on 31st October 1717, at Weissenfels, inscribed on a half-thaler coin—

GLORIA CHRISTO LAVDESQVE MANEBVNT. = 1717

And another similar coin, referring to the same festival, representing a church on a rock, inscribed—

SO LA IN SO LO CHRISTO ÆTERNVM DV RATVRA. = 1717

Philip Melanchthon, the companion of Luther, is mentioned in some epitaph verses in a work, 'Scripta publica proposita a Professoribus in academia Vitebergensis ab anno 1540 usque annum 1567.' 7 vols. 8°. The chronogram is by Henricus Millerus Hesse. (See also Chronograms, p. 335)—

Tempus obitus 1560.
 NOCTE VBI CONSVMPTA SVRGVNT EX PLEIÖA NATÆ } = 1560
 FVNCTVS ES HEV VITA SANCTE PHILIPPE TVA.

It is mentioned in Zedler's Universal Lexicon, xlii. 551, that some words contained in the 'Te Deum Laudamus' (which was composed about the year 390) were regarded as an omen or prognostication. Thus the sentence—

TIBI CHERVBIN ET SERAPHIN INCESSABILI VOCE PROCLAMANT. = 1517
i.e. To thee Cherubin and Seraphin with unceasing voice do cry.
 was applied to certain persons who were imprisoned for their religious opinions during the troubled times of the Lutheran Reformation in Germany, which are dated from the year 1517. The following words, adapted from St. Matthew xi. 15, have been applied also to the preaching of the Reformation—

QVI HABET AVREM AVDIAT. = 1517
i.e. He that hath ears let him hear.

The reformers made the words which next follow applicable to the eventful period; they give the date when Luther published his Theses against Tetzl, but otherwise the meaning is equivocal—

MVNDVVS VIGEBIT. i.e. The world shall be vigorous. = 1517
 MVNDVVS TOTVS PERIBIT. i.e. The whole world shall perish. = 1517

Pope Innocent XII. died on his 'jubilee day;' he reigned nine years. (From Zedler, xviii. 233)—

INNOCENTIVS XII. PRO DEVS PONTIFEX IN IPSO IVBILÆO MORITVR. = 1700

A collection of epitaphs of emperors and other distinguished persons in a book bears this title—'Theatrum funebre, exhibens per varias scenas Epitaphia nova, antiqua; seria, jocosa, etc. etc., exstructum à Dodone Richea (seu Ottone Aicher). Salisburgi, 1675.' The book is catalogued at the British Museum under the name Aicher (press-mark 1090. b. 16). Pars prima, pp. 216. Pars secunda, pp. 208. The three following chronograms occur in the book.

Pietro Bembo, cardinal; epitaph in the cathedral at Milan—Hic situs est Bembus satis hoc, nam cætera clarent, of Spain; born 1517, died 1586 at Madrid, buried at Besançon. He had much influence in the politics of Europe.

Albertus, Cardinal, Archbishop of Mayence and of Magdeburg, died, aged 56; the circumstance alluded to is not explained—
 LVGET SVBLATO MOGVNTIA PRÆSVLE, AB HESSO
 HENRICVS CAPITVR, TVRBA RELICTA FVGIT. } = 1545

Philip Carl, Elector of Mayence, was born 26th October 1675. He became Archbishop of Mayence in 1732. The following chronogram is recorded in Zedler, xxvii. 1877—
 FAVENTE SVPERNA GRATIA
 PHILIPPVS CAROLVS
 EX PERANTIQVA AB ELTZ
 PROGNAVVS PROSAPIA

i.e. Philip Charles, sprung from the very ancient family of Eltz, celestial grace favouring him, was on the 9th of June raised by just destiny (to be) Archbishop and Elector of Mayence.

Abel Vinarius or Weinhin, born at Hansburg, in Landau, a man of note in Würtemberg, died 27th February 1606. His epitaph included these lines—
 FEBRVVS ECCE! LVES TER SPARSIT AB AXE NOVENAS
 EXCELSI VVEINHIN SCANDIT AD ASTRA POLI
Abel Vinarius
 αναγραμμα
Vbi Elisa? Vrnâ. } = 1606

i.e. Lo! February spread the melting snow thrice nine times from above, when Weinhin ascends to the realms of the highest heavens.

Meaning that he died on 27th February. The anagram on his name is made to ask the question (reminding some of us of a 'slang'-call once familiar in the London streets), 'Where's Eliza?' probably meaning his wife; the answer follows it, 'In the tomb.'

Caspar Siegmund Reimann, pastor of the church of SS. Peter and Paul at Liegnitz. Born 1684, died 1739. (Zedler, xxxi. 240)—
 REIMANNI VIRTVS, DOCTRINA ET GLORIA VIVIT, LIGNITII NATIS IPSE SVPERSTES ERIT. } = 1739
i.e. The virtue, the learning, the glory of Reimann lives; he himself will live to the sons of Leignitz.

Christopher Daniel Schreiter, born at Würtzen, near Welt, 5th December 1624, doctor of theology, most celebrated, died, aged ninety, in the year twice told by the following chronogram contained in his epitaph at the college, which does not otherwise express the date. (Zedler, xxxv. 1170)—

DOCTOR SCHREITERVS NONAGENARIVS ESTO } = 1714
 SOSPES ET ÆTATEM NESTORIS INSTAR AGAT.

Joann Joseph Sporck, a high official in Bohemia. See Zedler's Universal Lexicon, xxxix. 366. His epitaph—

SPORCKIVS HOC SITVS EST BVSTO LACRYMARE VIATOR : } = 1737
 NVNC LVGENT CHARITES RELIGIO, PIETAS.

In Chronograms, p. 377, this epitaph is applied to another man of the same name, with the variation of one letter to make the date 1738.

John Oldendorp of Hamburg, and professor at Marburg, died on 3d June—

AH OLDENDORPI IVNI VT LVX TERTIA FVLsIT } = 1567

Petrus Ramus, of Vermandois in Picardy, a learned professor at Paris, seems to have got into execrable and dangerous company, and after receiving twenty-eight wounds was pitched out of a window dead, at the age of 57, in the year—

VT PERIT ACCEPTIS VICENIS OCTOQVE RAMVS } = 1572
 VVLNERIBVS, PHÆBI LVX STVPET ATQVE FVGIT.

Andreas Alciatus, a learned man at Milan, died—

IVRA IACENT, STREPITVSQVE FORI, LEGESQVE SALVBRES, } = 1551
 CVR? IACET ANDREAS DVX ET APOLLO FORI.

Sebastian Unterholzer, a 'renowned man,' died on the 27th June 1577, according to these verses in his epitaph—

TER NOVIES IVNI, RADIBAT IGNIFER, ASTRA } = 1577
 VNDERHOLZERE QVANDO SEBASTE PETIS.

Philip Verheyen, Professor of Anatomy at Louvain. Born 1648, died 28th January 1710. A work by him, on the anatomy of the human body, was printed at Cologne in 1713, in which were several sets of verses in praise of him, and lamenting his death. Two pages of Latin hexameter and pentameter verse have this chronogram at the conclusion—

JACET VERHEYEN HONOR MEDICINÆ. = 1710

The letter y counts as 11=2. i.e. Verheyen the honour of the medical art is dead.

Simon Zschoka, born at 'Pausa in Botigland,' in 1582, a priest. He studied at Leipzig, and he died of the plague in 1618. His epitaph contained these words (Zedler, lxiii. 758)—

JESVS CORDIS MEI THESA VRVS. = 1618
i.e. Jesus the treasure of my heart.

Antonius Viriherus, of whom some account is given in Zedler, xlvi. 1763, wrote a book (British Museum, press-mark 115. a. 10), 8°, the title of which begins in chronogram, containing the author's name and the date, thus—

VINDICIÆ BOHEMIÆ

 PATRIÆ SVÆ SCRIPSIT
 ANTONIVS VIRI-HERVS. } = 1740
Sive

The dedication follows next, 'Magnificis, spectatissimis inclytis Dom, Dom, Dom, Dom, Regni Bohemiæ Statibus, Submissimè D.D.D. Antonius Viriherus.'

Page 120, the last in the book, concludes with the following tribute to the worth of the author by the printer, with a playful allusion to his 'veiled name.'

Typographici explicatio velati nominis.
 Est Pragæ natus, pietate et Pallade Pragæ

Liborius Wrisberg was a judge of the Court at Brunswick. Born 1593, died in 1654. His funeral sermon was preached from the text 2 Cor. iv. 16, 17, and the chronogram was written for his epitaph. (Extracted from Zedler's Universal Lexicon, lix. 678)—

BENE VIXIT, OBIIIT NOBILIS VVRISBERGIVS,
 HAVT ERGO EVM PLORATE, SED VOS, POSTERI. } = 1654
i.e. Noble Wrisberg lived rightly, he is dead, weep not therefore for him, but for yourselves, O posterity.

i.e. Borius von Wrisberg is gone hence ; Death is his greatest gain ; but not over him.

Daniel Wulffer, theologian in Bohemia. The year of his birth and his age when he died was marked by this distich. (Zedler, lix. 786)—

Johann Christian Wolf, doctor of medicine, magistrate at Zerbst in North Germany. His name and birth-land are united in this 'symbol,' which was engraved on his monument (Zedler, lviii. 748)—

 In being serviceable to others, alas ! he is weakened, and yields to fate.*
 The anagram is imperfect as to a letter n in the first, and a letter t in the second line.

The inscription also contained these chronogram dates of his birth and death—

JOHANNES CHRISTIAN VVOLF, M.DR. NATVS SERVVESTÆ	=	1673
JOH. CHR. IST. VVOLF, DR. DENAT. QVEDLINEVRG.	=	1723

And lower down these, the last of some rhyming lines—
 Und spricht, was auch der Neid nicht leugnen kann :

i.e. John Christian Wolf, doctor of medicine, was born at Zerbst in 1673.
John Christian Wolf, doctor, died at Quedlinburg in 1723.
Say what even Envy cannot deny, in this cold grave rests a right learned man.

Johann Meyer of Magdeburg, theologian and pastor, died 12th December 1563. His epitaph, written by Johann Pomeranius, is as follows (from Zedler, xx. 1489)—

Johannes Meyer jacet hâc sub mole sepultus,
Patria cui celebris Parthenopyrga fuit.
Ossa quidem placide Johannis in æde quiescunt,
Vivit at in rutili spiritus arce poli.

IOHANNES MEIER FATA PROFV NDA TVLIT.	= 1563

5525

i.e. John Meyer lies buried beneath this heavy structure, he to whom his country was a distinguished 'Virgin's tower.' Indeed the bones of John rest quietly in this church, but his spirit lives in the citadel of the shining heavens. God granting it, on the 12th day of December, John Meyer submitted to his profound destiny. The word 'Parthenopyrga' is suggestive of the legend of Saint Barbara, who was shut up in a tower by her father for her protection, and that Meyer died on the day assigned to her in the calendar; the days, however, do not correspond, Her day is the 4th of December, Meyer's was the 12th. The first chronogram line shows the years elapsed from the Creation to the birth of Christ, 3962, according to one of the 140 different dates given by chronologists for the Mundane era—(the one commonly adopted and used would make that year to be 4004 B.C.);—the second gives the year of our Lord 1563, the total gives the Mundane era 5525 (or, as it would be commonly expressed, the year 5567), from the creation of the world to the death of Meyer.

Jacob von Franckenhause Syboldus, pastor at Nordhausen, died in 1575; his epitaph in St. Blasius' church (Zedler, xli. 534) commences—

Hic Jacobus ego constanti voce Syboldus
Dulcia consuevi verba docere Dei.

And concludes thus—

HIC FRAGILI IACEO MENTIS RATIONE RELICTVS, ET SPES IN SOLO EST SANGVINE CHRISTE TVO.

} = 1575

i.e. Here I, Jacob, was accustomed by steadfast voice to teach the sweet words of God.—Here I lie forsaken by the perishable reason of mind, and my hope is in thy blood alone, O Christ.

Cucheinollibeag. I possess an engraved portrait bearing this name, obtained from a bookseller in Germany; it was probably intended for a book illustration, though there is no indication whatever on it of such a purpose. The accompanying facsimile copy will render description needless, I only require attention to the chronograms engraved and printed beneath the portrait. It may be inferred from the inscription around the frame that the person represented was attached to an embassy from the Persian monarch to an emperor of Germany, two of the chronograms give the date 1601; at this time Rudolph, son of Maximilian II., was emperor (1576-1612), and Abbas I. was king of Persia (1582-1628). The Turks possessed Hungary until about 1717, when, after many defeats, they retreated from the country. The dates 1416 and 1517 may be those of Persian successes against the Turks. I cannot explain the treaties mentioned, nor can I identify the last date; it is not, as might be supposed, the year of the Hegira corresponding to 1601, which would be 1010 instead of 1029. The chronograms are in hexameter and pentameter verse, and I print them here in the same type as all others are in these pages—

i.e. The Persian king, celebrated in wars, being about to lay low the Turks, approached them, O divine emperor, through thy means. O great emperor, the brave Persian asks a treaty of thee, and with thee he proposes bloody war against the Turks. Perchance the ruler of the sky may wish that we, with the Persian allies, may see the troops with the crescent shields (the Turks) laid low. May the king of heaven be favourable to us, may these words be established, may God in the lofty sky grant that they be ratified.

And at the church of the Blessed Virgin Mary at Cella (Zell?) in Styria, where the heart of the same archduke was buried, as it seems, according to his vow made whilst living, the epitaph commences—'Sub hoc saxo jacet Magni Principis, parva portio cor,'—and concludes with this line—

Ernest Bogislaus, Duke of Croy and Areschot, the thirty-fourth and last bishop of Camin or Cammin in Pomerania, born 1620, died 1684, aged 64 years. In a book (British Museum, press-mark 170. d. 20.) 'Pomerania diplomatica, sive antiquitates Pomeraniæ ex Tabl. publicis et diplomat. vetustis Scriniorum sacrorum et profanorum magnâ curâ in lucem protractis illustratæ,' etc. Francofurti ad Viadrum. 1707. 4°. The author is Martin Rango. At page 127 it is related that the bishop occupied several positions of hereditary and acquired honour in his country, and we learn what opinions he entertained of himself from the Latin inscription which he composed and placed on his own tomb two years before he died,—the whole would occupy too much space here; it describes him, however, in terms of deep humility, as the most miserable sinner, and the least deserving of divine pity—nevertheless he is penitent and grateful so far as in this life it is possible, and being mindful of death he built the monumental tomb to himself in 1682, at the age of 62, in which he hoped to rest undisturbed until the final resurrection. The inscription concludes with these chronograms, composed probably by some one else—

Johann Ulrich was born at 'Cahla' in Germany, on 18th February 1645, he became the parish priest, noted for learning and virtues. In 1719 his parishioners gave him a nuptial jubilee, and in 1726 when he was eighty-two years old and still performing some of his duties, another festivity was held to do honour to this 'Herr Senior.' The following 'votum eteostichon et onomastico-cabbalisticum,' was made on the occasion by one of his friends—

VLRICVS RE MYSTA DEI, BIS FLOREAT, OPTO	}	=	1726
ET SANE SENIOR, BIS VIREATQVE BENE.

Ac Dominus	=		427
J'annes	=		185
Ulricus	=		602
Floreat	=		262

			1726

The usual key fits the above cabbala, thus—

A B C D E F G H I K L M N O P Q R S T U etc.
 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 20 30 40 50 60 70 80 90 100 200 etc.

i.e. May Ulrich, in reality a priest of the mysteries of God, flourish twofold, and I wish that the 'Senior' may grow vigorous twice soundly and well.

Ha, ha! well, and I pray that Mr. John Ulrich may flourish.
 (Extracted from Zedler, xlix. 835.)

Heinrich Escher: a quarto volume contains the praises by various writers, of this Swiss statesman (born 1626, died 1710), who, to judge by the superlative epithets which grace the title-page, was held in high estimation by the senate and citizens of the republic of Zürich; printed at Zürich in 1678, the chronograms indicate that year, when Escher and Hirzel were elected as consuls. The book is without pagination, and the only copy I know of belongs to the Rev. Walter Begley. The title-page is as follows—

VOTA SYNCHARISTICA

NUPTIAL VERSES, FUNERAL ORATIONS, AND COMPLIMENTARY POEMS.

THESE opposite subjects are frequently associated together in one and the same volume, although always printed independently in the form of tracts. Collectors of such publications in times past have done good service in preserving them by binding up in volumes sometimes thirty or forty of the tracts, many consisting of but a few pages, and likely to have been lost but for such careful treatment. Among the nations, the Germans especially were accustomed to commemorate their friends by joyous or lugubrious verses in Latin, and they frequently adorned and enlivened their compositions by chronograms; the reader will find many examples at pages 309 to 317 of my former book on Chronograms, and the following pages contain those which have been obtained by subsequent research, including some of Hungarian and Dutch authorship.

A VOLUME of tracts, 'Congratulatory and condolatory verses,' in the British Museum Library (press-mark 1160. h. 1. 1-39), quarto.

Tract No. 6 contains verses thus addressed to Johannes Stern of Salfeld—

MAGISTRO IOHANNI STERN, SALLFELDENSII.	= 1654
And other verses to him conclude with this couplet—
VIVE IGITVR, FLORE CEDANT TIBI SINGVLA FAVSTA, ET CERVI LÆTVS SECVLA PRISCA VIDE!	} = 1654

Tract No. 10 is a lamentation on the death of Fridericus Gloxinus of Lübeck. Some verses conclude with this couplet, showing the year, day, and month of his death, the 19th July 1655—

VT JVLII BIS QVINA DIES AC NONA REFVLGET,
EXSPĪRANS GLOXIN CÆLICA TECTA VIDET. } = 1655

Tract No. 18 is in praise of Justus Kunneken of Hildesheim at the University of Jena. Some verses conclude with—

Anno quo
LAVDE MAGISTRALI ORNATVS VENERATVR IVSTVS
KVNKENIVS, TERRÆ GRATVS HONORE SVÆ. } = 1654

Tract No. 27 is a poetic congratulation on the marriage of Antonius Straubelius and Anna Dorothea Deusch on 24th September 1657. Among other poetry, there is a set of acrostic verses on their names, preceded by anagrams, also on the names. The last couplet is this chronogram—

VIVANT, VERNANTES VIREANT, VIGEANT QVOQVE SPONSI:
SPONSIS REQVE SION PIGNORA DONET, AMEN! } = 1557

The tract concludes with this couplet—

GOTT GEB' IHN'N NESTORS IHAR, GVTs, VVOHLFART, GVTE ZEIT, } = 1707
EHR, IVNGE ZVVEIGLEIN VND ZV LETZT DIE BESTE FREVD!

The two foregoing chronograms are an example of the difficulties which occur in the path of the chronogram-hunter. The intended date is doubtless 1657; neither couplet agrees, one makes 1557, the other 1707, and both agree literally with the original print. The error rests with either the author or the printer. It is often possible to correct a printer's error, but here I am unable to suggest the needful correction, and I have wasted some time in trying to rectify that of the author.

Nuptial poems addressed to Christopher Schellenberg, in a volume belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, having for its title, 'Christophori Schellenbergii Annebergensis carminum nuptialium, libri duo.' No date or pagination. The following chronograms occur—

Tempus nuptiarum.

CHRISTOPHORO CONIVNX SCHELNBURGO VBI CONTIGIT ANNA, } = 1539
LVX SEPTEMBRIS IIT TER NOVA BISQVE QVATER.

i.e. When Anna became a wife to Christopher Schellenberg, the new light of September had departed three and twice four times (on the 11th September).

Near the end of the volume another marriage is thus noted; the chronogram is printed in capital letters all of one size, the date letters are not specially distinguished as I print them—

FUNERAL orations and dirges relating to persons of note in Germany in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Eight volumes of tracts (British Museum, press-mark 12301. dd. 1-8.), labelled, 'Orationes funebres et Epicedia illustrata.' A dull subject, but in some respects interesting and curious, with an occasional passage of a cheerful character, such, for instance, as a marriage. I notice those only which afford chronograms, and they are not numerous.

Vol. ii. Tract 4. Parentalia reverendo viro D. Philippo Heilbrunero (Doctor of Theology) facta a Georgio Cleminio. Ulm, 1616. No pagination. Among a number of 'Carmina lugubria' concerning this good man, Philip Heilbrunn, we find on sheet c, 'Eteostichon, Annum mensem diem, quo ex hâc vitâ decessit, ætatem etiam, et mensem in se continens,'

The first of these two chronograms is made up thus—

The year of his death is mentioned as	. . . . .	1616
In April the fourth month	. . . . .	4
The seventeenth day of the month	. . . . .	17
His age is mentioned in the following doleful sentence as nearly 70, say	. . . . .	69
		1706

The title-page mentions of him:—'Qui xvii. Aprilis calendarii novi, anno Christi MDCXVI. annos prope septuaginta natus, ex hâc misera et calamitosâ vitâ in beatam illam et sempiternâ lætitia affluentem commigravit.' Observe the unusual spelling of the word 'sidera' ('sydera'), here printed in the manner occasionally seen in Continental books; the letters IJ = 2 are necessary to the chronogram.

Vol. iii. contains a song of mourning for the death of Ægidius Hunnius in 1603. 'Threnologia de vitâ, rebus gestis et tristissimo simul ac beatissimo obitu Ægidii Hunnii' (doctor of theology at Witteburg). Autore Leonharto Huttero. Witteburg, 1604. At page 50 an elegy concludes with this

Vol. vi. Tract 2. On the life, occupations, and death of Martin Chemnitz. 'Oratio de vitâ studiis et obitu reverendi . . . Martini Chemnitii doctoris theologiæ . . . Autore Joanne Gasmero.' Printed at Chemnitz (?) 1588. On the last page is this

The renowned Wildius lies hidden in this tomb—he whom splendid fame regards as a survivor in life—he who was of service to great Dukes by his genial counsels—and chiefly to thy father, O Duke Lewis.—The kind man regarded the unhappy ones with a tender heart,—he was just to all with the warmest feeling.—He served God to his utmost endeavour; at last, and deservedly, he dwells in the highest stars (in heaven).

The large letters compose these words—

Hic jacet Magister Casparus Wildius.

i.e. Here lies Master Caspar Wild.

Vol. vii. A tract, among others, on the death of John Rudolph Westen, doctor of theology. Basle, 1685. At page 80 is an elegy, 'Planctus super obitu piè in Domino defuncti patruï;' with some verses, which are followed by these lines to his uncle and his wife (?)—

Lectissimo conjugum pari.
 EX VOTO VOS VNA DIES CONIVNxit AMANTES. (nuptialis.) = 1643
 LVXIT ET EXTINCTOS HEBDOMAS VNA SIBI. (annus emortalis.) = 1684

i.e. To the most choice married couple.

Ye loving ones, one day joined you by a vow. So one week shone on them extinguished. Certainly as ye lived in harmony for many years, so ye would desire to enjoy eternal peace together.

(The first chronogram line gives the year of their marriage, the second that of their death.)

Tract 7. The title is briefly as follows—'Lacrymæ Lectianæ, seu de . . . principis Friderici Mauriti Anhaltini vitâ et obitu . . . oratio Jac. Lecti . . . 17 kal. Nov. 1610 . . . in academia Genevensi.—Soteropoli Anhaltinorum,

There are many odes and elegies on the premature death of the prince; the first, at page 31, consists of ten lines, commencing, 'Da veniam generose puer,' the last line ending with 'veniam da generose puer,' and signed 'Iacobus Lectius.' Another elegy addresses him as 'Floscule,' and 'Fortunate puer,' all treating him as a boy. The colophon is

Tract 12. 'Facula nuptialis.'
 Boni ominis ergo
 ex debito Amore, Honore accensa.
 Ratisponæ 1658.

(On the marriage of Rochus Roselius, a man of high family at Nuremberg, with Catherine Kerscher, daughter of a distinguished person at Ratisbon.) The title-page is full of compliment and adulation, and the tract is filled with poems and epithalamia by various writers. That one, numbered xiv., consists of ten pages of verse, with a 'Labyrinth-square,' which seems to be incorrectly printed, and obscure as to meaning; it consists of fifteen lines, with a large letter S in the centre, from which the reading is to commence with the word 'Sic.' It is signed and dated thus—

Hæc Nobilissimis Sponsis Patronis æternùm
 Venerandis humillimè obtulit.
 Devotissimus cliens

In Nuptialibus gaudiis.

MAII QVARTA DIES APPARET SOLE BEATO,

Tract 15 is to the memory of John Wolfgang Grunewald, a distinguished man at Ratisbon, who died of a severe illness, 'gravissimo morbo oppressus naturæ debitum reddidisset,' 18 kal. Dec. 1684. Among several pages of verse is this Eteostichon lugubre.

RHEV IAM NOBIS LETHO SVRREPTVS ACERBO
DEFENSORQVE POTENS EXIIT ORBE PATER!

} = 1684

i.e. Alas now, snatched away from us by bitter death, a father and a strong defender has departed from the world.

Vol. viii. Tract 7, on the death of Lewis VI., Duke of Bavaria and Elector Palatine, 'Epicedia in obitum . . . Ludovici s. r. i. archidapiferi et Electoris . . . Ducis Bavarizæ . . . Qui piè placidèque ex hâc vitâ decessit, anno salutis 1583, 4 Idibus Octobris.—Heidelberg, 1583. (i.e. 12th October.) Conscripta a diversis authoribus,' etc. Distichon continens symbolum et annum obitus ejusdem.

Then follow six of the chronograms, which are given in my book Chronograms (published in 1882), page 125, but in somewhat different order. Then on another page of tract No. 7 is the following—

Distichon annum, mensem, et diem, quibus illustrissimus Elector humanis rebus exemptus est, comprehendens,

OCTOBRIS BIS SEXTA DIES VBI FVLSERAT ORBI, CÆLESTI, ELECTOR, SEDE, RECEPTVS, OBIIT.

} = 1583

'Aliud ætatis annum continens.' (Not a chronogram, but giving his age as forty-four years.)

Ter denos quatuorque annos, duo lustraue postquam Complêras, superos, Dux LVDOVICE petis.

i.e. A distich containing the year and day in which the most illustrious Elector was relieved from human affairs,

When the twice sixth day of October shone in the world, the Elector died, being received at the celestial throne.

Another distich containing his age (not a chronogram). Three times ten years and four, and two lustrums furthermore, thou, O Duke Lewis, didst complete, and thou seekest the higher regions (heaven). His age is thus made forty-four years. He was born in 1539, and he died in 1583.

Tract 6. An oration on the funeral of Leonard Engelhart of Tübingen. 'Martini Crusii . . . oratio . . . de vitâ clarissimi et doctissimi viri Leonhardi Engelharti pronunciata xv. Aprilis, cio. ioc. iiii. (Tübingen, 1603.) On page 48 is

A CURIOUS and rare book in my possession, printed at Pesth in Hungary, in the year 1818 (8°, pp. 130), consists of 218 short Latin poems or complimentary verses addressed to persons living at that time, by Emericus Danits, ex-Regius-Professor at the University of Pesth. The poems are in hexameter and pentameter metre, and each contains one or more of those verses in chronogram. The collection was privately printed by the professor, for distribution among his friends, and it is noticeable as a late instance of the practice of writing chronograms. A copy of the work is very seldom to be met with even in the land of its production. The poems contain 317 chronograms; the subjects, however, are not of any special interest, and a few extracts will suffice to show their general character.

The title-page is very simple. It contains only these words—1818.

On the back of the title-page, the author addresses Zoilus, a name that may be taken to mean a real or supposed critic of the work. The actual Zoilus flourished about B.C. 400.

The work is dedicated to Ferdinand I., Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, in a poem of sixteen lines, of which two are chronograms. After this, some verses follow, at page 4, addressed to the Archduke Joseph on 18th of April—

Gloria Apostolici, Pro-Rex celsissime, Regni ;
 DELICLÆ HVNGARICI (STIRPIS AMOR) POPVLI! = 1817

It is explained in a note to the seventh line, that Divine Providence ruled otherwise. Hermina, the wife of the Archduke, having given birth to twins, 'mascula et femella,' died at Buda on the 4th September.

• Verses at page 19, to Emericus Kelemen, a learned professor of science, and a legal functionary at Pesth, 5th November—

Page 101 is a separate title-page to a supplementary part of the work, in these words—

Verses, at page 123, to Francis Nagy, a newly-made clergyman, 'in ecclesia FF. Miseric. primitias celebrans,' consisting only of these two chronogram lines—

 IN CVNCTOS STERNAT MVNERA SACRA GRADVS. = 1716

Primitiæ is a service indicated by that name in the Roman Catholic Church. Other usual meanings are the first-fruits of the year that were offered to the gods,—the first year's profits of a benefice.

The last set of verses, at p. 124, is as follows—

A TRACT, probably a very rare one (folio), belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, published at Tyrnau in Hungary, has a very conspicuous title-page, entirely in chronogram; it is a remarkable example, and therefore I give on the opposite page a facsimile of it. It may be read plainly as follows, in sentences, showing the date 1714 ten times repeated. The stars to be observed in the original are used to separate the chronograms. After such a beginning it is singular that the tract contains no other chronograms—

PALMA ÆTATIS QVATERNÆ RELIGIONI, CÆSARI, PATRIÆ AC
LITERIS CONSECRAÆ, PANNONIÆ FLORESCENS, (SEU)	= 1714

A DEVOTISSIMA SIBI ET PIA CALLIOPE NITRIENSIS	= 1714
IPSO NATALI DIE METRICE SALVTATVS.	= 1714

The construction of this title-page is somewhat intricate, a quality not unusual in Latin compositions of this character, and here it may be attributed to the exigency of the chronogram. This translation follows as closely as possible the arrangement of the original—

The Palm of the quaternian age consecrated to the Emperor, to the Country, and to Learning, beginning to blossom in Pannonia (Hungary). In other words—The most excellent warlike general, the strenuous champion of eminent virtue and of true religion, the well-established support of pious faith, the devoted representative of fidelity to the Emperor, to Religion, and to his Country, the most glorious opponent of the crescent-bearing nation [the Turks], hereditary COUNT STEPHEN KOHARI of Csabragh; by the joyful approbation of the country, by the wishes of those favourable to the common weal, chosen Judge of the Court, on the recurring annual day of St. Stephen the protomartyr, is metrically saluted by the pious, and to him the most devoted Calliope of Neustra, on his own natal day. (This mention of Calliope the muse of heroic poetry, must be taken to mean that she represents the poetic talent of the University or Academy of Neustra.)

Then follows a prose Latin address to the illustrious Count Kohari by the college of Pious Scholars of Neustra (in Hungary).

Next follows an applause or salutation to him arranged in a series of four poems (12 pages) in Latin hexameter verse, in groups under the titles of the four ages, as alluded to in the title-page. I. 'Ætas aurea Minervæ sacra,' in the classic style. II. 'Ætas argentea religioni consecrata,' in a metaphorically religious style. III. 'Ætas ænea Gradivo dicata,' in the heroic and warlike style. IV. 'Ætas ferrea Cæsari et patriæ immolata,' relating to Kohari and his patron, the reigning Emperor of Germany and sovereign of Hungary.

Then follows an hexameter acrostic in 158 lines, formed on this sentence—

Excellentissimvs ac illustrissimvs Dominvs Comes Stephanvs Cohari de Csabrag regni Hvngariæ meritis-simvs iudex cvriæ scholarvm piarvm fvndator gratio-sissimvs vivat Deo et patriæ.

i.e. The most excellent and illustrious Lord, Count Stephen Cohari of Csabrag, of the kingdom of Hungary, the most deserving judge of the Court, the most gracious founder of the pious scholars, may he live to God and his country.

This acrostic has nothing to do with chronograms (as is sometimes the case), there is however an occasional companionship between the two sorts of composition; but apart from such considerations this one deserves special notice because it is the longest I have ever met with during many years of research; I have given some examples of what I once thought were long, in Chronograms, pp. 320, 322. This one consists of 158 alliterative lines. The title to it may be thus translated—A birthday applause drawn out in a poem with every word acrostically significant. It is as follows—

AD MAJOREM
DEI GLORIAM.

And thus ends this curious work.

THE following song (jocose poem) was transcribed from the original in the Royal Library at Brussels (press-mark 25007. A.) by the Rev. Walter Begley. It is the only example I have met with of extended chronogram verses in the Dutch (or Flemish) language. It may be described as a song in celebration of some auspicious events in the life of Mr. Billoen, having regard especially to his conservative tendencies in favour of what are called aristocrats. The auspicious events might have been his appointment to a legal post of significance, such as being chosen as a deputy to one or other body. Perhaps the history of Louvain or its university might be of assistance. In 1792 and 1793 the agitations of the revolution spread to Belgium, and in the church of St. Peter at Louvain some representative men for the Council of Louvain, or the revolutionary Parliament, were chosen in opposition to other movements. (Mr. Van Stralen of the British Museum Library has kindly suggested the foregoing explanation. A full translation is obviously undesirable.)

This tract, without title-page, date, or imprint, is a congratulation in verse to a Dutch gentleman on his election into a certain brotherhood. I am indebted to Mr. Van Stralen of the British Museum Library for the following translations of the chronograms, etc.—

Dedicated to the Pater of the Alexianen Brother J. Lemmens, on his name-day, March 19th, when people wrote :

*Who is willing to present this?
Brother Engelbertus de Bruyne.*

Know that this is given by the 'Cellebrothers' called Alexianen.

For read in the name of all that wish well.

It has been made in five minutes,

Wonderfully much trouble.

A doubt has been suggested as to the intention of the writer of the last line of the chronograms. The literal translation is given ; but by substituting for the Dutch word 'wonder' the word 'zonder,' the English translation would be, 'without much trouble,' and so, perhaps, nearer the mark. However this may be, the substitution would spoil the chronogram, by making it ten years less than the required date. The word is right as it stands, if taken ironically. The whole poem would probably be a very poor affair if turned into English. The letters v count as  $11=2$  in the chronograms.

MISCELLANEOUS CHRONOGRAMS CONCERNING EUROPEAN WARS.

THIS chapter contains some miscellaneous chronograms which do not conveniently fall within any other group in the present volume. They commemorate persons, places, and events of a very disturbed period of European history, such as the siege of Vienna and the city of Vienna itself, the Thirty Years' War, the fortress of Temesvar in Hungary, etc. etc. These chronograms, and the poetry in Latin which usually accompanies them in the original print, are exceedingly curious, while they illustrate and adorn many passages of history that were of intense interest to the inhabitants of the countries affected by the events.

THE SIEGE OF VIENNA, ETC.

A CURIOUS volume in my possession, containing 112 pages of Latin laudatory poems and verses, addressed to the various notable personages from Pope Innocent xi. and the Emperor Leopold I. downwards, who were connected with raising the siege of Vienna<sup>1</sup> and the subsequent expulsion of the Turks from Hungary; followed by vituperative verses about the Turks themselves and others, from the Sultan downwards. Chronograms accompany the poems and verses. Some are laudatory, and some descriptive of circumstances, and all make the date 1688, which was probably the date of the book. The siege of Vienna was in 1683, and the conquests over the Turks in Hungary took place mostly in 1688. There are 156 chronograms scattered through the poems. I have made some extracts from the text to afford occasional needful explanations of them. The title-page is missing, as also whatever may have preceded page 3. I do not know of any other copy of the volume, and it is difficult to discover any, in the absence of the title-page, and without any knowledge of the author's name or place of publication. All the chronograms are contained in the following extracts:—

At page 3 a laudatory poem to the Pope Innocent the Eleventh has this title—

INNOCENTIVS XI.
DE
RESTITVTO INTEGRÈ FERÈ ET PLENÈ
PANNONIÆ TOTIVS
REGNO
BENE MERITVS.

} = 1688

i.e. Innocent the Eleventh, well deserving for the restoration of the kingdom of all Pannonia (Hungary) almost entirely and completely.

The poem is in thirty hexameter and pentameter lines, addressed to the Pope as the vehement promoter of the war, by which, with the assistance of Poland and Venice, the Turks were expelled from the territories of the empire of Germany, except a very small part ('parvula pars') of Pannonia. It is followed by these chronograms—

The next poem is addressed to the Emperor Leopold I. He is encouraged to cast away all fear and resume the look of Cæsar (emperor); and is reminded that a comet with an exceedingly long tail first appeared on Saint Stephen's day to the city of Vienna, and betokened the success which happened on the same day in 1683, when the Turks abandoned the siege of Vienna. The title is—

The next poem is addressed to John Sobieski, king of Poland, who rendered the most effective assistance to secure the success of the war. His numerous warlike exploits are enumerated, particularly those against the Turks. The title is—

The next poem is addressed to one of the allied potentates in the war against the Turks, Maximilian-Henry, Duke of Bavaria, Archbishop and Elector of Cologne, who, as a rare example among the German princes, supplied at his own cost 6000 troops, and maintained them for six months. Both to him and to the 'Bavarian Lion' (the national symbol) a large measure of praise is accorded. The title is—

The next poem is addressed to Maximilian-Emanuel, Duke of Bavaria, Prince-Elector, etc., who was one of the allied potentates in the war, and is greatly extolled for his military prowess against the Turks. The title is—

NOVVS PANNONIAE EMANVEL DVX BOIARICVS. = 1688

The poem is followed by the symbolic letters A E I O U, which are used as the initials<sup>1</sup> of the alliterative words which compose eighteen hexameters in honour of Maximilian; and also by these chronograms—

The next poem is to John-George, Duke of Saxony, Elector, and Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, who joined in the war 'for the Cross, for Christ, and for the dear Emperor.' The title is—

IOANNES GEORGIVS SAXONVM DVX ET ELECTOR, etc. S. R. I. P. = 1688

The poem is followed by these chronograms—

The next poems are to the 'two young lions' of Neuburg-Palatine. And first to Louis-Antony, Duke of Juliers, Cleves and Montes, Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, Grand Master of the Teutonic Order, General of the Legion of Infantry, Chief of Artillery in the Imperial army against the Turks. It is preceded by this title—

DVO IVNIORIS LEONES NEOVRGO-PALATINI, PANNONIAM
RVGITIBVS SVIS REPLENTES. = 1688

The first poem is followed by these chronograms—

LVDVICVS ANTONIVS DEI GRATIA DVX IN TERRIS SINE FINE
PERENNET. = 1688
ET LEONIS PALATINI MORE ADVERSVS JURATORES SVOS HOSTES
VIRILITER PVGNARE NON ABSISTAT. = 1688
ET ANTE NE DESINAT QVAM GLORIOSÈ EOS VICERIT ET È
FINIBVS PANNONIAE EXTRVSERIT. = 1688
QVI TIBI DEDIT VOLVISSE, DABIT QVOQVE VT POSSIS
PERFICERE. = 1688

The second of the poems to the 'two young lions' is to Charles Philip, Count-Palatine of the Rhine, 'Supremus Vigiliarum Magister, Legionis equestris, etc.' It is preceded by this title—

LEO ALTER NEOVRGO-PALATINVS PRIORIS FRATER, ET IPSE
HORRENDE VBIQVE PER VNGARIAM IRRVGIENS. = 1688

The poem commences thus, indicating him as the fourth among seven brothers, whose names are given in a note—

'Carole, qui septem stas quartus in ordine fratrum,
Quos peperit seriè non variante parens.
De te quid dicam?' etc. etc.

The poetic narrative occupies seventy-two lines, and concludes with these chronograms—

KAROLE TV ES GAVDIVM ATQVE EXSPECTATIO VNA PARENTIS. = 1688
DIVINA ET INGENTIA GRATIARVM FLVENTA IN TE PENITVS
CONVENIVNT. = 1688
TALIA TAM GRANDIA SI IUVENIS AGIS? QVÆ QVÆSO PERFICIES
SENEX? = 1688
BENEDICAT O! DVX EGREGIÈ TIBI ET STIRPI TVÆ NEOVRGO-
PALATINÆ AB ASTRIS DEVS. = 1688

A set of poems now follows, relating to the commanding officers of the Imperial forces; they are individually numbered, named, and extolled. The poems bear this introductory title, and they are all followed by a chronogram—

INSEQVVNTVR SVPREMI DE EXERCITV GENERALES. = 1688

I.—Hermannus 'Marchio Badensis s. r. i. Princeps,' militiæ Cæsareæ archistrategus, 'gubernator Javariniensis,' etc.
PROVGNACVLVM PANNONIÆ ET AVSTRILÆ FORTIS DEFENSIO EST
VRBS JAVARINIENSIS. = 1688

II.—Æneas 'comes Caprara.' He is compared to the Æneas in Virgil, 'Alter es Æneas bello metuendus.'
EXERCITVS ETSI PARVVS, TRIVMPHAT QVANDO LEO PRÆEST. = 1688

III.—Caspar Zdencko 'comes Capliers.' Archistrategus.
He served at the defence of Vienna.
FIDELITAS ET VITA IN QVIBVSVIS DVCIBVS DEBENT IRE
PARES. = 1688

IV.—Comes de Waldeck, 'modo s. r. i. Princeps.' Archistrategus. 'Miles veteranus, aviti sanguinis, expertus prælia, Martis amor.'
FELIX ATQVE FORTVNATA FIERET IN TERRIS GERMANIA, SI
STARET INTEGRÈ VNITA PRO SVO LEOPOLDO. = 1688

V.—Ernestus Rudiger 'comes de Starrenberg,' who was in command in defence of besieged Vienna.
NISI VRBEM CVSTODIERIENT SVPERI, FRVSTRÆ VIGILATVR
IN EA. = 1688

VI.—Joannes Valentinus 'comes Schultz,' commander-in-chief of cavalry.
NOBILITATEM NON GENERIS HONOS, NON PROAVI, NON SANGVIS,
SED VNA VIRTVS EFFICIT. (Sic; it makes only) = 1683

VII.—Ludov. Wilhelmus Marchio Badensis, s. r. i.
Princeps, commander-in-chief of cavalry.
EXIMIIS VIRTVTIBVS INGENS AC RARIOR DEBETVR GLORIA. = 1688

VIII.—Goltzius, general of the Saxon forces. The poem represents that his name is derived from 'gold,' but his body and hand are like iron; with other similar playful applications of the words
'aurum' and 'ferrum.'
IN GRABATIS, ATQVE TABERNIS DIFFICVLTER AVRVM RE-
PERITVR. (Sic; it makes only) = 1681

IX.—Joannes Carolus comes Palphi, general of the legion wearing scale-armour, 'Legionis cataphractæ dux.'
DVX EGREGIVS A FACTIS, NON VERBIS LAVDANDVS EST. = 1688

X.—Fridericus Sigismundus comes de Scherffenberg.
The poem commences with these lines, which help to explain the chronogram—

Una Corona tuo Friderice stat aurea scuto :
 Debetur meritis trina Corona tuis.
 NON CORONABITVR, NISI IS, QVI PRO VERO DEO SVO LEGITIMÈ
 PVGNAVERIT. = 1688

XI.—Petrus Ernestus Baro de Mercy, 'Legionis desultoriæ dux.' He was killed in battle. This line occurs in the poem—Heu! Baro de Mercy, generosi militis icon.
 O! VERÈ GLORIOSA ET GRATIOSA MORS QVÆ ADVERSVS TVRCAS
 SVBITVR! = 1688

XII.—Comes de Dunnewald, supremus campi mareschalli locum-tenens. The poem concludes with these four lines—
 IMMORTALE DUCIS NOMEN IN ORBE GERIS.
 VIPERA SI FORSAN SE MISCEAT INVIDIA, RIDE, LIVOR VIRTUTI GESTIT ADESSE COMES.
 INVIDIA ET ÆMVLATIO INTERITVS EST BONI EXERCITVS. = 1688
i.e. Envy and jealousy are the destruction of a good army.

XIII.—Carolus Ludovicus comes de Souches, supremus campi mareschalli locum-tenens. The poem commences—
 Carole magnanimi proles genuina parentis :
 A patre vix gradiens ductus ad arma puer.
 And concludes with these lines leading to the chronogram—
 Qui vidisse patrem cupit, is te Carole cernat :
 Te qui conspiciet, conspiciet ille patrem.
 VITA ATQVE GAVDIVM BONI PARENTIS EST FILIVS VICTORIÆ. = 1688

XIV.—Dux de Croy; he was conspicuous in battle.
 GENEROSVS ANIMVS REGNI VNIVS ANGVSTIIS SE CLAVDI NON SINIT. = 1688

XV.—Franciscus comes Taffius. The poem alludes to his armour-wearing regiment and to himself in these words—
 Ferreus es, ferro præcingeris, omnia ferrum
 Membra tegit, etc.
 . . . neque pondera sentis ;
 Gloria quem portat, pondera nescit amor.
 QVI GLORIÆ STIMVLO QVANDOQVE NON PVNGITVR, NIHIL
 BONI TENTABIT. = 1688
i.e. He who is not sometimes affected by the incitement of glory, will try for nothing that is good.

XVI.—Franciscus comes Gondola. 'Ductor legionis cataphractæ' (the armour-wearing regiment). The poem is a play upon the pronunciation of his name; it commences—
 Num Francisce velis Gondola aut Gondola dici?
 IN CONSILLIIS SVIS TARDVS, FESTINANS IN OPERIBVS DEBET
 ESSE DVX. = 1688

XVII.—Georgius Fridericus Wurtembergæ dux,
 ‘Supremus vigiliarum magister.’
 IGNIS ATQVE GENEROSI VIRI ANIMVS INCLVDI NEQVEVNT. = 1688

XVIII.—Comes Rabatta, Supremus vigiliarum præfectus, et belli commissarius.
 PRÆCELLENTIS ET BONI DVCIS EST SERIO PROSPICERE NE
 EXERCITVS LABORET PENVRIA ET DEFECTV PANIS. = 1688

XIX.—Comes Carrafa, a general commanding in Hungary.
 DVX HOSTI INVIGILANS EST PARS MAGNA INSEQUENTIS
 VICTORIÆ. = 1688

XX.—Donatus Heusler Eques imperii, ‘Legionis cataphractæ dux.’ The poem is a play on his name, and concludes thus—Donandus titulo nobiliore manes.
 NEC CONFERTVR DIGNITAS VEL HONOR SINE LABORE PRÆVIO: } = 1688
 NEC VICTORIA REPORTATVR ABSQVE PRÆCEDENTI PRÆLIO. }

XXI.—Carolus, Liber Baro de Thüngen, ‘supremus vigiliarum magister.’ The poem is a playful allusion to the one-eyed Argus, and to the vigilance of this officer with his one eye as being greater than he had previously exercised with two.
 QVIS SVB LVNA IN HOC MVNDO EX INTEGRO EST BEATVS. = 1688

XXII.—Joannes Adamus von Schönigh, a Brandenburg officer. The poem concludes with this play upon his name—PULCHER es ore, genis, oculis, cognomine, gestis,
 Conveniunt rebus nomina nonne suis?
 PVLCHRITVDO VERA HOMINIS IN TERRIS NON EST; NISI VNA
 VIRTVS. = 1688

XXIII.—Comes de Styrum, ‘supremus vigiliarum
 magister.’
 NEC COLVMBÆ PROCREANTVR AB AQVILIS, NEC CERVVVS AVT
 OVIS À LEONE. = 1688

XXIV.—Melchior Leopoldus, Baro de Beck, supremus vigiliarum præfectus, commendans Budanus.
 PRÆCIPVA BONI MILITIS VIRTVS EST JVRATA ATQVE SERVATA
 FIDES. = 1688

XXV.—Leopoldus Philippus, Princeps Montecucoli.
 IN DEBILI ET EXANGVI CORPORE SÆPÈ SPIRITVS ET ANIMA
 AVGVSTA HABITAT. = 1688

XXVI.—Marchio Piccolomini, supremus vigiliarum præfectus, etc. The poem commences—
 Nomina te parvum faciunt; statura sed altum
 Corpore, et excelsum te probat esse virum.
 Mentitur nomen, virtus heroica parvum
 Nil in te patitur, magnus es, alta petis, etc. etc.

EXCELSA ATQVE INSIGNIS ANIMA INDIES SVPRA SE QVÆRIT ET GESTIT ASSVRGERE. = 1688

XXVII.—Princeps de Commercy, a distinguished officer, a French volunteer. The poem mentions that he captured a flag which was stained with Scythian, and his own blood, thus—

Quando Mohazenses stagnabant sanguine campi,
Commercy tectus quâ rogo veste fuit?
Vexillum Scythico proprio quoque sanguine tinctum
Vestis erat; poterat rarior anne dari?

VEXILLVM QVOD HOSTI ERIPIS, VESTIS EST GRATIOSA PARITER
ET GLORIOSA. = 1688

XXVIII.—Comes Sereni, of high rank in the Bavarian army. He was probably of small stature. The poem says of him, 'Parva apis immani plus elephantis facit.'

ALEXANDER CORPORE EXIGVO GESTIS ET OPERIBVS MAGNVS
ERAT. = 1688

i.e. An Alexander being small in body, but he was great in acts and works.

XXIX.—Comes de la Fontaine, of high rank in the Bavarian army.

VIRI MARTIALES RARÒ IN TERRIS VISI SVNT PERVENISSE VSQVE
AD CANOS. = 1688

XXX.—Rummel, an officer of rank in the Bavarian army who was killed in battle at Buda. The poem says of him—

Alter es à Bavaris, quem tibi noverca fefellit, Atque ad funestum mortis adegit iter.
Budanam quatiens magnis conatibus arcem,
Dum, ducis officium quod jubet, omne facis,
Heu! cadis, et summo luctu cecidisse doleris;
Tantus erat famæ rumor amorque tuæ.
Pro patria pugnare quidem reor esse decorum:
Sed puto, pro Christo pulchrius esse, mori.

VERÈ IS MARTYRIO PROPINQVVS EST QVISQVIS PRO JESV GLORIÀ
CADIT. = 1688

XXXI.—Comes d'Aspremont, an officer of high rank in the Bavarian infantry. The poem alludes to Rummel (in the preceding poem No. xxx.) in these words—

Rummelio quod amara decus fortuna negavit,
Ut de Budana pelleret arce Scythas.
Id tibi concessit fuit hæc tua gloria, primo
Inter tam varios assillisse loco, etc. etc.

FORTVNA IN DIVERSIS VARIAT: VNI BENIGNA MATER, ALTERI
VERÒ FIT NOVERCA. = 1688

XXXII.—Baro de Steinaw, a brave officer of high rank in the Bavarian army.

VTI PHCEBVS INTER NVBES, ITA GENEROSVS ANIMVS IN PERICVLIS SE OSTENDIT. = 1688

XXXIII.—Swartius, an officer of rank in command of the 6000 troops supplied by Maximilian-Henry, Archbishop of Cologne, as mentioned at page 378, ante. The poem is a play on his name, which signifies 'black,' and concludes with this chronogram—

FAVENS ET PROPITIA DEA FORTVNA SVAVE EST VEHICVLVM. = 1688

At page 81 commences a poem in hexameter and pentameter verse about the other officers of the imperial army who were killed in the war. The first eight lines mention them by name, and the two following lines accord this compliment to the group—

Ingentes heroum animæ, fortissima divum
Progenies, belli fulmina, martis honor.

This is the title to the poem—

RELIQVI DE EXERCITV CHRISTIANO-CÆSAREI GENERALES
DVCES ATQVE OFFICIALES. = 1688

And at the conclusion there are these four chronograms—

QVOTQVOT IN PANNONIÀ CONTRA BARBARVM GLORIOSÈ PARITER
ET CHRISTIANÈ OCCVBÈRE, REQVIESCANT IN PACE. = 1688

AT ISTI QVI IN VITA MANSÈRE, HÌ PERGANT ALACRITER
PVGNARE ADVERSVS HOSTES IVRATOS. = 1688

QVIA FILII IRÆ NON POTERVNT RESISTERE DEO FORTI
EXERCITVVM. = 1688

QVI PVGNAT ET PVGNAVIT PRO FAMVLO LEOPOLDO, PIO, AVGVSTO. = 1688

At page 83 commences a series of seventeen poems to the principal officers who fought by land and sea with the Venetians, each one concluding with a chronogram. The title to the series is—

DVCES ATQVE INSIGNIORES GENERALES SVB VENETO TERRÀ
MARIQVE PROPITIIS ASTRIS PVGNANTES. = 1688

I.—Otto Wilhelmus comes Köningsmarckius, a Swedish officer, governor of Pomerania, etc., a Venetian commander—

MARTIALI CORDI ET VIRO GENEROSO VIX VNVS ORBIS SATIS
ERIT. = 1688

II.—Maximilianus Wilhelmus, the young Duke of Brunswick, etc., commander of 2000 Lüneburg soldiers.

AB ADOLESCENTIA SVA ORDIRI DEBET, QVI GENEROSVS VIR
FIERI EXPETIS. = 1688

III.—Comes S. Polo, generalis militiæ Venetæ. He was aged, but went to battle as a young man ('juveni par prælia misces').
 DEBILIS ET INFIRMA SENECTVS SVAS QVOQVE VIRES OBTINET,
 QVÆIS HOSTES POSSIT FRANGERE. = 1688

IV.—Prior Brancaccio, director of the Pontifical and Maltese galleys ('Tirremium director,' etc.).
 QVODVIS SECVLVM ASSVEVIT NOVOS PROGIGNERE HEROAS. = 1688

V.—Mala Spina, prænobilis eques, leader of the 'galleys of the church' under Brancaccio. The poem throughout is a play on his evil-sounding name, 'an evil thorn.' The first line is—
 Non malè ; sed benè, vir pugnax, Mala Spina, vocaris, etc. etc.

The chronogram re-echoes the allusions—
 NON EST MALA SPINA QVÆ ROSAS VIRENTES, NE DIRIPIANTVR, PROTEGIT : HOSTES VERÒ PVNGIT ET SAVCIAT. = 1688

VI.—Comes Strasoldo, formerly in the Imperial army in Hungary, afterwards General of the Venetians in the Peloponnesian War. The poem concludes thus—

Trans mare portavit te gloria, quodque negavit
 Ungarus, id Regio dat tibi Graia decus.

QVÆ FORTVNA HOMINI CONFERT, LIVOR AVT INVIDIA NON SVRRIPLET. = 1688

VII.—Hannibal, Baron de Degenfeldt, formerly in the Bavarian army, and then a General in that of the Venetians in the Morea against the Turks.

PRO VNO ADVERSVS VNVM FORTITER PRÆLIANTIBVS VNA EST
 CORONA. = 1688

VIII.—Molino, Captain-general of the Venetian fleet.
 VENETIARVM SALVS ET PAX PERITI SVNT DVCES. = 1688

IX.—Jacomo Cornaro, a naval officer of high rank. The poem is a play on his name, 'cornua Lunæ,' etc., alluding somewhat obscurely to two places of which he was the governor.
 DVO CORNVA ORIENTIS LVNÆ MINVVNTVR PER VENETOS. = 1688

X.—Laurentius Venier, 'provisor' of the Venetian fleet. The chronogram alludes to his first name—

LAVRO CORONARI IS DIGNVS EST, QVISQVIS NON TIMVIT
 FORTITER PVGNARE. = 1688

XI.—De la Tour Maubourg, eques, et commendator Melitensis et copiarum Melitensium generalis.

MORS HEROIS ET VIRI GENEROSI PRO INGENTI LVCRO, NON VERÒ
 PRO VITIO AVT PÆNÀ EST REPVTANDA. = 1688

XII.—Mocenigo, General in the Dalmatian army for Venice.
 DVX IPSE INEPTVS EST QVI NON CONSILIIIS PARITER ET MARTE
 VIGET. = 1688

XIII.—Petrus Valier, an officer in the Dalmatian army.
 EXERCITVS VENETVS NON NVMERO, SED INNATO VALORE EST
 PRÆSTANTIOR. = 1688

XIV.—Janco, equitum Morlacensium generosissimus ductor.
 DVX GENEROSVS VICTORIÆ SEQVENTIS EST PRÆAMBULO. = 1688

XV.—Petrus Morosini, an officer of high rank.
 BONI DISCIPVLI SIBI QVÆRVNT SAPIENTES EXPERTOSQVE
 MAGISTROS. = 1688

XVI.—Baro d'Avila, an important officer attached to the Morea.
 FORTVNA EX TOTO EST VITREA, CVM SPLENDET, SVBITO
 FRANGITVR. = 1688

The poem next following is intended to extol other officers too numerous to mention, who belonged to various countries, and served as volunteers and otherwise in the Venetian army against the Turks. They are indicated by these lines in the poem—

Immixtos Anglis, Gallos pugnare volones
 Vidimus, et multa cæde rubere manus.
 Pro Cruce pro Christo varios cecidisse dolemus,
 Quorum mors potius vita vocanda foret.
 Sarmata, Germanus, Venetus Leo, Saxo, Borussus, Ausonius, Bavarus, Dalmata, Græcus Iber.

This reads like a revival of the Crusades. The poem consists of forty lines, and is preceded by this title—

IN CÆTEROS SVB REGIO VENETÆ REIPVBLICÆ LABARO
 TERRAQVE MARIQVE PRÆLIANTES STRENVOS ET PRÆCLAROS
 OFFICIALES. = 1688

And it concludes with this chronogram motto—
 PEREGRINI HOMINIS ATQVÆ IGNOTÆ VIRTVTIS NON EST LAVS
 AVT CVPIDO. = 1688

A change now comes over the thoughts of the poet. Friends and allies having, in the preceding poems, been praised to the utmost for all they had done and suffered for the cause of Christianity and for the German Emperor, the subject was, so far, pretty well exhausted. The Turks now come in for their share, and, as may be imagined, the poet does not spare the hated enemies, and the worst that can be said against them in verse and chronogram is done without stint. The Sultan is the first, and he has a poem to himself at page 92, bearing this title—

FOEDVS INIVSTE RVPTVM SVLTANI PERNICIES ET RVINA
 ORIENTIS. = 1688

Mahometh IV. Orientis imperator, magnus Turcarum Sultanus. The second line denounces him as 'Parricida, sui certa ruina throni.

And these chronograms follow at its conclusion—

LVNA ORIENTIS PER BINOS FORTITER DEPRIMETVR, ET AQVILA
ITERATÒ EXALTABITVR. = 1688
PRINCIPII MALI RARÒ BONVS IN ORBE VIDETVR EXITVS. = 1688
VÆ! IMPERIO ORIENTALI IN QVO CÆSAR IPSE PERFIDVS ATQVE
PERIVRVS EST. = 1688

The poems which follow next relate to various personages subordinate to the Sultan, in command of his forces and otherwise. They are preceded by this title—

VARIANTIS ET NOVERCANTIS FORTVNÆ VESIRIANÆ TRISTE
LVDIBRIVM. = 1688

Cara Mustapha, Pasha, Grand Vizier of the Turks, or Prime Minister. The uncomplimentary poem to him, hinting at strangulation, concludes with—

CONSILIA MALA, CONSVLTORI IPSI NOCIVA, IN CAPVT
AVTHORIS RECVRRVNT. = 1688

Cara Ibrahim, Pasha, the successor of Mustapha. The last line of his poem hints at his end also by strangulation.

PRÆMIA TYRANNIDIS, QVÆ IN FINE TRIBVIT, SVNT FVNES ET VINCVLA. = 1688

N.N. Modernus Magnus Turcarum Vesirius, et primus aulæ minister.

PER QVÆ QVIS IN VITA DELINQVIT, PER HÆC MORIENS SERIO
PVNITVR. = 1688

Ibrahim, a relative of the Sultan, vizier and governor of Buda, General in the Turkish army. He was strangled by the Grand Vizier Mustapha.

INSATIANDA AMBITIO HAVT PATITVR JVXTA SE IRE CORRI-VALES. = 1688

Abdu Pasha, vizier and the last governor of Buda. The poem intimates that he found a more glorious death by the sword in battle than he would have suffered by the rope.

IN OBSIDIONIBVS AB INSIGNI ET EXPERTO DVCE PENDET SALVS
VRBIS. = 1688

Emericus Tekeli, the chief of the Hungarian malcontents, and called in the poem a 'rebel,' and in the memoir which follows, 'rebellantium dux et protector.' He persevered with the perfidy and pertinacity of a Pharaoh. His wife also was a proper match for him, 'ejus quoque sævitiem induit, atque Amazonem se novam esse monstravit.' The title to this poem is—

EMERICVS TEKELIVS PANNONIÆ INIVSTVS TVRBATOR ET SEDITIONIS AVTHOR. = 1688

And these chronograms are at the conclusion, on page 103—
QVISQVIS ES, CVM VIRO TVRBATORE ET SEDITIONIS NOLI TE
JVNGERE. = 1688

FATALIS PLERVMQVE ET FLENDVS REI ISTIVS EST, FVIT, ERITQVE FINIS. = 1688
QVOD IPSE QVOQVE MORTE SVÆ EXPERIETVR TÔCKELI. = 1688

P. Josua sive Joseph, a 'country clergyman,' rebellium dux et antesignanus (i.e. a rebel leader and a soldier who fights before the standards).

MORS SOLET ESSE ECHO VITÆ PRÆTERITÆ, VTI IN TERRIS
VIXISTI: ITA ORDINARIÈ FINIES. = 1688

The rest of the 'impious and pernicious men' who belonged to the conspiracy of Tekeli are noticed in the next poem. One Pethnehasius is specially mentioned—

PETHNEHASIVS SEDITIONIS INSANÆ DVX, REBELLES PRÆ
RELIQVIS OPPORTVNÈ DESERIT. = 1688

His poem commences with the following lines, and ends with the chronogram—

Non malè qui cœpit; sed qui malè finiit, orco
Traditur, et pœnæ fit faber ipse suæ, etc.
OMNIA SVNT BONA ET FAVSTA, SI BONO EXITV CLAVDANTVR. = 1688

Four others are grouped together; it is mentioned in a note, that as a consequence of the war promoted by them, the number of people sent from Austria and Hungary into slavery was 87,400 (viz., old men 6000, women 11,215, girls 14,092, and boys 56,093. The towns and villages burnt in the region of Vienna 14,062, and of Hungary 871.) The poem concludes with—

TEMPVS ADEST, INSTAT GRAVIS VLTIO, TVRCA PERIBIT: VATES, EFFATI TESTIS ET ANNVS ERIT. = 1688

On page 106 there is an hexameter acrostic on the words 'Leopoldus vireat, Mahometus vileat'—'Austria, Polonia, Venetiæ'— followed by these chronograms—

AVSTRIA NE TIMEAS, CRVX EXALTANDA RESVRGIT. = 1688
O! MARIA VNGARIÆ TOTIVS PATRONA! } = 1688
IO! LVNA IACET ATTRITA SVB PEDIBVS TVIS.

The concluding pages contain some curious 'prognostications' in verse, drawn from events of the period; the last poem is a 'Presagium de anno 1688,' concluding with these chronograms—

JOSEPHO AVSTRIACO PRIMO HÆREDITARIO VNGARIÆ REGI SIT
PAX ET PERPETVA SALVS. = 1688
INGLORIVS ET ENERVIS TVRCA AD PANNONES NVNQVAM REVER-

FINIS.

i.e. I finish, oh that the fury of war would also finish and that dear peace might endure to the world.

There is a list of corrections needful in the pages of print, with an address to the reader in chronogram and verse, the only example of the sort that has come under my notice—

TYPOGRAPHVS LECTORI,
 VT ERRORIBVS QVI METRO INOFINATÈ IRREPSEVNT,
 NE INDIGNETVR. } = 1688

Irrepsisse typo quæ lector amice notantur,
 Hæc animo sperem menda ferenda bono.
 Tam castigatus luci quis prodiit author?
 Qui vidit librum labe carere suum?
 Luna suas patitur maculas : Sol pluribus ipse
 Subjicitur nævis, quæ sine nube dies?
 Cum nihil esse scias ex omni parte beatum,
 Hinc oculo errores fer patiente meos.

THE CITY OF VIENNA.

A LARGE volume of engravings representing the public buildings in and about Vienna in the year 1724, is worthy of notice for good architectural delineation enlivened by the introduction of street scenes, which exhibit some of the out-door manners and dress of the people of that city nearly 200 years ago. The British Museum copy is catalogued under 'Vienna,' the press-mark is 554. e. 3. The title of the first part begins, 'Vera et accurata delineatio,' etc. Several years were occupied in the production of the work ; it is dated 1724-1737. There are a few chronograms, the first being the date of the title of the third part of the work—

ANNO, IN QVO AVSTRIA SVPERIOR CAROLO VI. HOMAGII DEBITA
 PERSOLVIT. = 1733

i.e. The year in which Upper Austria paid the debt of homage due to Charles the Sixth.

An emblematical engraved title-page next follows, wherein are five chronograms, it is a fine example of such a work ; the accompanying facsimile of the original represents it on a reduced scale to adapt it to the size of my pages. The effect of a diminished copy by the particular process here used, is to render finer all the lines of the engraving, every feature being reduced in equal proportion. The first of the chronograms hangs from the trumpet being sounded by the substantial winged female in mid-air; the four others are conspicuous at the base of the picture—

PRODIGIO PLENA AC SIMILIS NOVA EX ANTIQVA VIENNA. = 1732
 INDEFESSO INGENII, ARTIS LABORE, VNITO COELI, SVPERVMQVE
 FAVORE, = 1732

A new Vienna complete and like unto a prodigy instead of the old Vienna, through the unwearied labour of genius and art by the favour of heaven and the gods above, this prodigy had now arisen within thirty years, with gardens, great statues, palaces, market-places, promenades and sacred buildings, wonderfully grand, when Charles VI. the Austrian, the holy, august, pious, strong, happy, and glorious, was emperor.

THE THIRTY YEARS' WAR.

THE Thirty Years' War is frequently alluded to in this and in my former volume on Chronograms, and therefore it seems to call for a few remarks which may lead the reader to gain a little insight into an important event in the history of Europe. The name is given to that memorable contest which lasted from 1618 to 1648, between the Emperor and the Roman Catholic States of Germany on the one side, and the Protestant States, with their allies Denmark, and afterwards Sweden and France, on the other side. Spain, Holland, and Transylvania also took part in it, but their interference was less direct. This long struggle has generally been considered a religious war; but political objects were the real motives of the contending parties, and religion was used to veil the designs of the leaders. Many names are memorable among them, the Emperors Matthias and Ferdinand II.; Frederick v. Elector Palatine, the son-in-law of James I. of England; Christian IV. of Denmark; Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, and, on his death, Duke Bernhard of Weimar, who led the Protestant allied forces. The Imperial forces were led by Wallenstein, Tilly also commanding on the same side. Passing over the successes and defeats in the long contest, Ferdinand was compelled by events to conclude a peace after seven years' negotiation, which was signed at Münster, in Westphalia, on 24th October 1648.

A writer on the Luther commemoration in 1883 remarks, that Ferdinand II., who was a pupil of the Jesuits, had sworn before the Papal throne to restore Catholicism in his hereditary territories. He undertook to intimidate his Protestant neighbours into recanting their heresies. His agents were Tilly and Wallenstein, and a war of religious extermination was proclaimed. Morally the Thirty Years' War is not to be charged upon Luther and the Reformation. On the other hand, the connection between them can scarcely be described as an accident, though not to be imputed as a reproach to Protestantism. Protestantism, as a German speaker recently said, was a rebellion against the terrible doctrine that the faith of a people lies in the discretion of its sovereign. The Hapsburgs held the tenet in the meaning, that the sovereigns whose religion was to be accepted were themselves. They were fast subjugating all Protestant Germany, as they had reduced already the Archduchies and half Bohemia, when Gustavus Adolphus appeared. Resistance to Ferdinand II. and to Rome, though it laid the land waste for thirty years, and exhausted it for a hundred, is in the eyes of patriotic Germans an essential element in the unity they now enjoy. They are the best judges; they claim Luther and Lutheranism as their guide through the labyrinth of petty intrigues and intestine strifes of the intervening centuries; they do not grudge the price they have had to pay for him and it.

A 'Bohemian exile' named Sictor wrote some chronograms on events of the war which were enacted in his own country. The particulars are as follows:—

A tract in the Bodleian Library, Oxford (press-mark Ash. 561 No. 2), 4°, pp. 8, was written by John Sictor, the 'Bohemian exile' who was the author of certain chronogrammatic works mentioned in my former book on Chronograms, pp. 18, 25, 35. The tract was published in 1645; it contains a few of the chronograms which I have already quoted from his work of 1646, together with some others relating to Gustavus Adolphus and the Thirty Years' War which here follow, and have not otherwise come under my observation. The title is, 'Chronometra aliquot memorabilium rerum his certis annis gestarum.'

Historia est testis mundi, et narratio rerum,
Quæ nisi sit veri nuncia, laude caret,' etc. etc.
'Cantabrigiæ 1645.'

As usual with this author, his name is not on the title, but elsewhere, as in this instance at the conclusion of a dedicatory epigram, on another page. I extract the following

On the death of Gustavus, his daughter Christina became Queen of Sweden, to the great satisfaction of the people. Public opinion became very unfavourable at a later period of her career. The reader is referred to page 403 infra for some particulars concerning her.

Near Tabor, in Bohemia, the stronghold of the Hussites and their leader Ziska (see Chronograms, p. 335), situated on a commanding eminence, was fought the battle in which the Austrians were defeated. This happened on the day of Saint Matthias, the 24th February; the chronogram refers to the figurative language of the fourth chapter of the prophet Daniel.

i.e. The day sacred to Matthias, sacred to the Austrians, sealed their fate, as by a swift turn (?) the lofty oaks shall perish. (See Daniel, chapter iv.)

The same event is referred to in the next chronogram, under the date 6th of March, new style, the same day as 24th February in the old calendar.

i.e. March (or Mars) on the sixth day overcame the Austrians by the sword, like as the ice melts when the south wind blows.

The last page of the tract contains three epigrams on the warlike events of the period (the author seems still to have in his mind the dream described in the fourth chapter of Daniel), and it concludes with this

i.e. The south wind is repelled by so many conflicts with the north wind, Austria, the oak, is prostrate through the northern strength. This chronogram is full of double meaning, such as Auster (the south wind) and Austria (the nation). Robur and Quercus are almost synonymous.

TEMESVAR.

THE fortress of Temesvar or Temeswar in Hungary was the scene of warfare and bloodshed at the period now in question, when it was in the possession of the Turks. It was besieged in 1716 by the Emperor Charles VI. and Prince Eugene, and taken from the Turks, who were eventually expelled from the country which they had held for 150 years. The following nine anagrams on the name of the town are more or less allusive to current circumstances, as also are the accompanying chronograms in Leonine hexameter and pentameter verse, which give the date of the victory. They are taken from Zedler's Universal Lexicon, xlii. 719, where they are printed with many troublesome inaccuracies. The words of the anagrams are repeated in the chronogram verses, and they are altogether very curious. Medals relating to this siege are mentioned in my former volume on Chronograms, p. 159.

THE SPANISH SUCCESSION WAR.

THE war of the 'Spanish Succession' was the result of the events which preceded and the intrigues which ensued on the death, in 1700, of Charles II. King of Spain, the last of the house of Austria; he by his will having nominated as his successor Philip Duke of Anjou, grandson of Louis XIV. of France. The circumstances are related in Zedler, xxxviii. 1182, with the following satirical verses and chronogram of the year 1700, and some remarks to the following effect:—Upon the happy progress of the righteous weapons which England and Holland made use of to influence the House of Austria and the fickle Catalonians, adversely to the pretensions of France.

I have sung 'alto' to the cock (i.e. the Frenchman), but, with a constrained voice, now I sing 'basso' with natural gravity. I have sung, and all France has danced to the song ; now when I sing a 'Fugue,' all France takes flight. Lastly, I have sung 'Falsetto' (falsely) ; the English music comes in, it taught me by its touch (or influence) to have sung differently. Therefore now I sing other things with a Catalonian voice, taught thoroughly well after the English manner. (Chronogram.) May the most exalted persons and the neighbouring kingdoms foresee the remaining things, and may they sing all things prosperously in English chorus.

POLAND.
APOLLO HEROICUS ET LYRICUS.
APPLAÛSE AND GRATULATION.

FOLIO volume, and a very curious one, claims especial notice; British Museum, press-mark 1871. d. 2.; no pagination, but it consists of sixty-four leaves. It contains poetical or versified addresses in the Latin language to high and exalted personages, eulogising them in exceedingly flattering terms, after the fashion of the period, and referring to the wars and public events of northern Europe in the seventeenth century (mostly in Poland), in which those persons were intimately concerned. Much fancy is displayed in the various compositions; they are, with a few exceptions, in hexameter metre, the appropriate heroic verse, and they are adorned with chronograms to give the dates. Full transcripts would be needful to show the character of the verses, and the great variety of subject and events alluded to: the extracts which follow will set forth the titles, sometimes at length, in order to elucidate the unusual character of some of the verses and the chronograms which accompany them. There is no date in figures anywhere in the book; the chronograms alone afford the dates intended by the author, who was the Abbot of Oliva.

This place or village of Oliva, is in the neighbourhood of Dantzic, in Prussia, formerly part of the territory of the once powerful kingdom of Poland. Here is the anciently celebrated Cistercian abbey, suppressed in 1829, the church of which, a stately edifice dating from 1581, is now the parish church. The choir contains the figures of Polish Kings and Dukes of Pomerania, and carvings done in 1619. The refectory is adorned with portraits(?) of all the abbots from 1170, the date of the foundation of the abbey. The peace which terminated the sixty-one years' northern war was concluded here between Sweden and Poland on 3d May 1660. The palace of the abbots is now inhabited by some noble family of Germany; it possesses a beautiful garden, and the surrounding scenery is said to be very fine. Poland had been conquered by the Swedes in 1655, and it recovered its independence by the treaty at the above-mentioned date.

The book now under notice was printed at the monastery of Oliva in 1712 according to the chronogram on the title-page, the author also there states that the contents hitherto scattered about are now brought together in one volume. The full name and designations of the author are thus given at the commencement of the first address to Pope Innocent XI.—'Michael Antonius Hacki, Abbas Mon. B. M. de Oliva O. C. S. R. M. Pol. Secr. et Ejusd. Gen. ad P. P. C.' The general title-page is as follows:—

'Apollo heriocus et lyricus diversus primorum orbis Christiani capitum ac potissimum (sic) bello sacro colligatorum palmas et lauros de hostibus reportatas, nec non aliorum nonnullorum principum, cardinalium, amplissimæ Urbis Dantiscanæ elogia ac virtutum decora, sparsim hactenus, nunc junctum in uno fasce decantans publicæ luci datur à P. ac R. D. M. A. H. A. O.

Votum Chronosticum

AMODò CORONET PAX CHRISTIANOS! = 1712

The first address in hexameter verse is to Pope Innocent XI., and it concludes with this chronogram—

INNOCENTIVS XI. } = 1687
DATOR LIBERATOR BEATISSIMVS
VIVAT!

The next address bears this title: Poenitentia gloriosa. Vaticinium triumphale, etc. of Pope Alexander VIII., and this chronogram—

VIVAT ALEXANDER! VENETVM STIRPS } = 1689
SIT CAPVT ORBIS!

The address occupies more than three pages of hexameter verse; the first letter of each line is printed sideways, to form these words, 'Beatissimus pater sanctissimus dominus summus ecclesiæ pontifex Christi vicarius Alexander papa octavus de gente Othobonorum Venetus vivat triumphet.' (This Pope helped the Emperor Leopold against the Turks; his family name was Ottoboni, of Venetian origin.) The verses conclude with this chronogram of the date of his election—

ITA
FORTVNATIS AVGVSTIORIS TRIGENI AVSPICIIS } = 1689
PLAVSVM DABAT

'Subjectissimus.'

(Then follow the author's initials, etc., in two lines.)

The next address, in hexameter verse, bears this grandiloquent dedicatory title, 'Deo et Leopoldo Liberatori augusto, Buda Hungariæ Metropolis, potentissimis de Otomanica servitute, Vindiciis mancipata augustissimi triumphis applaudente' (here follows a long line of initial letters of the author's name, etc.). The verses conclude with this chronogram, of the date when the Emperor Leopold I. was carrying on successful war against the Turks in Hungary—

LEOPOLDO LIBERATORI IO! TRIVMPHE!
VIVAT REX HVNGARIÆ! } = 1686

The next address in hexameter verse bears this title, Serenissimus Josephus primus, Romanorum Hungariæ Boemiæ

REX VIVAT REGVM
LEOPOLDI ORBISQVE SALVTI. } = 1689

The address fills four pages; the first letter of each line is printed sideways to form these words, 'Regum maximi imperatorum augustissimi christianorum vindicis Leopoldi primi filio Josepho primo Romanorum Hungariæ Boemiæ regi regum felicissimo augustissima universa.' And it concludes with this flattering chronogram—

TER REX, TER FELIX MVNDI CAPVT
IO IOSEPHVS! } = 1689

This Joseph I., son of the Emperor Leopold I., became king of Hungary, etc., in 1687.

Another grandiloquent title commences the next address to the king of Poland, 'Deo et Joanni III. ter magno regi orthodoxo Austri vindici, Orientis domitori, Occidentis defensori, Aquilonis terrori, Turcico, Scythico, Dacico, etc. etc., invictissimo Domino domino suo clementissimo Sarmatia triumphans applaudit

VIVAT IO! REGIS LAVRO, REDVCISQVE TRIVMPHIS } = 1686
Accinente.'

(Here follow the author's initials.)

The address in hexameter verse fills four pages, and ends with this chronogram—

VIVAT IOANNES TERTIVS
REX POLONIÆ { TVRCI DOMITOR } = 1686
CHRISTIANORVM DEFENSOR. = 1686

This king of Poland, John Sobieski, was the last independent king, 1674-1697; he was illustrious for victories over the Cossacks, Turks, and Tartars. (See former volume Chronograms.)

The next address bears an important-looking title; it is also to John III., whose name is printed in capital letters an inch and a half in size, 'HEROI SERENISSIMO JOANNI TERTIO regi Poloniarum ter

magno regum potentissimo, sapientissimo, Optimo, Europæ defensori, orbis servatori, patriæ pater

Imperium sine fine.' (Virgil, Æn. i. 279.)

There are four pages of hexameter verse; the first letter of each line is printed sideways to form the above words of the title, concluding with this chronogram—

IOANNES MAGNVS REX, VINDEX } = 1689
COR SIT OLIVÆ!

The next address to the Venetians is more simple, though it begins grandly thus, 'Deo et Venetis christianæ libertatis et mari et terrâ assertoribus,' etc. etc. The verses conclude with this chronogram—

VIVAT VENETIA MARTE VINDEX } = 1687
CHRISTIANÆ LIBERTATIS!

The next address is to Francis Morosini, Doge of Venice, 'Soli in Leone Heroum felicissimo principum serenissimo Domino Domino Francisco Morosini Duci Venetiarum etc. Lunæ Ottomanicæ semper victori serenissimæ reipublicæ propagatori, patriæ patri.'

SEMPER VICTOR IO VIGeat DVX PLVRIBVS ANNIS! = 1690

The verses are in praise of the Doge and of the victories over the Turks by the Venetians; the first letter of each line is printed sideways, to form the words of the title, commencing at the word 'Heroum.' The last two lines include the chronogram—

Regnaque Tanta Deum VENETIS cupit addere Scep̄tris :
I VINDEX, SOLISQVE FRVENS LEO SOLQVE TRIVMPHA. = 1690

The first alludes to the kingdoms and countries, mentioned in the preceding lines, conquered by the Doge; the second (and also the commencement of the title) alludes to his armorial device, which represented the sun, or a sunbeam; and a lion.

The next address again proceeds to exalt the Venetians through their patriarch S. Laurentius—

'Sanctitas Veneta ob divorum honores S. Laurentio Iustiniano, Venetiarum primo patriarchæ in cœlis triumphanti, a sanctissimo Domino nostro D. Alexandro papa octavo in ecclesia militante decretos triumphans,' etc.

In this address also the first letters of the lines are printed to form almost the words of the title, and this chronogram is the concluding hexameter line; it is explained as giving the year of the saint's canonization—

SIC VENETO DIVVS VVLT IVSTINIANVS HONOREM. = 1690

This chronogram is explained by an allusion to a proverb—Dat Galenus opes, dat Justinianus honores.

The next address is to Christina, Queen of Sweden; the title commences—

'Majestas virtutis christianæ, in serenissima et potentissima Christina Suecorum, Gottorum, Vandalorum regina,' etc. etc. There are four pages of hexameter verses, with marginal notes, giving a general idea of their purport. The following extract gives the opening lines, and the marginal notes which accompany the succeeding ones—

Majestas stirpis regiæ.		Regia Wasaidum soboles, reginaque magno
		Edita Gustavo; patriis par filia sceptris.

Abdicatio anno 1654.—Heroicæ virtutis specimen.—Sui ipsius victoria.—Romam, Alexandro VII. Pont. commigratio.—Regium Gustavi de Seren. filia præsagium.—Alexandra, secundum Christinæ nomen.—Pax Monasteriensis.—Regnum virtutis.—Libertas principe digna.—Animi magnitudo.—Contemptus sæculi.—Comitas augusta.—Clementia regia.—Pietas munifica.—Plenitudo scientiarum.

The concluding lines of the eulogy are as follows—

Quantâ prò Superi! se Majestate videndum
Præbet honos animi! Quanto cumulata sereno,
Christina, virtus redit, et dignissima Christo!
O spreti regina throni, Christina tuique!
Major Alexandro vives: regesque coronam!
Et virtus debere tibi, post astra, loquentur.

This Christina, Queen of Sweden, was the daughter of Gustavus Adolphus, of the royal family of Vasá. In 1644 she took the reins of government into her own hands. She was energetic in all her undertakings, and acted rather a conspicuous part in the affairs of Europe, but having secretly become a convert to the Roman religion, she renounced the crown and retired to Rome, where she lived in state, and died there in 1689. The whole of the verses are so laudatory that one's curiosity is excited to know more of this exemplary woman. A modern historian sums up her character generally in these words:—She was only six years old when she succeeded to the throne. She became more fond of literature and the arts than of politics. Her vanity was delighted by the homage paid to her by literary men, and she pensioned such of them as she thought ready to extend her reputation; she spent large sums in rare books and specimens of art. Her subjects were displeased at her prodigality; they condemned her tastes, they lamented her unchastity, and sensibly advised her to marry, and attend more strictly to her duties as a sovereign. Against marriage, which would have subjected her caprice to restraints, she indignantly remonstrated, and she eventually abdicated and retired into private life, retaining ample revenues as the means to gratify her pleasures. She went to Brussels, where she privately abjured the Protestant faith. She afterwards went to Rome, making a sort of triumphant entry there. She soon became disgusted with a private station, and is said to have intrigued to regain possession of the crown. She grew tired of Italy too, where, to gain applause, she had publicly embraced the Roman Catholic faith. She could no longer meet with the respect to which she had been accustomed. Though still young, only twenty-nine at her abdication, her character was not of a high order, and her manners were still less calculated to win affection; she could not forget that she had been a queen; she wished to pass for a wit, a philosopher; and she found to her inexpressible mortification that what had been spontaneously paid to her as a sovereign was withheld from the woman. The irregularities of her life, especially in France, did not much support the superiority which she was always ready to claim. Vain, weak, superficial, without beauty, without grace, she was soon reduced to her own level. Licentiousness was not her only crime. In a fit of jealousy she caused one of her lovers, Monaldeschi, to be assassinated, and although not brought to public justice, she was obliged to quit France and end her infamous career at Rome. Never has sovereign been more egregiously over-rated.

The verses conclude with this chronogram, made before she died—

CHRISTINA ALEXANDRA
MIRÆ VIRTVTIS REGINA VIVAT! } = 1687

This queen of 'wonderful virtue' survived these flattering words only two years.

The next is addressed to the Elector Frederic III. of Brandenburg, who is classed among the heroes of the period: 'BRANDENBURGUM TRIUMPHANS serenissimo principe ac Domino domino Friderico III., Dei gratia Marchione Brandenburgico s. r. i. Archicamerario et Electore, supremo Duce in Prussia, etc. etc.—

FAVSTO VBIQVE GLORIOSOQVE PASSV
ADEVNTE' } = 1690

Here again the first letters of the lines of the four pages of hexameter verse are so printed as to form the words of the title, with some slight variation or addition, and a chronogram at the end—

ÆQVALIS PATRI VIVAT FRIDERICVS VT ÆVVM! = 1690

The next address is to James Lewis, Prince of Poland, and his wife. It bears this title, 'Hilaria Augusta Poloniæ et Europæ, ob serenissimi Domini domini Jacobi Ludovici regii principis Poloniæ et M. D. Lithuaniz: ac serenissimæ v. sp. Hedvigis Elisabethæ principis Neoburgicæ nuptias, connubiali et affinitatum nexu augustissimas regiis, et reipublicæ votis auspicatissimas triumphantium.

TRIVMPHVS HIC VVARSAVIÆ,
DIEBVS, EVGE! LIBERI.' } = 1691

Here in this address there is a new feature in the construction of the hexameter lines, which fill three pages. The first and last letters of each line are printed upright, and when read from one to the other they form a complimentary sentence separate from the lines to which they belong, in praise of the married couple and their parents, repeating the words of the title with some additions; the last couplet includes the chronogram, which must be read as an ordinary Roman numeral date, MDCXCI.—

Si clypeo<sup>1</sup> renuant, renuant servire Leoni,

There are a great many footnotes to explain the allusions throughout; the following apply to the last couplet—1. Neo-sponsorum. 2. Scythas et Turcas. 3. Fluvio e regione Thraciæ Turcarum.

The next address concerns the rulers of Poland, viz., James the son of King John III. 'Jacobi principis triumphale tirocinium sub paternis regalibus auspiciis serenissimi Joannis III. Poloniarum regis,' etc. etc. The verses are in a different metre from all the preceding addresses (in four lines, as in Ode IX. of Horace). The only chronogram is at the conclusion—

IO
VIVAT IACOBVS PRINCEPS
MAGNI IOANNIS TERTII REGIS POLONLÆ
FILIVS; CELSA GESTIENTIS LECHLÆ GLORIA!

} = 1687

The next address, in the same metre as the preceding one, is to Cardinal Opatius Pallavicini, the legate from Pope Innocent XI. to John III., King of Poland. 'Virtus eminentior in purpura. Eminentissimo et reverendissimo Domino domino S. R. E. Cardinali Opatio Palavicino,' etc. etc. The three pages of verse terminate with this chronogram—

OPATIVS PALLAVICINVS CARDINALIS
SEDIS APOSTOLICÆ IN POLONIIS LEGATVS
FLOREAT! VIGEAT!

} = 1687

The next address is to Cardinal Michael Radzieowski, a bishop and Officer of State in Poland, in the Sapphic metre of Horace. 'Jason Augustior honor eminentissimus in eminentissimo . . . Cardinali Radzieowski, episcopo Varmiensi et Sambieni<sup>1</sup> . . . etc. (many other grand titles). The front page concludes with this, the only chronogram—

MICHAEL RADZIEIOWSKI
PVRPVRATVS ANTISTES
VITA VIVAT!

} = 1687

The next address is to the Cardinal Legate from John III. of Poland to the Pope Innocent XI. The title begins, 'Eminentia summis proxima eminentissimi . . . Cardinalis Joannis Casimiri Donhoff, serenissimi et potentissimi Poloniarum regis Joannis III., ad S. D. Innocentium XI. legati,' etc. etc., and concludes thus—

VIVAT
IOANNES CASIMIRVS DONHOFF PVRPVRA INSIGNIS PRÆSVL!

} = 1687

The next verses are in praise of the city of Dantzic and all belonging to it. The title begins, 'Pandora felicior urbium Sarmatiæ Dantiscum, Balthici maris princeps emporium, regalis Prussiae metropolis primaria.' At the end is this chronogram—

VIVAT DANTISCVM
INSIGNE POLONLÆ PRVSSIÆQVE IVBAR!

} = 1687

<sup>1</sup> Ermeland, and Sameland, in Prussia.

The next address or set of verses is intended to finish off with a flourish the foregoing panegyrics, by an anagrammatic applause in verse, occupying two pages. The title is as follows—
Pro Coronide Applausum Anagrammaticum, prout sequitur, subnectimus.

Regium nomen

M. A. H. A. C.

The author says in this title that the verses which follow contain 2520 changes (or anagrams) on the name 'Johannes,' by means of transposition of the letters, but not forming words with any sense; also that the verses contain twenty 'significant' anagrams on that name. This may be seen in the Latin words, or short phrases mingled with the other words composing the verses, and printed in conspicuous capital letters. These words have a 'significant meaning' easily recognised in reading the verses. At the conclusion is this chronogram, giving the date of the coronation of John III.—

IO TRIVMPHET POLONIA FORTVNATIO
DE IOANNE TERTIO AVGVSTÈ CORONATO!

} = 1676

At the bottom of the page is this note: 'Cum sequens poema seriùs in lucem prodieris, idem post omnia inseritur.' The next page contains what here follows; it is a full page of bold print all in varied capital letters, and (in the original) divided into short lines. It is addressed to Louis XIV. of France—

'Ludovico Magno Galliarum regi regum, principum, heroum augustissimo, Ecclesiæ primogenito, Pietate christianissimo, Justitia potentissimo, Sapientia invictissimo, Clementia serenissimo, Consiliorum inventis et eventis altissimo, Recte-actorum mole latissimo, Nominis immortalitate longissimo, Omnibus omnium maximo Io Victori.

VIVE TVIS, O REX!

DVM GALLIA IVBILAT, ANNIS.'

} = 1691

The four succeeding pages are filled with hexameter lines, of which the initial letters and the terminal letters (both in conspicuous capitals), when read downwards in succession, compose the words of the above title, down to the word 'victori.' At the end is the invocation by the author to Louis as successor of King Pepin—

De Voto Orbis Christianissimi
 PIPINIO MAGNVS VIVAT LVDOVICVS VT ORBI! = 1691
 Adprecatur omnium minimus et infimus
 R. D. M. A. H. etc. etc. (the author's initials.)

The panegyric or gratulation verses to other personages are continued by the same author. I take only those which contain chronograms. The one which here follows is to be found in the British Museum catalogue under the entry of the author's name, etc., as represented by the initials thereof, at the conclusion of the title which I now proceed to quote—

'SPEI AUGUSTÆ SOLATIA regni Poloniæ Majestatum serenissimi Domini domini Joannis III. regis, serenissimæ Dominiæ dominiæ Mariæ Casimiræ reginæ, publico orbis christiani voto decantata

VIVE DIV ET VINCE, AVGVSTÂ REX PROLE

 C. R. D. M. A. H. A. O. S. O. C. S. T. D. P. A. O. G. & P. G. S. R.
 M. S. P. P. S. C.'

The verses which follow this singular display of letters do not contain any chronograms.

The next gratulation verses have the title of 'Regalis hymen,' etc., and are addressed to the Count Palatine, Maximilian Emanuel, and the Princess Teresa Cunegunde of Poland on their marriage—

ANNO
 CHRISTI, ALTO EX VTEROQVE DEI, EX VTEROQVE
 MARIÆ. = 1694

The author's initials are the same as the foregoing, and so entered in the British Museum catalogue.

The next verses are from the pen of the same author as that of the two preceding sets, as indicated by the same initial letters. The title commences, 'Io triumphe Majestatibus regni Poloniarum,' etc.—addressed to John III. the King, to Maria Casimir the Queen, and mother of Theresa Cunegunde the Electress Palatine, and to the princes Alexander and Constantine. It concludes with this chronogram—

Io triumphe
 REX QVI HAVD ABSQ. MARIA AVRI FERT SECVLA;
 VIVAT! = 1694

The three pages of hexameter verses have their initial and terminal letters printed in conspicuous capitals, which, when read downwards in succession, compose the special praises of this royal family, but without any further chronogram.

The next six pages of verse declare the praises of Frederic III., Margrave of Brandenburg, and his share in the wars. The title, after the fashion of the period, does not attribute to him a position of humility—'Dextera Domini ad sceptrum ter invictum, Clementia

Fortitudine Sapientia serenissimi potentissimi Domini domini Friderici III. Dei gratia Marchionis Brandenburgici, s. r. i. Archicamerarii, Principis Electoris supremi ducis in Prussia, Ducis Magdeburgi, Juliæ, Cliviæ, Montium, Stetini, Pomeranorum, Cassubiorum, Vandalorum, Crosnæ, Suibusii; Burgrauii Norimbergensis; Principis Halberstadiensis, Mindensis, Caminensis; Comitis in Hohenzollern, Marcæ, Ravensbergi; Domini in Rabenstein, Lauenburg, Butoro, etc. etc. Universitatis Hallo-Fridericianæ fundatoris sapientissimi.' The dedication to him then follows, and six pages of hexameter verse, concluding thus—

Vivat! Et Æternam probet ut se DEXTERA SCEPTRO;
TER FELIX VIVAT FRIDERICVS TERTIVS ÆVVM! = 1695

The next four pages are devoted to the unsparing praise of the Archbishop of Cologne, who was also a territorial prince, and went to battle with his own troops. The author's name and titles, as represented by initials only in some of the preceding applauses, are here set forth more at large: 'Sol in Geminis, serenitas Bavarica in candore et constantia serenissimi et potentissimi Domini domini Josephi Clementis<sup>1</sup> archiepiscopi Coloniensis, Leodiensis episcopi, utriusque Bavaricæ ducis, etc. s. r. i. principis et electoris, Archicancellarii per Italiam, etc. Imperiali Christi et Leopoldi coronæ perpetuum Ver portendens.

There is no further chronogram in the verses which follow.

The next verses relate to the Emperor Leopold. There is but one chronogram at the end of the title, which is as follows:—'Luna sub pedibus sacræ Cæsareæ regicæ majestati Leopoldo primo magno maximo imperatori Romanorum semper Augusto regi Germaniæ, Hungariæ, Bohemiæ, Archiduci Austriæ, Duci Burgundiæ, etc., pro pace Turca supplex

The next verses are addressed to the Grand-duke Cosmo III. of Tuscany, 'Deus Magnus Dominus cum serenissimo et potentissimo principe ac Domino Cosmo III. Dei gratia Duce Heturiciæ,' etc. At the conclusion is this hexameter chronogram—

DVX ITALI MVRVS REGNI TIBI TVSCIA VIVAT! = 1697

The next verses are addressed to Zaluski, Bishop of Plock, in Poland, 'Agnus in medio cardinalium virtutum sigillum excellentissimi illustrissimi reverendissimi Domini Andræ Chrysostomi in

Zaluskie, Zaluski Dei et Apostolicæ sedis gratiâ Episcopi Plocensis,' etc. The verses conclude with this hexameter chronogram—

VIVE DIV FELIX CVM TERQVE QVATERQ. BEATIS. = 1694

The next verses bear this title, 'Candor illæsus illustrissimi et excellentissimi Domini domini Christophori Leopoldi Comitis a Schafgotsche, etc. etc. Ab obligatissimo Calamo et Animo C. R. D. M. A. H.' etc. (the same author's initials).

IMPERIO FIDVS, FAVSTVS QVOQVE SECVLA VIVAT! = 1694

There is no chronogram at the conclusion.

The next set of verses brings us to the end of this remarkable volume. They concern principally Frederic III. of Brandenburg. The title, as follows, contains the only chronogram : Sapientia cum Principe cuncta componens Heroico in pectore illustrissimi . . . Domini Eberhardi De Danckelman . . . Serenissimo principi domino Frederico III. electori Marchioni Brandenburgico, etc. etc.

QVI FRIDERICE TVI AVT MANVS EST AVT VNVS VT

Vivat ! e voto obligatissimo

C. R. D. M. A. H. etc. (the author's initials as before).

The verses which follow bring the volume to the end of the last page, with room only for this line, to mark the printing at the abbey—

OLIVÆ, Typis Abbatialibus.

A CALENDAR OF 1726.

N exceedingly curious, thin folio, volume belonging to the Rev. Walter Begley, is a calendar of the year 1726, printed at Salzburg. I believe it is very rare, at least it is the only copy my friend has met with during many years of search in quarters where literary curiosities are likely to be met with, either at home or abroad. The title-page is of itself a fine example of printing in two colours. It is entirely in chronogram, the numeral letters being in red, the rest in black. I have thought it worthy of being represented by a facsimile taken from the original, which I give on the opposite page; it is, however, reduced by about one-third from the actual dimensions, and is printed all in black. It may be read in sentences, as follows, showing the date 1726 eight times repeated :—

which Michal Winepacher, priest and 'pastor Paludanus' in Passyria, has set forth besides the saints and blessed vicars of Christ at Rome, also the simply secular priests who have been numbered among the saints, and has sketched them out in chronographic verse. Printed at Salzburg by the Court printer, J. J. Mayr.

The stars * inserted at intervals in the original title-page, as will be seen in the facsimile, are used to separate the chronograms.

Then follows a dedication, in boldly printed capital letters, to the most reverend 'Præsul' (superior or abbot) Augustinus, of the Imperial-Archiducal and privileged monastery of the B. V. M., 'ad S. Joannem in Stams' . . . of the Cistercian order the most vigilant abbot (and many other titles). An address to him next follows, commencing thus, 'Gratiosa acceptatio Calendarii, in quo ante biennium, præter Festa totius ecclesiæ solenniora, meros Sanctos Ordinis Cisterciensis, in singulos anni dies versu chronographico proposui, animos mihi addidit, ut et præsens opusculum, in quo MAGNA, ET VSQVE VENERANDA PRESB[ITERII] SÆCVLARIS GLORIA patet, = tibi reverendissime, ac amplissime Domine Præsul! consecrare statuerim.' The dedication then proceeds to mention some illustrious members of the Cistercian order, such as (four popes by name), and the venerable John of Campidona (Kempten, in Bavaria?), who falling from a tower when a boy, died. Thereupon his parents vowed that if he should be restored to life they would devote him to their patron saint, St. John the Baptist of Stams. His life returned, and in due time, on the completion of his studies, he was ordained, and became the parish priest at Nesselwang. At length his parents, led by the spirit, fulfilled their vow, and he became a 'Religiosus' at Stams, and eventually died there, or, in the words of the narrative, 'ubi tandem in famâ sanctitatis migravit ad Superos:' cui præsens Distichum apponere libuit:

i.e. The divine namesake of thine caused thee to live; hence thy life itself there, and thy death also, was to become sacred.

The great Baptist gave life to thee after thy fall, to whose honour at Stams thou hast given up thy spirit.

The address to the Abbot Augustinus then continues, and concludes with these words—

'Ita vovet

Dominationis Tuæ, etc. etc.

Humillimus ac Deditissimus

HUJUS CALENDARII AUTHOR.

Then follows the 'address to the reader,' explaining further the purpose of the work, and which I transcribe in full. The Calendar next follows, occupying 37 pages and 728 chronograms. I have transcribed the month of January in full, as a fair representation of the remaining eleven months. As is usual in many almanacs, both old and modern, there is an appendix to this 'Calendarium,' treating of various kindred matters; and all that matter is composed in Latin verse chronogramatically constructed, and treated in a very amusing style. The title-page to the appendix is also in chronogram. The whole work consists of 54 folio pages, containing 889 chronograms, of which I have extracted the goodly number of 227.

Brevissima ad Lectorem Prefatio.

Novum tibi, Benevole Lector! Calendarium profero, Sanctorum Presbyterorum Sæcularium, seu Petrinorum, nominibus, ut plurimum, repletum; quos inter et Sanctos Romanos Pontifices numerare placuit: quorum licet multi ex variis Religiosorum Cœtibus fuerint electi, hoc ipso tamen PETRINI facti sunt, utpote divi PETRI legitimi successores. Plures Sanctorum Presbyterorum determinatis suis diebus posuissem, si mihi non defuissent desiderati authores; præsertim Martyrologii Gallici, et Belgii Sanctorum. Episcopos, inter Divos relatos, anno subsequenti, si Superi me servent, expecta! Et interea nonnullis

In like manner the calendar proceeds throughout the remaining eleven months, a double chronogram for each day except Sundays (with occasionally a second distich), filling thirty-seven pages, and making up 728 chronograms in the calendar alone. At the end of December is the following—

CONCLUSIO.

i.e. Ah! if this should be the last year of our failing life, may heaven grant that it may also be the beginning of the life eternal.

Then immediately follow these verses, and a German translation which for want of space I must omit—

VOTUM AUTHORIS.

Then follows an appendix, with a title-page entirely in chronogram, printed in black, of which I give on the opposite page an exact copy in modern type, as nearly as possible imitating the original in style and size. It may be read in sentences as follows, showing the date four times repeated—

APPENDIX VERÈ INSIGNIS, SEV PRACTICA MAIOR,	= 1726

EX FVNDA MENTO HANC PRÆFATVS SCRIPSERAT AVTHOR.	= 1726

This title-page is somewhat crabbed, because it consists of four hexameter verses which had to be moulded into chronograms; the author, moreover, seems to have intentionally used enigmatical or obscure allusions. The meaning seems to be—

An appendix truly worthy of note, or, A superior practical compendium, from which one sees all the events of the year; and loud sounding tempests are the more clearly marked, as the sun, too, at length has arisen; written on a sure basis by the aforesaid author.

In the original there is a versified German translation, which brings this curious calendar to its end.

The free translation (by the owner of the 'Calendar') which here follows, of a selected portion of the author's work, the 'Optima prognosis,' at page 421, ante, will give some idea of his humorous character under depressing circumstances. The appendix to the Calendar seems to have been written as a kind of parody upon certain notable predictions and prognostications, such as those which were once popular in England in the almanacs put forth by Old Moore and Zadkiel. It appears that the author, who conceals himself under the name 'Sedulus,' was a poor country curate, or coadjutor to the parish priest, and after working hard for thirty years was still without promotion, and the 'light' that was in him was 'eclipsed.' When the parish priest died he expected the post to be given to him, and what made the whole affair more miserable was the rapacious ransacking and plundering of the deceased priest's houses by their relatives, which he amusingly and yet with pathos describes, and, as we may suppose, he may have witnessed in this instance.

A very excellent Prediction about the Eclipses this year.

To Porphyrius Faustus.

Alas, Faustus, this year abounds in frequent eclipses, which darken also many priestly homes. What indeed have I suffered of these dark calamities, eight say you? (Let Sedulus, a worthy priest, proclaim his woes.) For more than thirty years was I at my Rector's beck and call, and worked with acceptance by night as well as day. And when the good old priest had departed from among the living, starting on his journey for the starry skies, then at last I thought by chance I should be named his successor, but soon the fates were dark and adverse, whereby I still remain unnoticed and under a cloud. I would not play the greedy part of the traitor Judas, the son of Simon, though I sadly wanted the thirty pieces of silver (literally, I would not keep a Judas Festival bare as I was of presents). And so was my chance overcast with gloom. I do not seek by guile to gain such riches, for, if I did, then Styx's stream would make me poor eternally. There are other special eclipses, O Faustus, to be observed by thee, which also darken my hallowed home, in a city too. The parish priest dies, his nephews rejoice, speedily there hastens to the funeral a ready willing crowd, and this often brings with it a very heavy gloom, and (so dark in fact) that no more can you see any of all those great treasures which the honest frugality of the master of the house got together; the household gods used to be present, a noble appearance, now their very shrines are empty, for the heirs forsooth (a pretty crew!) have carried off whatever inside was worth taking. A smirking little nephew might be seen gloating over the money-box where his uncle was known to treasure up his coin. Welcome, says he, ye thalers, quick, presto! change! I have a better home for you elsewhere. And now is a wrangling heard, when the niece attacks the clothes-chest. The whole crew cluster round. The well-kept linen is brought forth, and, trifling as it is, forms a goodly theme for holiday dispute to Decius (alluding to the proverb 'rixari de lanâ caprinâ,' to dispute about a trifle: see Horat. Epist. xviii. 15). Against him in give-and-take rises up Machabæus himself (a sobriquet referring to the family of Judas Maccabæus, the 'Hammer'). With uplifted fist the baleful quarrel proceeds. The library, alas! is then and there pillaged to their hearts' content. In a short time, more's the pity! what was a mansion is an empty hut. Can they be bringing oxen to take away the spoil? 'Tis even so, the hallowed home is quite enough defiled. They give the books to the children, who play with them as children are wont. And so after a while each goodly volume will be a mass of filth. A house remarkably illustrious and beautiful, or ancient, always when thus robbed, points to an Eclipse by its own example or fate.

The succeeding portions of the appendix would not be improved by translation, without our knowing what was running in the author's thoughts when he was writing the chronograms, to assist us to the interpretation of the figurative allusions to his own position; his expressions, whether serious or humorous, would appear in English as simple, obscure, and far-fetched. The last is possibly his next best, but we are at a loss to assign a meaning to its title, 'the fertility of the year,' and the crop of 'figs'; it may be explained by the enigmatical expression in the title-page to the appendix, 'the sun having at length arisen,' intimating that he had met with better luck since the writing of the calendar, while his signature to the first title-page as 'Pastor Paludanus' may be regarded as a sign that his 'eclipse' had passed off, and that he had at last gained his promotion by becoming the priest of a parish answering to that appellation.

I close my notice of this curious work with one more extract. The day of Saint John of Nepomuk, the 16th of May, is thus marked in the foregoing calendar—

i.e. In consequence of thy vow (and justly) thou wert silent as the fishes, henceforth be thou their companion in the waters.

John ! thou wast aforetime like to the dumb fishes, so must they now follow thy corpse.

This alludes to his silence as to matters confided to him under the seal of confession, and his refusal to reveal them, which led to his alleged martyrdom by drowning. The saint was very popular in Bohemia and the adjacent countries. See Chronograms, pp. 170-182.

BISHOP SPORCK'S CANCER CHRONOGRAPHICÈ INCEDENS.

THE book now to be noticed is indeed a very remarkable one. It is a quarto volume in the library of the Rev. Walter Begley, and contains 3843 chronograms, entirely filling 452 pages from the title to the colophon. It is a very rare book. Careful search and inquiry in several libraries, the British Museum, the Oxford Bodleian, the London Society of Antiquaries, the royal libraries of Brussels, Vienna, and Prague, has not brought to light any other copy. No doubt other copies do exist, but where are they? Brunet and Graesse, and other leading bibliographers, do not mention the work. One library is likely to contain a copy, that of the great Præmonstratensian Monastery of Strahow at Prague, to which the author seems to have belonged (see p. 368 of the work). One curious feature of the work is that neither the title-page, the censura, nor the colophon discloses the author's name, and it is only by a marginal note at page 373 that we learn who he was. The subject is multifarious, and all in prose. It treats in concise sentences of theology, the Virgin Mary, the saints, particularly of Saint Philip Neri, faith, Scripture, the Fathers of the Church, morals and proverbs, the illustrious dead, miscellaneous history, biographical notices, the Emperors Charles VI. and Leopold I., and other potentates and bishops, the University of Prague, divers adages, the weather, things to be avoided and hated, beauty, rural life, peace and war, man and woman, flattery, oratory, fasting, penitence, prognostics, applause of eminent persons, the author himself, fables, precious stones, anecdotes, Milan, the Clementine College at Rome, the author's farewell, and a great variety of other matters, perhaps two or three hundred more in number than are here casually mentioned; finishing with a sort of afterthought as if to fill up two or three blank pages, which the author calls 'chronographica omissa.' Everything is composed in chronogram, making one and the same date, 1754, the date of the book. In this the author has scarcely recognised the purpose of a chronogram; he merely writes in that form, but does not thereby give the date of the circumstances thereby described.

It might be supposed that after such an effort, and on accomplishing his labour, the author would have disclosed his name in the usual manner; but not so. Even the high compliment paid to him in the official 'Censura' failed to draw him out from his adopted obscurity; and further, we learn from the 'Censura' that this is the third work of the same kind by the author, a trio he might indeed have been proud of. In this one example, composed, it is believed, when he was blind (I can get no exact knowledge of the other two), we see his ability to deal with a difficult style of composition, and his great store of subjects gathered up in all directions. A marginal note at page 373 of the book (and see page 439 infra), directs attention to the author; and we learn from the chronograms there that his name was John Rudolph Sporck, of noble family; his parents were Ferdinand and Apollonia; he was born in 1695; he was suffragan bishop of Prague.

Some further particulars concerning the author are to be gathered from Dablacz, Künstler-Lexicon für Böhmen, and Zedler's Universal Lexicon. He was distinguished for skill in drawing, though he had more weighty matters to engage his attention as bishop of Adrat and suffragan to the archbishop of Prague, and as 'Hausprälat' to the Papal Court. When a young man, he already loved the arts, and still more so later in life, especially during his residence and study of theology at Rome. He made a collection of valuable paintings, and copied them in Indian ink. His enthusiasm carried him so far in this, that, as it was thought, it was the cause, as his years advanced, of total blindness. He died at Prague, on 21st January 1759, in the Benedictine Monastery of St. Nicolas, where he had lived for several years since his blindness. He had the honour to be sent to the Papal Court in 1729 by the chapter of Prague Cathedral, as advocate for the canonization of St. John Nepomuk. Seven folio volumes of his drawings are said to be preserved in the library of the monastery of Strahow at Prague.

The title-page is printed on the following page, with modern type, in imitation, so far as is attainable, of the original, and it may be read as two chronograms; thus—

On the back of the title-page is the following, which gives the important information that this is not the only work of the author—

CENSURA.

'Censura' (the official judgment thereon).

By the gracious commission of the most reverend, illustrious, and excellent Lord (of many titles) Bishop suffragan of Prague, vicar-general and official, I have read the present, the third chronographic work, the happy offspring of the same most enlightened author, which, just as the former ones, is composed with elegant taste and in laconic style, and with so much piety and wisdom that it deserves especially the notice of all persons; and therefore I do adjudge it very worthy of being put in print for public use. Given at Prague, 18 Nov. 1755. (Official signature.) Let it be printed. (Another official signature.)

The chronograms commence with 'De Deo uno et trino.'

The author proceeds to declare in chronograms the attributes of God, and at page 6 he gives this prayer to be used prior to study—

i.e. A prayer before study.—Ineffable Author! who from the treasury of wisdom hast ordained three angelic hierarchies, and hast placed them in excellent order over the heavens, and hast distributed them in all parts of the universe; | Thou! the true fountain of light, who art called the lofty source of infinite wisdom: pour down the rays of love upon the darkness of our understanding, | Taking away from us the twofold darkness in which we were born, namely, our sins and ignorances; who makest the tongues of infants to speak, | Thou who canst instruct our tongues, and canst favourably pour into our lips, and canst kindly pour upon us, the graces of thy blessing: | Make us sharp in understanding, apt to retain, skilful to interpret, easily teachable, delightful in eloquence, just, wise, and prudent: | Prepare our beginnings, direct our progress, make perfect our exits! By the 'bowels' ('tender mercies') of Jesus, who reigns for ever. Amen.

After some other prayers, and invocations to the Eucharistic sacrament and the Virgin Mary, the author proceeds to notice the saints, and devotes to them 92 pages and 828 chronograms; among them are two saints of his own nation, Saint Wenceslaus, king of Bohemia, and Saint John of Nepomuk. A hymn to the former commences with the following sentence at page 32:—GLORIOSE VVENCESLAE REX REGNI CZECHLÆ, DUX EGREGIE, PÏE, GRATIOSE, ET ZELOSE PATRIÆ NOSTRÆ! ORATIONES PRO NOBIS OFFER DEO SPIRITUI SANCTO: CHRISTE ELEISON. = 1754

i.e. O glorious Wenceslaus, king of the 'Czechs,'<sup>1</sup> most eminent, pious, gracious, and zealous leader of our country! offer up for us prayers to God the holy spirit: O Christ, supplicate for us.

The prayer to the other saint is in two sentences at page 38:—SANCTE JOANNES SECRETI SACRÆ CONFESSIOIS CUSTOS, ET BONÆ FAMÆ PATRONE! QVILIBET SACRAS TVAS RELIQUIAS ET OSSA, PRO VENERATIONE HABERE FERVENTER EXOPTAT, SPERATQVE, = 1754

i.e. O holy John, the keeper of the secrets of sacred confession, patron of good reputations! whosoever he be that desires and hopes to have in veneration thy sacred relics and bones, | raise him up, and receive the vows and gifts piously offered to thee by thy devoted followers; and procure for them by thy prayer that they may become eternally blessed, and do thou graciously protect them.

Another prayer to Saint Wenceslaus is in these words at page 40:—SANCTE VVENCESLAE MARTYR,<sup>2</sup> ET CZECHLÆ REX! GLORIOSE! NOBILIS, INFERIORIS, OPULENTI, ET PAUPERIS, PROTECTOR, ET PATRONE! IN GRATIA SERVA PATRIOTAS TVÆ, ET NOSTRÆ PATRIÆ TERRÆ. = 1754

i.e. O holy martyr Wenceslaus, king of the 'Czechs!'<sup>1</sup> gloriously noble! the protector and patron of the lowly, the rich, and the poor! keep in favour thy fellow-countrymen and ours. | Elevate us by those virtues

which thou hast assumed, obedience, humility, and patience. | From plague, famine, and war, may thy followers be graciously defended! | And after their earthly trusts, cause them to enjoy their deservings in heaven.

Having finished with the saints, the author notices other religious subjects. At page 120, 'De Doctrina fidei;' at page 132, 'De sacra scriptura;' at page 139, 'De sentiis moralibus sive proverbii;' until at page 142 we reach 'De defunctis,' and find the first mention of some one of the author's relatives—

i.e. May all dear faithful souls be in peace, | now sure heirs of the heavenly kingdom; | bestow thy bounty ! for the sake of the prayers of the pious mother of God, | and make us desolate souls free, through such powerful prayer | O Christ ! bestow largely thy grace to them, and offer it : | May they always give honour to thee, and for ever adore thee in the heavenly abode.

Anna Catharina, Countess of Sweerts and Sporck, died piously at Lissa, on the festival of the blessed Peter Celestine (19th May), and of the blessed Ivo (?). May she rest in eternal peace.

The author passes on, and at page 144 commences historical and miscellaneous subjects, devoting to them 97 pages, and 905 chronograms; and in lighter language than he has hitherto used, he thus addresses his patron—

i.e. I offer to thee, my benevolent patron, long, wide, and profound considerations, | take whatever of them you choose, and if you desire all you shall have them. | If the cord of time seems long in its course, twist and double it, and it will easily be shorter; | if indeed it be short, and you desire length, extend again that which you have twisted. | If your rooms should be too wide, it is good that you seek the angles and live in them; | but if you wish to avoid narrow hiding-places, devote yourself to navigation, and go forth in the wide breadth of the sea! | If one is unwilling to inhabit a low country, let him rather ascend the mountains, and there let him cheerfully enjoy the good air on high; | if, however, he shall have become sated with weariness through his solitary life on high, let him return again to the valley. | Your machine (pump) being placed in a deep spring, draw up through it, so that when thirsty you may drink of freshly drawn water. | On towers, by means of glasses and various sorts of tubes, places may be seen a long way off, and there also clocks and bells do sound. | In future contingencies truth can scarcely be held as determined, because the subject is still uncertain. | Too high praise is a bad investment because it is inoperative, better surely that it should not have been offered. | One man was censured by another because he chattered untruly; I confess, replied he, you are not worthy of such things as I praised you for.

The author then proceeds to relate some funny little stories, 'Serio-jocosæ narratiunculæ,' which are fairly represented by the following examples—

i.e. Often indeed even enemies are wont to be useful. | Antisthenes wished that tried experience might be attained, which [would show] what our enemies may think and say ; | because extraordinary remedies are to be got from venomous serpents ; | and thus also it is advantageous to us to seek for useful things among enemies. | A woman falsely adorned is silly, and wants ornament. | Some one, observing the attire of a young woman, said, The feathers are more precious than the bird itself. | Although a horse may be ornamented with a gilded bridle, he will be the better for it not a whit.

i.e. To be fed by fish, and to feed the fishes, are two things closely allied. | A merchant on a voyage being sick through the motion of the ship, ejected from his stomach the fish that he had eaten ; | one of the bystanders said, You are indeed grateful ; with the fish you have so frequently fed on, you in like manner nourish the fishes.

The author thus propounds many a maxim, and points them off with anecdote from classical or recent history, or an occasional amusing story ; he then changes his subject, and pronounces an eulogy on a great number of illustrious persons, commencing with Pope Clement vi., 'Gloria universitatis Pragenæ,' at

i.e. He is called Clement the Sixth, his virtue and piety are rightly signified by the title : | and because he lived laudably and gloriously, he will be worthily praised in the things he has done.

The Emperor Charles iv. comes next. The Emperor Leopold i. soon follows at

The original, not here transcribed, continues thus—Among the Lions (Leones) scarcely was one stronger than Leopold, who could by right and by law govern and reign on the throne of the empire. He shines as the sun among the planets ; so among the Leopolds of the noble Austrian lineage, Leopold glitters by his own virtue.*

*i.e. Read ye the eulogy of a medical Lion! | Do not hide the present praise of a Doctor in Law! | He is strong who knows how to cure great diseases; who knows how to avoid the infection of the plague; who knows how to prepare herbs for himself and for the sick; who knows how to preserve the healthy; to strengthen with hope the patient, and restore gratuitously. | He is equally strong who knows how to give each man his right due; who knows how to protect the widows and children, and to appropriate rewards and punishments, to take the lamb from the wild beast: | He is the Lion of the Czechs (Bohemians), two-headed in the long robe, the professor of both kinds of law, learned, knowing how professionally to bring good results. | Therefore his virtues and his skill were rewarded with the title and honour of noble knight of Erlsfeld. |
 The rich and poor in their necessity for good health experienced his great help. | By his care and assistance in the year 1714 the plague raging in the country and in the lands of our kingdom was extinguished. | He was four times the renowned chief physician of his Faculty, in which he presided as the distinguished Rector of the University of Prague. | Full of years and honours, he himself as one content with long life, freely yielded it to Libitina [the goddess of funerals] in exchange for so many lives he snatched from her sickle. | Thus he put off the name of Lion, but not indeed his strong virtues, he who had patiently given his sheep-skins to Libitina (?) | In the year 1725, on the 1st of March, being old in science and skilled in action.*

Many curious subjects must be passed over. At page 316 we find mention of the things to be on your guard against, 'cavenda'—

The author is severe on the fair sex in the matter of beauty, devoting 7 pages and 63 chronograms to the subject, 'De pulchritudine,' fairly viewed from opposite points, thus—

Instruction in great variety abounds in the next fifty pages for those who are fond of the antiquated method of teaching by maxims and proverbs. In the present day, the subject, although curious, is doubtless tedious, even in chronogram, so we pass on to page 373, where a fact, indeed almost a secret, awaits the observation of a careful reader, the name of, and a few particulars concerning the author. A careless bookbinder might have exercised his propensity for excessive cropping and shaving the edges, and so have destroyed the two words, 'De authore,' which stand as a marginal note to direct the reader's attention to the only mention of the authorship of the work. It stands thus in the outer margin of the original print—

i.e. Concerning the author of the book.—John Rudolph Sporck was born in the city of Prague, and was baptized by a 'religious' (a professed member) of the institute of the Rosary on the 27th of March | in the year 1695, | on the festival of Saint Rupert, Bishop of Salzburg, the apostle of the Noric and Bavarian nation; | Born of parents who were, Ferdinand his father, Apollonia his mother, of the lineage of Sporck. | Now the sixth<sup>1</sup> cross signifies the years gone by. From this wood of the tree<sup>2</sup> may the Eternal Father build for us strangers bridges as our road to the celestial abodes. | May God stand before Rudolph! so that he may live for the glory of God, and that eternal light may shine on his parents! | May Jesus, the son of the Eternal Father, bestow these benefits! May Mary, Joseph, John, also Rudolph, all glorious patrons, also entreat for them!

On the same page with the foregoing particulars concerning the author, the 'Fabulæ' commence. This is the first—

In the 78 pages which next follow, we find another series of adages, anecdotes, histories, and sundry remarks. At page 442 he thus alludes to the city of Milan, the shrine of St. Carlo Borromeo in the cathedral, the colossal statue of him which may be seen at the

At page 448 the author prepares to take leave of his readers, and commences by giving thanks for the position to which he has attained, in the following words—

i.e. The author's acts of thanks.—I offer thanks to thee, O holy Trinity! for this; because born of Catholic parents of noble birth, I exist, washed by baptism, by the grace of the Holy Spirit, | Because of thine infinite grace and kindness, thou hast brought me into thy flock and service, hast consecrated me to thyself by the priestly and episcopal mark, | and hast heaped on me favours and spiritual duties for honour and glory, and enrolled me among thy clergy. | Thou hast extended help to me in my infirmities, thou hast mercifully plucked me out of dangers. | For my long life, health, perseverance, symmetry, nutriment, speech, study, experience, skill in art, and wealth proportioned to my need [I offer thanks].

The author continues his devout thoughts in chronogram for another page, and declares this farewell on page 449—

AMICE, ATQVE BENEVoLE LECTOR! EX HIs CHRONOGRAPHICIS HUUUS ANNI APPROBA QVÆ POTES, CORRIGE PRO LIBITU ERRATA, ET VALE. =

1754

i.e. O, my friend and benevolent reader, out of these chronograms of this present year (1754), approve of what you can, correct errors at thy liking, and so farewell.

But he has not yet finished. He fills three more pages with 'Chronographica ommissa in præterito tomo, enarrant res rariores in bibliotheca et scriniis authoris collectas et contentas.' Thirty chronograms follow, concerning an equal variety of subjects; and at page 452 the real conclusion is in these words—

IN ISTIS IGITUR OMNIBUS CREATURIS HONORETUR, ATQVE
VENERETUR BENIGNUS NOSTER CREATOR DEUS. =

1753

i.e. Chronograms which have been left out of the foregoing pages of this volume. They interpret some uncommon things in the library, picked up and put away in the paper-boxes ('pigeon-holes') of the author. The last chronogram is—In all these created things let God, our benignant Creator, be honoured and worshipped.

Here ends the book, a very treasury of thought, fact, and events, fun and sadness, piety and precept, all put together with but a slight attempt at arrangement, forwards and backwards: subjects which the author had apparently disposed of in earlier pages taken up again in later ones, as if in imitation of the irregular progress of a crab, so prominently and quaintly expressed on the title-page, and faintly represented in the subjoined ornament.

THE ROSARY.

ANOTHER rare book in the library of the Rev. Walter Begley has an ornamentally engraved title-page, and this title in the centre, 'Jardim anagrammatico de divinas flores Lusitanas, Hespanholas, e Latinas contem seis centos e sitenta & tres Anagrammas emprosa & verso, & seis hymnos chronologicos, dividese em seis opusculos nastres linguas consagrase. Ao supremo consehoda sancta & geral inquisicã destes Reynos & Senhorios de Portugal. Autor Alonso de Alcala y Herrera natural da Inclyta cidade de Lisboa.' (Lisbon, 1654, pp. 306. 4°.)<sup>1</sup> It is the only work I have met with bearing upon the subject of chronograms, written in the Portuguese language, and the contents are, without doubt, the most intricate. Anagrams are a very prominent feature; the foregoing title says there are 683. Many of them are of unusual length, and one is composed of 233 letters. Some of the anagrams are in sets of ten sentences, each one being formed out of one and the same program and in chronogram.<sup>2</sup> The simple anagrams are mostly in the Portuguese language, the chron-anagrams are in Latin, the date is made by the usual seven Roman numeral letters; in addition to this the author uses all the small letters of some of the chronogram sentences to produce an appropriate numerical result, by means of their value according to the old Greek or Latin alphabetical method of numeration, in which

---

<sup>1</sup> I do not know of any other copy of the work than this one now mentioned. It is to be inferred that the author was a merchant at Lisbon, and that his service done to the cause of religion by the publication of the work was highly esteemed by the clergy.

<sup>2</sup> The term chron-anagram is applied to such compositions; they are not uncommon as single or double versions, but the present examples of ten made on one 'program' are probably unparalleled.

all the letters are used as numerals. Some of the chronogram sentences are composed so that the number of letters therein should have some special significance, and with this purpose before him the author has adopted the Rosary of the Virgin Mary as his theme throughout the work. The words 'rose' and 'rosary' constantly occur, and the number of beads of which it is composed (he says 165) is used to regulate the number of letters or lines, either as an integral or in sub-divisions of 10 or 5. For instance, hymns contain 165 letters and 10 lines; the 'mysteries' are arranged in series of 5 each with three more, to the number of 63, corresponding to the age of the Virgin Mary; the number 5 also represents the number of letters in the names JESUS, MARIA, JOSEP (not counting the final letter H). It seems that the author wrote or commenced his work in the 'happy' year 1651; the 165 beads of the rosary are a tenth part of that number. The 620 simple anagrams (not properly belonging to my subject) are combined with many intricate allusions to the rosary, to the saints and to the martyrs. Taken as a whole, the book presents a marvellous example of patience and ingenuity, while every page contains expressions of the devotional feeling of the author towards the received beliefs of the Roman Catholic Church.

As regards the chronograms they do not compare well with good standard compositions; they are too diffuse, they contain too many words having no numeral letter, they do not mark the date of any event other than the period when the author composed his work. I do not mention these defects to disparage the chronograms, because the author explains the singular use he makes of the apparently idle words, and that he always employs five out of the seven numeral letters to illustrate the more frequently his mystical number 5, while it is obvious that by rarely using the remaining two numeral letters D and M, he avoids bringing his chronogram to an early conclusion when he requires a verbose sentence.

Some of the tailpieces and ornaments in the original print are rough woodcuts representing flowers and roses, further illustrating the leading idea of the rosary. With this partial description of the work I proceed to extract such portions as are appropriate to my particular subject of chronograms. The explanations printed in italics on the next and following pages are derived from the Latin original of the author.

THE work is divided into several parts or sections; passing over those which are unchronogrammatic, the 4th part, 'Quarto Opusculo,' is reached at page 183; it bears this title,—'Hymnodia chronologica Jesu, Mariæ, et Joseph Trinitati Orbis dicata. Pariter, et chronologica trium et sexaginta Anagrammatum Corona ipsimet Hymnodia literis contexta Deiparæ Rosarii Virgini Cælorum Reginae consecrata.'

The first chronogram is at p. 193, under this title—

Hymnodia chronologica.

Instar Sylvæ Oratio, seu Hymnus ad Deiparam Sacratissimi Rosarii.

In this first hymn the crown of Christ is woven in 10 verses, and 165 letters (which last number is one-tenth part of the then present year, the date of the work 1651) and agrees with the number of beads in the Rosary of the Virgin Mary.

The 32 Roman numerals make the year 1651.

Alius ad Deiparam hymnus, ipsis consonantibus et cadentiis contextus.

This second hymn consists of 10 verses and 172 letters. The rosary of the Virgin is represented (as in the foregoing hymn) by 165, the remaining 7 represent the seven sad and joyful mysteries of Saint Joseph.

The 32 Roman numerals make the year 1651.

Alius ad ipsam Virginem.

This third hymn consists of 8 verses and 114 letters, which are thus distributed—

33 The age of Jesus Christ;
63 The age of the Virgin Mary;
15 In honour of the mysteries of the rosary;
3 In reverence to the three persons, Jesus, Mary, and Joseph.

The 29 Roman numerals make the year 1651.

Alius hymnus ad Deiparam ipsam.

This fourth hymn consists of 7 verses, 10 and 9 times that number of letters = 133, of which—

15 In the first verse are in reverence to the mysteries of the rosary;

55 In observance of the third part of the same rosary;

63 The age of the Virgin Mary.

133 The 32 numeral letters make the year 1651.

---	---	--------

Alius ad ipsam Dominam ipsam consonantibus, seu cadentiis ornatus.

This fifth hymn consists of 7 verses and 20 times that number of letters = 140, which are thus appropriated—

55 To the third part of the rosary of the Virgin Mary;

63 To her age;

15 To thrice the mysteries of the rosary;

7 In reverence to the mysteries of Joseph and at the same time to the years of the exile of him and the holy family in Egypt.

140 The 27 numeral letters make the year 1651.

AVE AVE VIRGO PIA, GLORIÆ FONS, HONOR ET VIA. AVE SPONSA, ET FILIA PATRIS, SOROR NOSTRA, ET PARENS FRATRIS AVE ROSARII REGINA, GRATIA ABSTERGE NOS DEI TRINA FOVE PIETATE MATRIS.	}	= 1651
---	---	--------

Alius hymnus ad D. Joseph, sponsum virginis Mariæ.

This sixth hymn, consisting of 12 lines and 180 letters, is happily enriched and dedicated to the Virgin, Jesus, and Joseph; of these letters—

15 In the first line are in reverence to the rosary of the mysteries of the Virgin, and

165 In the remaining 11 lines are to her, as well as to the rosary of Jesus, herself, and her husband.

180 In the first 2 lines there are 33 letters, the age of Christ himself. In the 5th, 9th, 11th, and 12th lines (as in the 1st) there are 15 letters (leaving out the letter H), each line pointing to the 15 mysteries of the rosary. The 42 numeral letters make the year 1651.

SALVE VIR, ET PATER CVIVS VIRGA, ET FLATVS VIRGINIS CONSORTIO FOVET HONORATVS. IOSEPH IESV GREGIS PASTOR ES NOTATVS HONOR, ET SPONSÆ, ÆTERNÒ PARATVS. QVI À PATRIS FILIO PATER ES VOCATVS, FAC VT DONA PATRIS DONET NOBIS NATVS.	}	= 1651
---	---	--------

The idea of the rosary is followed in the arrangement of the fifth part of the work 'Quinto opusculo,' which commences at page 199, and bears this title—

'Chronologica trium et sexaginta anagrammatum Corona Deiparæ rosarii Virginis, pro numero annorum beatificæ, ac gloriosæ ætatis suæ, ipsiusmet hymnorum literis concinnata.'

(There are six hymns composed in chronogram, each in turn is taken as the 'program' of ten chron-anagrams, making the number sixty; then the first hymn is repeated, from which are composed three more chron-anagrams, making in all sixty-three, the age of the Virgin Mary, and all producing the year 1651. The number of the five mysteries of the joys, griefs, and glories, is interwoven in the arrangement, and acrostic initial letters are used, introducing the names Jesus, Maria, Joseph.)

Hymnus primus.

In order to make up the number 63 (as mentioned at p. 443, ante), there are three more chron-anagrams, each one containing 5 of the Mysteries of the Rosary. Observe the acrostic in the marginal explanations of them. The 'program' of these anagrams is the 'Hymnus primus' at page 446, ante. The number of letters employed in each is 165, and the numeral letters in each make 1651. With these remarks I now transcribe the chron-anagrams as they appear in the original.

Gloria Patri, etc.

To describe the remaining fifty pages of the book would lead the chronogram-hunter far beyond the limits of his pursuit, and impose upon him a difficult task. The words of some of the foregoing hymns, the words of the Gloria Patri, etc., and the words of the before-mentioned Triad, are all made to give the date 1651 and other intricate and significant numbers, by means of the small letters used after the manner usually called a 'Cabbala,' founded on the old Latin and Greek alphabetic mode of numeration. The book is all the more remarkable as being the work of a man engaged in mercantile business, and not in any way an ecclesiastic or a member of any religious order.

I regret that I am unable to refer the reader to a copy of this remarkable work in any public library in England or elsewhere; an inspection of the original would be a treat to the bibliophile, and lead to a better appreciation of the contents.

SAINT CARLO BORROMEO.

RARE tract, printed at Bruges in 1684, gives in prose and poetry, and upwards of one hundred and fifty chronograms, an epitome of the career of Saint Carlo Borromeo. The only copy of the work which I know of is in the library of the Rev. Walter Begley. It was composed on the completion of the period of one hundred years after the death of the saint. From a different source I give some particulars concerning him. He was the son of Gilberto Borromeo, Count of Arona, and of Margherita de Medici, sister to Pope Pius IV. He was born in October 1538. He studied at Pavia, and took his doctor's degree at twenty-two years of age. Shortly after, his uncle, Pius IV., made him a Cardinal and Archbishop of Milan. Borromeo established an academy in the Vatican for the promotion of learning, and he published its conferences under the name of Noctes Vaticanæ. He urged the Pope to hasten the termination of the Council of Trent; and, upon its conclusion in 1563, he drew up an exposition of the doctrine of the Roman Catholic Church as sanctioned by that Council, known as the 'Catechismus Tridentinus.' After the death of Pius IV. in 1565, Cardinal Borromeo went to his diocese. He enforced a reform in the clergy, especially among the monastic orders. He visited every part of his diocese, reforming abuses, examining the conduct of his clergy, and providing for the wants of the poor. He established colleges and schools, and asylums for destitute children. When the plague broke out at Milan in 1576, he exerted himself, at the risk of his life, in assisting the sick, and relieving the wants of the population in that calamitous time. In some particulars, Cardinal Borromeo shared the errors and prejudices of his age, for we find that he believed in the existence of sorcery. His conduct, however, was exemplary; and his zeal for the flock committed to his care was unremitting. He died on the 4th November 1584, worn out by austerities and pious labours, in the forty-seventh year of his age. He was canonized by Pope Paul v. in 1610.

The title of the tract is, 'MARIA PARADOXA vita Sancti Caroli Borromæi, eminentissimi sacræ Romanæ ecclesiæ Cardinalis, nec non Mediolanensis Archiepiscopi pro solemnî Jubilæo Anni centesimi, illius ab obitu tam Anagraphicè quam Chronographicè discussa.

There is also a fine portrait of the Saint at his devotions. The 87th chronogram alludes to him as thus represented.

A poem next follows in about 260 hexameter and pentameter verses, the theme of which is thus given—

CAROLVS BORROMAEVS
Anagramma.
SVM ROBVR, ROS, AC OLEA.

<sup>1</sup> This chronogram is thus in the original; it makes only 1674, but was probably intended to make 1684. The sentence seems to be complete as it stands notwithstanding the defect.

<sup>2</sup> There is no chronogram numbered 131 in the original; the numeration seems to have got out of order after 94, where the next line is not numbered.

These words, which are the anagram of his name, occur frequently throughout the poem, also in the chronicon with which it concludes—

Chronicon.

VERÈ EGREGIVS DIXISTI, SVM ROBVR, ROS AC OLEÆ. = 1684

A shorter poem next follows called 'Paraphrasis,' in which the anagram words are frequently used, and concluding with—

Chronicon.

Ô! DEVS TRINVS, ET VNVS, IN BORROMÆO FVISTI!
ROBVR ROS AC OLEA. = 1684

Another poem next follows in about 290 hexameter and pentameter verses, the theme of which is thus given—

CAROLVS BORROMÆVS.

Anagramma.

OLES, AC ROSA RVBORVM.

These words, which are also the anagram of his name, occur frequently throughout the poem, which concludes with—

Chronicon.

OLES VITÂ TVÂ, AC ROSA RVBORVM, SATIS DIXI. = 1684

The tract terminates at the same page, 52, with a poem of sixteen lines, a 'Congratulation' of Carmel (the author's monastery at Brussels), in praise of the Borromeo family. The opening lines are as follows—

Carmeli Congratulatio in Laudem Inclytæ Borromææ Familiæ.

Gaude Borromæa domus, poscentibus astris
Orbe micas, fama est non moritura tua.
Æternum Caroli jam supplex nomen adora;
Te dedit æterno, nomine posse frui, etc.

At pp. 439, 440, ante, there are some other chronograms concerning this Saint.

THE WORKS OF JOHANNES PRÆTORIUS.

HIS author describes himself as belonging to Zetlingen, and as 'Master of Philosophy' at the University of Leipzig, and imperial poet laureate. It is not such an easy matter to describe his works. He wrote largely on mystical subjects, judging by the list of his works, and those of them to which I have had access. He was attached to the Lutheran form of religion. The mystic number 666, and the year 1666, seem to have furnished him with matter for much controversy; perhaps he had his own beliefs, and he certainly had his doubts, about what those numbers portended to Germany. At the period of his writing people's minds had been much disturbed by prognostications and expectations, the Thirty Years' War had only recently been concluded, and the religious dissensions connected with it could not yet have subsided; another war was impending to expel the Turks from Hungary and Eastern Europe; predictions were afloat that the Papacy was to fall, that the German empire would dissolve, and that the final interpretation of the number 666, in Revelation xiii. 18, would be manifested. Controversies on these matters, as well as on omens, divination, palmistry, and magic, engaged the attention and occupied the pen of Prætorius; and besides all this he made a great many chronograms.

A list of his works is given in Zedler's Universal Lexicon, xxix. 147. Many of them, and some others not there included, are in the British Museum Library. All of them are more or less curious, and some have afforded a good harvest of chronograms, as will be seen by the following extracts, and in some instances the chronogram gives the title as well as the date at which the work was printed.

A VOLUME (British Museum, press-mark 8630. c.), 8°, bears this title—

'ANTHROPODEMVS PLVTONICVS = 1666
das ist,

ein neue Welt-beschreibung von aller ley wunderbahren Menschen,' etc. Autore, Joanne Prætorio. Magdeburg, 1668.—The title-page contains a list of the subjects in 22 chapters, each commencing with one of the letters of the alphabet in regular succession. There is a second part with a similar arrangement of title-page; the two parts comprise about 1350 pages. The author's language is German, the printing is very indifferent, and the pages are much discoloured. The chronograms may be said to occur in patches; they are by no means evenly distributed over the pages.

At page 162. DE VITVLO SACSONVM.<sup>1</sup> = 1666

VITVLVS CONDEMNANS, Anagram OS CALVINVM TVNDENS = { 1666
1666

At page 413 the title and purpose of a book published by the author in 1656, on the qualities of herbs and plants, is given in these chronograms—

DOMVS CHLORIS. (i.e. The house of the goddess of flowers.) = 1656

FLORIANVS DEMOCOON. = 1656

BLVMENTRACHEIGE ERDE. = 1656

NOMENCLATOR HERBIDVS. = 1656

CAMPVS FLORIDANS. = 1656

POLYANTHEA MEDICA (read Y as V=5). = 1656

HERBARIVM DELECTANS. = 1656

The title of another book by him on the same subject, published at Leipzig in 1657, is thus given—

FLORÆ ANNIDICVM = 1657

DIANÆ ETEOLOGICVM avθos. = 1657

CHELIDONIVM. = 1657

D. LEONHARDVS BAHN, BOTANICES EDITOR. = 1657

ME SIBI CONSTITVIT JANVS PRÆTORIVS AVCTOR, } = 1657

VALLIBVS EX ROSEIS LIPSIAICISQVE LOCIS.

At page 425 the author gives the year 1666 in chronogram in the words taken from the Latin version of the Bible, and his purpose in so doing is in some degree explained in his adjoining pages. The adaptation of the words is at least curious—

In the preface of the second part (or volume), printed at Magdeburg in 1677, the following verses occur—
ITZT TRETEN VVIER INS NEVVE IAHR,	}	= 1666
HER IESV CHRISTE, VNS BEVVAHR,
GIEB GNAD, DASS VVIER DISS GANTZE IAHR
ZVBRINGEN KÖNNEN OHN GEFAHR!
And on the next page, GLVCK ZV DEM NEVEN IAHR.	=	1666
At page 119 the following sentences are given as having been recognized as prognostics of coming events in the political affairs of Europe, the seven initial letters also give the date—
MONARCHIA DELVXATA.	=	1666
DISCVRSVS POLONORVM.	=	1666
CVLPA IVDÆORVM.	=	1666

And these occur at page 120—
MVNDI LVCTV, alias CLAVSVRA MVNDI.	=	{ 1666 1666

they express the eventful year 1666; the first line of the following couplet gives the same date—

MAGNA DET ACTA LABORE TEXTO REPREHENSVS IN ANNO, = 1666

Non ego eo terræ fata parata reor.

The author mentions that the mystical number 666 (in Rev. xiii. 18) by dropping the letter M=1000, is contained in the following word implying false-speaking—

MENDACILOQVAX. = 1666

And at page 129 these words come in strange contrast when used for the same date—

ANNO SALVATORIS DOMINI IESV CHRISTI. = 1666

In this part of the book the author devotes many pages to the discussion of the coincidence of this year 1666 with the mystical number 666, and this further chronogram, among others, may be noticed in illustration—

At page 136. DOCTOR MARTINVS LVTHERVVS. = 1666

And at page 141 he adduces the following list of wars, in which various potentates were engaged in that same year; the initial letters of each line when read consecutively make the year MDCLXVI., or 1666—Moguntinus archiepiscopus et Lotharingæ dux cum Palatino Rheni.

The Archbishop of Mayence and the Duke of Lorraine with the Count Palatine.

Dux Lubomirski cum rege Poloniae. The King of Poland.

Cham Tartarorum cum Turcis. The Turk and the Tartar.

Lusitaniæ rex cum Hispaniæ rege. The Portuguese and the Spaniards.

Veneti cum Turcis. Venice and the Turks.

Inferior Germania cum episcopo Monasterii. Lower Germany and the Bishop of Münster.

These words, adapted from 1 Kings ii. 45, REX SALOMON BENEDICTVS=1666, are quoted at page 149, as applicable to some real or predicted events of the period. I have seen this chronogram quoted elsewhere, but without any explanation. For the sake of preserving something that has been said about it, I will quote the purport of the author's remarks. He had been alluding to the falling away of monarchies, and he proceeds to say, 'With regard to the monarchiæ deluxatio we may exclude as neutral all relics which can only express our ignorance, as no further information can be received about them. We may, however, cite one (the above chronogram). This may be said in the present century to signify the idea of the old monarchies which have fallen down before our time, and which have been described by me in my annual chronicle, under the title of the downfall of Germany, where three suns have fallen under the yoke of the Turks. On this subject the Rabbis are ignorant, although there are quacks in England who find in this the evidence of the coming Messiah.'

At a later page of the volume the author is still engaged on presages and prognostics of events to take place in 1666, and at page 238 he introduces this Virgilian cento<sup>1</sup>—

Anno, in quo suas DEBILITANT VIRES LVNATIS AGMINA PELTIS. = 1666

And at page 269 he quotes the following chronograms from a work entitled 'Examen vaticinii cujusdam Anglicani de ultimo Romæ excidio anno 1666.' Cap. ix. 15—

KAROLVS DER FVNFFTE, TEVTSCHER KEISER.	=	666
KAROLVS VON GENDT, TEVTSCHER KEISER.	=	666
CAROLVS V. INDVPERATOR.	=	666
CAROLVS V. GANDAVENSIS.	=	666
καρόλιος Ε. γαινδαένσιος καισαρ.	=	666

The work so quoted is by Gottlieb Spitzel, or, as he Latinised his name, Theophilus Spizelius.<sup>2</sup> There is a copy of it in the British Museum, 11403. f., published at Augsburg, 1665. 4°. It is a stricture (in Latin) on a work by an anonymous English writer, who interpreted the mystical number 666 to mean the fall of the papacy in 1666. In giving the above chronograms, Spitzel prefaces them with some remarks to this effect,—'The name therefore of the "Beast" is not the name proper of the Antichrist, but of the empire or state of which Antichrist is the head. If you ask why it is called the Number of the name, it may be answered, because the letters of which the name is composed include that number. There are many words in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, which in like manner express the same number; this shows how uncertain is the application of it, and how absurd it is to say that John, in the Apocalypse, should be interpreted by somebody writing in Belgium in 1662, to mean the Emperor Charles v.; that writer doubted not that the emperor was prefigured, but he talked nonsense in saying that when you turn the letters of his name into vernacular numbers, whether in Latin or in Greek (the language in which John wrote this prophecy), the words sexcenta et sexaginta sex, will be the result.' Spitzel then gives the chronograms above quoted, exclaiming, 'Nugæ nugarum!' He also says that the title of the work by the 'anonymous calculator' was portentous and conspicuous, 'Romæ ruina finalis anno MDCLXVI, mundique finis sub XLV post annum.'

At page 357 the following quotations from the New Testament occur; they are introduced by the author apparently to show another variety of omen to be found in words containing the date of the supposed eventful year—

<sup>1</sup> The lines in Virgil from which this cento is composed are—

Æn. ix. 611. Debilitat vires animi, mutatque vigorem.

An. i. 490. Ducit Amazonidum lunatis agmina peltis.

In this instance Prætorius would suggest that the crescent-shaped shields indicated the nation which had the crescent for its banner, the Turks.

The subject now to be noticed is called by the author his New Almanack of the wonderful year 1666. It is difficult, and indeed needless, to follow the author through the pages of a long fanciful chapter about square men, by which he means frank and open-hearted men, or to explain in what way he is moved to write in sarcastic terms about Dutchmen and Dutch authors, who manifest some opposite qualities. Prætorius is very bitter towards them in matters of religion and politics, and for some of their interpretations of the mystic number 666 and the year 1666. It is only necessary to allude to his fierce invective against them, in order to throw some light on what he calls his 'almanack' of 1666 and its chronograms. He alludes to a Dutch writer who asserts that there are exactly 1666 years between the Creation of the world and the Deluge, according to the accepted system of chronology, and who sets up an argument in support of certain deductions therefrom, while the real difference is only 1656 years. Here, says he, we see a deplorable error, which must demolish this pitiful (quarf) argument. After exposing some other contradictory interpretations of the number and date, the author proceeds to close these and such like speculations, by showing how words containing the date 1666 may be used to the discomfiture and disadvantage of the Dutch writers themselves.

Then follows at page 399 a sort of calendar, at least an arrangement of chronograms under each of the twelve months, in which Hollanders, Papists, Jesuits, Calvinists, heretics, and others, are denounced and threatened<sup>1</sup>—

At page 522 the following occur together, with explanations—and the author proceeds to remark, 'Certè definire non possumus. Eventui committemus.' He afterwards proceeds to quote Psalm xlix. 15 (Vulgate Version)—

Then follow these three Virgilian centos, put into chronogram—

At pages 555-557 there is a Cabala with an anagram on the words thereof, and two more Virgilian centos ; all are obscure without the explanations, which are too long for transcript here. There are no more chronograms.

A BOOK (British Museum, press-mark, 1141. c. 16), 'LUDICRUM CHIROMANTICUM PRÆTORII; seu THESAURUS CHIROMANTIÆ, completissimus: multis jocis et amœnitatibus, pluribus tamen seriis instructissimus, etc.,' by Johannes Prætorius. Printed at Jena, anno 1661. This quarto volume contains more than a thousand pages of dissertations on chiromancy or palmistry, and divination from the lines and marks on a person's hands and countenance. Many chronograms are to be gathered out of this otherwise very unprofitable book. The first word on the title-page is a chronogram of the date, which is put in figures at the foot thereof, viz.—

LVDICRVM. = 1661

Some explanation of this is given at page 9 of the preface.

The author sets forth in his preface the contents of the book by giving sub-divisions of the work arranged under the names of various practitioners of the art of palmistry, and the pages at which they so appear; he then expresses, as follows, in chronogram, both the names of such practitioners and the date when he 'patched them together' ('annum, quo tractaculum meum consarcinavi')—

DELIVS CHIROLOGIAE POMPEII. Page 1. = 1660

 INDVSTRIA PALMISOPHICA PRÆTORII. Page 430. = 1660

The author then explains how he compiled and produced his work, and that he wrote much of it in a previous manual in 1658, arranging his subject under heads, and using many special terms of his art, composing them in chronogram of that year, as follows—

The author then proceeds with his preface, which comes to a conclusion at page 36, where some verses occur in company with anagrammatic chronograms on the death of John Hulseman, probably a worthy practitioner of the art of chiromancy—

Ἀριθμομεταγραμματικομαντεία.

DOCTOR JOANNES HVLSEMANVS, = 1661
per anagramma

HOC DE ANNO VENIT MORS, SALVS. = 1661

Quod vidi ante annos aliquot, dixique Jocatus :

HOC DE ANNO Hulsmanno MORS VENIT atque SALVS = 1661

En ! volvenda dies Hulsmanno hoc attulit ultrò ;

ANNO DE HOC quo MORS VENIT ei atque SALVS. = 1661

At the head of different sub-divisions of the work the author repeats the chronograms already given at the outset of this extract, and then at page 432 this mention of himself occurs—

'Sectio secunda, Historica, in qua traduntur pauca, sed tamen

MANIFESTIORA JVDICIOLA = 1660

PRÆDELINEANTIS MANV-INSPICINÆ.' = 1660

He tells us that besides the date 1660 contained in these four words, the initial letters of them are those of the author's name—

'Magister Johannes Prætorius, Marchiacus.'

At page 437 is one of the numerous woodcuts representing the lines on a pair of hands, with this chronogram (and some verses) thereon—

ERKLÄRVNG AVS DES SELBST GEHÄNGTEN SOLDATENS HÄNDE. = 1660

i.e. An enlightening of the real hand of a soldier ; or, An explanation of the significant lines on a soldier's hand.

A few of the sub-divisions which follow are introduced by these chronogram titles—

At page 474. PALMISOPHIÆ JVDICIA. = 1660

At page 475. PALMISCOPIÆ INDVBITATIO. = 1660

At page 522. PALMISOPHIÆ VINDICIÆ. = 1660

At page 801. PALM-INDICII VRANIA. = 1660

At page 821 the name NICOLAUS SMID is mentioned, and therein the author finds by anagram the unpleasant appellation IS LAICUS DEMON, and the name NICOLAVS SMID is made into the chrono- = 1657 gram of a date to which the author attaches some meaning of ill omen.

A second work by the same author follows after page 856, having this title (which gives the date thereof)—

CENTIFRONS IDOLVM JANI = 1659

Hoc est

Metoposcopia seu Prosopomantia

cum centum et pluribus Iconibus seu

Capitibus illustrata ; memorabili et memoriali methodo

(By Johannes Prætorius. Printed at Arnstadt, 1661.)

These chronograms occur at—

p. 859. DÆMONOLOGVS FRONTISPICIUM. = 1659

p. 863. METOPOLOGICÆ DIVISIO. = 1659

I find no more chronograms. The whole work is illustrated with a great many woodcuts to represent the lines on the hands and face, which, as it was believed, enabled the learned practitioners of the art to read the fortunes and character of any person; a curious engraved frontispiece precedes the title-page.

At page 545 is the Greek palindrome sentence which I have noticed in Chronograms, p. 414. It is found inscribed on the baptismal font in a few of the old English churches; there is one at Bridekirk in Cumberland, Threckingham in Lincolnshire, St. Mary's, Beverley, St. Mary's, Stafford, Harlow in Essex, and at Caddington in Bedfordshire; this last was probably incised in 1827. I now transcribe the passage from Prætorius—

'Concludo cum monito cancrino, quod Venetiis Atheno lustrali inscriptum legitur'

ΝΙΨΟΝ ΑΝΟΜΗΜΑΤΑ ΜΗ ΜΟΝΑΝ ΟΨΙΝ.

i.e. Wash away my transgressions and not only my face.

ANOTHER work by Johannes Prætorius on chiromancy, palmistry, etc.—

Collegium Curiosum, etc., printed at Leipzig in 1704, British Museum, press-mark 8630, aaa, does not contain any chronograms.

A VOLUME of 'tracts on comets' (British Museum, press-mark 532. e. 22.), contains a tract, No. 6, with this chronogrammatic title—

BELLEROPHON VVLNERANDORVM : = 1665

Das ist der neulichste und ungeheure

Wunder-Comet, etc.

(in the year 1665.)

Autore Johanne Prætorio, Zetlingâ. Leipzig, 1665.

At page 1 the author refers to Virgil, Georgic i., where fearful celestial and terrestrial omens are mentioned, and where, at line 474, may be read that 'Germany heard a clashing of arms all over the sky;' and at line 488, that 'never did more lightnings fall from a serene sky, or direful comets so often blaze.' Virgil's words are—

. . . nec diri toties arsere cometæ, and thereupon the author composes this chronogram —

NON ALIÀS TOTIÈS DIRI VIGVÈRE COMETÆ. = 1665

At page 5 the comet is again treated as an omen in the affairs of Germany, and the event is thus emphasized—

DEVs PROFVGNACVLVM nostræ terræ. = 1670

The reason for this date is not clear.

At page 17 is this chronogram—

LV<sup>T</sup>HERANORVM CV<sup>S</sup>TO<sup>D</sup>ES. = 1665

At page 84 the author remarks, 'vide ex parte D. Nicolai de Regno Christi, und ex toto meinen VVV<sup>N</sup>DERFORMLICHEN = 1666 allmanach,' etc.

I only extract the chronograms; inquiring readers can find much unprofitable but curious explanation throughout the volume referred to above.

A BOOK (British Museum, press-mark 719. g. 34), 4°, entitled, 'ALECTRYOMANTIA, seu Divinatio magica cum gallis gallinaceis peracta, etc.,' by Johannes Prætorius. Francofurti et Lipsiæ, 1680. 4°. A treatise on magic and divination by means of cocks and hens (poultry birds). I find therein two chronograms. Chapter xii., 'De viribus imaginationum,' page 129, contains a passage alluding to things which persons of strong imagination believe they have seen and done; there are also some Latin verses about the various forms which some one believed he assumed by force of his imagination, concluding with this couplet—

TER NONÂ VERTIT NATVRAM VESPERA IVNII, } = 1596
AVREVS ET PRÆTER DENS FLVIT ORE VIROS.

The meaning of this date does not appear.

A chapter, 'De sagacitate,' at page 140, contains this chronogram of the year 1677—

DEFVNCTIS PATRIBVS BOREALIS HABEBIT HABENAS, } = 1677
QVAS TAMEN ERIPLET POSTEA BRENNO TVIS.

The explanation given is both prolix and obscure.

ANOTHER work by Johannes Prætorius in the British Museum (press-mark 8610. b.), 4°. The title is, 'De Coscinomantia,' etc. (Printed) Curix Variscorum. 1677. The subject is divination by means of a sieve. It contains no chronograms.

A BOOK in my possession (there is also a copy in the British Museum, press-mark 8630. c. 8°.) bears this title—

Satyrus Etymologicus,
Oder der
Reformirende und Informirende

RÜBEN-ZAHL:

ICH MUSS SO EIN GÜTER MANN SEYN ALS DV SEYN MÛST = 1667

The book was probably printed at Leipzig. It is a fanciful one, a satire about 'Rübenzahl,' a goblin having that appellation, a 'turnip-goblin' (?); it must be read carefully to be understood, if that be possible. Something at least may be learnt about the witches of Silesia, the derivation of some names, occult matters, and much else that is foreign to the subject which I have in hand, viz., chronograms.

The author has much to say in his earlier pages about Leipzig and his own university there. In the Thirty Years' War a battle was fought near that city, at Breitenfeld, a fortified camp held by Tilly and the imperial forces, when they were defeated by Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden on 7th September 1631; the event is thus noted at page 65—

ALTERA POST NONAS SEPTEMBRIS, ET AVSPICE SVECO
CONSPEXIT VICTOS LIPSIÆ CÆSAREOS. } = 1631

On the 5th April 1632 the battle of Lech was fought, in which Tilly, commanding the Bavarian forces, was wounded, and died on the 30th April of that year. This chronogram was intended to mark the date; there is, however, an error, it makes 1636—

HOSTIBVS IN BOIOS PERIT, ACER TILLIVS ARMIS,
AC TOTIES VICTOR, VICTVS AB HOSTE IACET. }

The author praises the efficiency of the fire-brigade at Leipzig, and at page 80 indicates by these chronograms two occasions when fires were kept under through its services—

VVLKANVS QVINTO FEBRVARI EXTREMA TVLISSET
NI ACCELERASSET AQVAS LIPSICA GNAVA THETIS. } = 1657

VVLKANVS QVINCTA BIS SEXTA LVCENO NOVEMBRIS
IN CINERES VERTIS LIPSIAE AB VRBE LARES. } = 1658

At page 90 the death of John George, Duke of Saxony, is marked by these chronograms of the dates 4th and 5th February 1657—

LETHIFER EST QVARTVS FEBRVARI AST QVINTVS IN IPSO
MENSA DIES VT REX, LETHIFER AVTOR OVAT. } = 1657

Namque,

PERSOLVIT QVARTO FEBRVARI LIPSIA MVLTO
PLANCTV CÆLICOLÆ SAXONIS EXEQVIAS. } = 1657

Sed,

EXCEPIT QVINCTO FEBRVARI LIPSIA CLARIS
SIGNIS RECTVRI SAXONIS AVSPICIVM. } = 1657

The death of Joachimus Camerarius, Professor of Greek at Leipzig, is thus marked—

ATTICA VOX ERAT, ET GRÆCO CAMERARIVS VSV
EXCELLENS, ARTES AVXIT, OBITQVE SENEX. } = 1574

Some chronograms relating to John Hulseman, at pages 93-98, are confused and probably inaccurate, but they are unimportant. At page 220 commences some fanciful printing; the words are arranged in lines of varying length, so that the ends fall within a boundary arranged to resemble certain objects, such as an obelisk, a tower, a basket, a tree, a jug, a pair of scales, a heart, etc.; the words so put in short or long lines thus form an imaginary outline of the objects. This is followed by the description of a garden, containing certain allegorical and mythological structures and statues, with chronograms in German. A full transcript of the latter would be uninteresting without long extracts of description and comment. The two following are specimens of the twenty given by the author. This was over the entrance gate of the garden in golden letters—

VVIE NACH ERIS DIE IRENE	}	= 1649
EVER TEVTSCHES-REICHES SÖHNE
IN OELZVVEIGEN HAT VERSÖHNT
IST VON CHLORIS DIESS BESCHÖNT.

And this was on a statue—

FAVNVS HAT DIES HERGEBAVET,	}	= 1649
VVIE IRENE HAT BESCHAVET,
VND GEZIERET VNSRE GRÄNTZ,
VND GEGEBEN SIEGES KRÄNTZ.

At page 281, among some miscellaneous notes, this occurs—
‘Anno 1618, factum est, quæ prima malorum

CAVSA EST, ATQVE DVCES BELLIS ACCENDIT AMARIS.’ = 2518

This is an example of the author's carelessness; the chronogram corresponds not with the date he gives in figures.

‘Pilsen (the town) anno 1619 occupata, VRBS TRISTIS CADIT
INNVMEROS SERVATA PER ANNOS.’ = 1619

Imitated<sup>1</sup> from Virgil, Aeneid, ii. 363. There are three more similar chronogram notes on the next page. The German chronograms above adverted to apply principally to the subject of peace, and they give dates of the period just after the termination of the ‘Thirty Years’ War. The history of Rübzahl (sic) begins at page 375, and continues to the end.

At first sight this volume is encouraging to the chronogram-hunter; the title excites curiosity, and one is led to expect that witchcraft will have its share of chronogrammatic attention. Such, however, is not the case. The pages devoted to ‘Rübzahl’ and the Blocksberg goblins and witches are barren ground; at page 552 there is ‘Appendix de Ludis Lamiarum in Monte Brucetorum, quem Blocks-Berg vocant.’ i.e. The sports of the witches of Blocks-berg. According to the statements there made, it seems that they are a dangerous sort of people to fall in or fall out with. There is a frontispiece to the volume which quite confirms this supposition. Page 552 terminates this curious book.

ANOTHER book by Johannes Prætorius, in which the name of 'Rübenzahl' is prominent ('The Demonology of the Silesian Rübenzahl'), is in the British Museum (press-mark 1080. b. 37.). 12°. The title-page is partly in chronogram, and commences thus—

'DÆMONOLOGIA RVBINZALII SILESII, = 1662

Das ist

Ein ausführlicher Bericht,' etc.

Printed at Arnstadt. 1672.

The only chronograms are in the preface, as in this sentence, where the author declares himself to be the master of the art, 'Ich wil meinen Bund mit dir aussrichten, datz DV ERVAHREN soLT, DOSZ ICH DER HERR SEI.' = 1662

He makes the number of the Beast, 666, out of the name, by the usual 'caballa' notation, and by adopting a slight difference in the spelling—

R I E B E N D Z A L } = 666
80 9 5 2 5 40 4 500 1 20

The key to the notation will be found at p. 446 of Chronograms.

The preface concludes thus—'Datum Lipsiæ in Paullino, die 1 Jan. LIBERATORIS, DOMINI JESV CHRISTI.' = 1662

ANOTHER book by Johannes Prætorius is in the British Museum (press-mark 8630. a.). 8°. 'The joy of the treasurer' is the meaning of the chronogram with which the title-page commences, thus—

'GAZOPHVLACI GAVDIVM, = 1667

Das ist

Ein Ausbund von Wunschel-Ruthen, vver sehr lustreiche und ergetzliche Historien von wunderseltzamen Erfindungen der Schutze,' etc. Leipzig, 1667.

At page 304 there is a chronogram which I have already noticed in Chronograms, p. 533, to which place the reader is referred—

LONGA SIGISMVND0 BARBA IVBENTE PERIT. = 1564

And at page 442 this occurs; it seems to be the title of a 'tractate' by Prætorius himself—

ANNVLORVM FATIDICVs. = 1667

There are no more chronograms in the book.

THE ANGELIC SALUTATION,
AND
THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION OF
THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY.

T page 38, ante, allusion was made to my finding a rare book at Frankfurt-on-the-Main. I propose now to give some account of it, and transcribe some of its contents. It is a thick folio volume, printed at Louvain in 1663, which formerly belonged to the Carmelite Monastery, as appears from the words 'Carmeli Frankfurtensis,' written on the title-page, which is as follows:—

MILITIA IMMACULATÆ CONCEPTIONIS Virginis Mariæ, contra MALITIAM originalis infectionis peccati. In quâ ordine alphabetico recensentur auctores antiqui et moderni, Sancti et alii ecclesiastici et sæculares, ex omni statu ac natione qui clarè et expressè, aut insinuativè et obscurè locuti sunt in individuo de ipsâ præservatione, vel formali Conceptionis atque animationis instanti; aut universaliter de incontaminata ab omni maculâ, nævo, labe, et defectu, vel aliquid singulare in honorem virginalis immunitatis molitiû fuerunt.

Compilata ac disposita

A. R. A. P. F. Petro de Alva et Astorga. Ordinis Minorum, etc. etc.
Lovanii, 1663.

The contents consist of a bibliographical dictionary of all the writers who had appeared up to the date of the book in support of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary, arranged in alphabetical order in two columns in each page. The book is a very rare one, there is no copy in the British Museum, and during a very extensive inquiry at Continental libraries and among antiquarian booksellers, only two copies have come to light, namely, the one in the town-library at Frankfurt, and one at Louvain.

There is a handsome engraved frontispiece to the volume, representing dignitaries of the Church and State, holding in their hands pens tipped with arrow-points, ready for fight (militia), and regarding with adoration the Virgin Mary above, who stands on the crescent, whilst the serpent (malitia) is being demolished by the end of the cross-staff, with which she is piercing its head. The emblems of the four Evangelists surround her. The serpent is with its head on the ground, the tail erect, supporting the crescent, on which the Virgin Mary stands.

At column 1392 of the book it is mentioned that SEBASTIANUS FIEVET, ordinis Minorum Belga, singulis Joannis Bapt. Agnensis Anagrammatibus de Immac. Conceptione B. V. chronica adjunxit, et cum illis pariter in lucem edidit, hoc modo. Psalterium anagrammaticum Marianum Immaculatum, seu centum et quinquaginta anagrammata prorsus pura, pro Maria Deipara Virgine Immaculatè concepta; quæ D. JOANNES BAPT. AGNENSIS Cymæus Calvensis, eminentissimi principis S.R.E. Cardinalis Julii Rospigliosii Aulicus, solâ memoriæ vi (nam oculorum lumine orbatus est) eruit ex his salutationis Angelicæ verbis: 'AVE MARIA GRATIÂ PLENA DOMINUS TECUM,' achroesticè reducta. Quibus totidem adjunxi chronica (ex ipsis anagrammatibus majori ex parte eruta) desideratissimi illius anni 1662, quo exoptatissima fidelium votis bulla Sanctissimi D. nostri Alexandri VII. in favorem piæ sententiæ, et festi ac cultûs Immaculatæ Conceptionis B. Mariæ Virginis Deiparæ edita, cum solemnibus gratiarum actione publicata est in Belgio. Deiparæ Virgini Mariæ semper immaculatæ, Dominæ suæ clementissimæ infimus servulus Joannes Baptista Agnensis, Ave Maria, gratiâ plena, Dominus tecum. Ex interno mentis lumine dedi cor meum in similitudinem picturæ, quam in bono tuo lumine colloco, Lampas indeficiens. Ecce triginta et unum Angelici hujus Acroamatis, veluti Mensis tui totidem dierum numero distincti, characteres seu litteras, tanquam totidem stellas ordine vario choreas agentes, ac Immaculatæ tuæ gloriæ ancillantes, et amabili concursatione alia ex aliis Elogia Tibi textentes, Tibi sisto, Illuminatrix Maria. Accipe hæc sidera noctis meæ. Ita mihi longa hæc oculorum nox erit illuminatio in deliciis meis, dum Tu eris oculus cæco tuo: nam ad laudes tuas, ut vides, cæci vident. Te feram in oculis cordis amore non cæco, dum per Te, gratiâ plena hic luce gratiæ, olim lumine gloriæ sim videns. Hoc est Domina, quod 150 hisce anagrammatibus, veluti totidem psalmis tuis, Tibi canunt, et jam defecerunt oculi mei dicentes; Domina, quando consolaberis me? Ecce lumen oculorum meorum ipsum non est tecum, sed tecum est, dum est Dominus tecum; Dominus illuminatio mea et salus mea. Hoc est, quod cæcus clamo secus viam; Domina ut videam Filium tuum in patria; et nunc lumen oculorum meorum erit tecum.

From this we learn that Sebastian Fievet preserved or published the works which Johannes Baptista Agnensis—who, being blind, yet through the power of memory alone—composed on the subject of the 'Immaculate Conception,' one of which was a Psalter with 150 entirely 'pure' anagrams<sup>1</sup> on the words of the angelic salutation, 'AVE MARIA,' etc., together with the same number of chronograms in words taken from the anagrams, to make the year 1662, in which Pope Alexander VII. issued his bull confirming the adoption of the dogma then published in Belgium. The touching words of the blind author's address to the Virgin are then quoted to the following effect:—

Lo! by the inward light of my mind I give my heart in the similitude of a picture, and place it in thy fair light, which is an unfailing lamp to me. Behold the 31 letters or characters in this angelic 'acroama,' corresponding to the like number of days in thy particular month, as it were the same number of stars moving in changeful course as hand-maids to thy Immaculate glory, and weaving praises upon praises to thee in loving concurrence; I set them before thee, O Mary of Light! Accept these stars of my night. Thus may this, the long night of my eyes, be an illumination for my happiness, whilst thou wilt be as an eye to thy blind one; for, be it to thy praise, as thou seest so also do thy blind ones see. For with the love which is not blind I bear thee in the eyes of my heart, which is not blind; whilst through thee who art full of grace,<sup>2</sup> here by the light of grace I may, as formerly, have the power of sight by the light of thy glory. It is, O Lady, that in these 150 anagrams as if so many psalms of thine (my eyes failing me) I sing, saying, O Lady, when wilt thou console me? Behold, the very light of my eyes is not with me, but it is with thee while the Lord is with thee.<sup>3</sup> The Lord is my light and my salvation. This is what I cry along my path, being blind; O Lady, grant that I may see thy Son in His kingdom, then will the light of my eyes be again my own.

By these thoughts the blind author was encouraged whilst writing the 'Anagrammata et Chronica achroastica de Immaculata Conceptione Beatæ Mariæ Virginis, ex his salutationis verbis eruta'<sup>4</sup>—

AVE MARIA GRATIÂ PLENA, DOMINUS TECUM.

<sup>1</sup> An anagram is said to be 'pure' when the number of letters in each sentence is equal, and every letter in the one sentence is used in the other, or in all the others of a series. The writers of the following works use the word also with allusion to the purity of the Virgin Mary.

<sup>4</sup> These are the author's own words, implying that the words of the Angelic Salutation (AVE, etc.) constitute the program of the anagrams in the first column, and that the words of the adjoining chronograms are composed on, or out of, those of the anagram. Observe that the initial letters both of the anagrams and of the chronograms, when read downwards, compose the words of the 'AVE,' etc.

After the conclusion of these chronograms, we find the subjoined square or labyrinth, composed of the following words—and we are told in the Latin sentence how many times they may be read by following the letters along and down the lines of arrangement.

TOTA PVRA EST DEIPARA MACVLA NON EST IN EA. = 1662

Chronographicum

in laudem Beatissimæ Virginis sine peccato originali conceptæ, quod pleno sensu ad prodigium variari potest per millies decies centena millia, centies mille chyliaades, sexies mille sexcentas et octoginta myriades, et ter mille, centum, et sex vices. Or, as they may be translated—

A thousand times ten hundred thousand,

A hundred times a thousand chiliads (a chiliad = 1000?),

Six times one thousand six hundred and eighty myriads (a myriad = 10,000?),

And three thousand one hundred and six changes.

I do not undertake to reduce the author's elements into ordinary figures, or to prove his calculations; or even to state how many transpositions or combinations can be made out of the 34 letters. If his own words 'pleno sensu' are to be taken as meaning that the full sense of the words may be read such a vast number of times in different directions, I must claim to reserve my belief.

The notice of the marvellous work of the blind author, 'composed by the power of his memory,' as I find it in 'Alva et Astorga,' comes to an end shortly after this labyrinth. The number of anagrams is 150, and of chronograms 261. This extraordinary performance is at least equalled by what now follows.

ANOTHER very remarkable work by the same blind author is mentioned in 'Alva et Astorga,' columns 712-723, to the following effect:—Joannes Baptista Agnensis Cynæus, Calvensis Italus, attached to the court of Cardinal Julius Rospigliosi, composed from the words of the angelic salutation, 'AVE MARIA,' etc., 556 pure anagrams for the Virgin pure and conceived entirely without original sin, through the power of memory alone, for he was blind, and unable to inspect any words written on paper. The author makes many sad allusions to his blindness; he exhibits great ingenuity in the arrangement of the anagrams in various sections, and when we contemplate this work and that already quoted at large, we cannot help being astonished at the accomplishment of such a task. The production of 706 chronograms and 261 anagrams on the same original set of words, would be a performance of very great difficulty to any person in possession of perfect eyesight. His last anagram line on the 'Ave' is—

Virgo, i, munda Parens, Mater Amica, vale!

This work seems to have been printed in 'broad-sheets,' there is no mention of a book.

There are no chronograms.

LAMBERTUS PEVÉE wrote 46 anagrams on the 'program' of the angelic salutation, each containing 159 letters; each anagram is associated with one or two chronograms, 84 in all, which are allusive to passages in the Bible, but not composed of the exact words; they are rather an echo of the anagrams in Bible phrases. The author is thus mentioned by Alva y Astorga, column 899-905—

'LAMBERTUS PEVÉE, ordinis Minorum Belga, scripsit inter alia, sequentia: Gloria Immaculatè conceptæ Deiparæ Virginis Mariæ totius ordinis Seraphici Patronæ, variis S. Scripturæ locis et chronicis adumbrata, et 23 anagrammatibus prorsus puris, ex Angelicâ Salutatione integrâ, prout ab ecclesiâ recitanda proponitur deductis, exornata.' Then follows what Pevée wrote—

This is the 'programma,' containing 159 letters—

Ave Maria gratiâ plena, Dominus tecum, benedicta tu in mulieribus, et benedictus fructus ventris tui Jesus. Sancta Maria, Mater Dei ora pro nobis peccatoribus nunc et in hora mortis nostræ. Amen.

This is the first anagram thereon, containing 159 letters—

Siste Adam: ob Jesum Virgo summè tuta vincet; in acerbâ carnis ac mundi peste, ab hominum sordibus purè intacta nitens a Romano pontifice declaratur. Jure arbor vitæ sanctè virens intus claret.

Having given this example, I pass over the anagrams; they are remarkable for their number and for their individual length, and are ana = ?

Chrono = ?

undoubtedly the leading feature of the work, but not within my particular subject; the chronograms apart from them are rather devoid of interest. The references are to the Vulgate Version.

The twenty-six chronograms which then follow are repetitions of some of those which have gone before, but adapted to different anagrams. The whole concludes with the following words, from which it may be inferred that the work of Pevée had not been printed before the publication by Alva y Astorga—

‘Habemus manuscripta apud nos, in 4°.’

FRANCISCUS GODINUS of Brussels wrote a book which is mentioned by Alva et Astorga, column 427-431; the title commences, ‘ACHROSTICA CHRONICA, sive Litanía Chronogrammatica Deiparæ V. Mariæ sine originali peccato conceptæ,’ etc. The translation whereof in full is to this effect—Acrostic chronograms, otherwise a Chronogrammatic Litany of Mary the Virgin mother of God, conceived without original sin, put forth when the bull for the Immaculate Conception of the same Virgin, issued at Rome by Pope Alexander VII. on 3d December 1661, was published at Brussels with the greatest solemnity and ceremony on 3d April 1662, at the instance of King Philip IV. the Catholic, and by the command of Andrew Creusen, archbishop of Mechlin and primate of Belgium.

Magnificat anima mea Dominum et exultavit spiritus meus in Deo salutari meo.

Anagramma.

Sum Immaculata Virgo Deipara, satanas de me nil tenuit, mox jus meum notum fiet.

[The initial letters of the following litany, beginning at the word ALMA, compose these words, ‘Ave! gratiâ plena Dominus tecum, benedicta tu in mulieribus, et benedictus fructus ventris tui Jesus; sancta Maria Mater Dei ora pro nobis peccatoribus nunc et in horâ mortis nostræ.’]

JACOBUS POCHETIUS or Pochet wrote a book containing acrostic chronograms on the words of the Angelic Salutation and the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which is thus mentioned by Alva y Astorga, 'Jacobus Pochetius, Belga poeta in libro APOLLINIS SPIRITUALIS ORACULUM, sive pro electione Imperatoris ad sacros Imperii Electores, etc., fol. 48, in salutationem Angelicam, ad illud: Ave Maria; inquit: Ave Regina coeli, quæ fuisti et eris semper sine vae peccati. Ave pax, gaudium et salus mundi, etc. Vide alia ibi. Lib. impress. Francofurti, 1658, in 12.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> I possess a copy of the work bearing this title, procured at Frankfort. It is dated 1651, and, consequently, it does not contain the chronograms which follow, of the year 1663. A notice of my copy is at page 505, infra.

PRO MAGNO DONO ET FELICI XENIO	=	1663
Haec ACTV PHOEBI SOCIVS Theoremata pangit

etc. etc. etc.

The author explains, in hexameter and pentameter verses addressed to the Virgin Mary, that he, 'a companion of Phœbus,' will sing her praises in 100 acrostic anagrams composed on the words of the 'AVE,' the Angelic Salutation. (Then follow the 100 anagrams, each being accompanied by a hexameter and pentameter couplet.) These are followed by an 'elegiac oration' to her in verse—

PIÆ MARIE DEIPARÆ VIRGINI ORATIO ELEGIACA. = 1663

Then the angel Gabriel addresses her in acrostic verses on the Angelic Salutation—

ANGELI GABRIELIS SALVTATIO HIS PIIS
REPETENDA METRIS. } = 1663

The verses then follow, hexameters and pentameters, the former being the acrostic lines of the couplets. The author then brings this remarkable work to a conclusion in an ode to the Virgin Mary, as if to sum up the whole subject to which he had devoted so much labour.

The number of anagrams made by the several writers on the words of the Angelic Salutation, which are transcribed or alluded to in the foregoing extracts, is truly astonishing; all were intended to enforce the teaching of the now accepted dogma of the Immaculate Conception, and probably they were advanced as an argument that the truth of it is inherent in the very words. It must, however, be remembered that the same words are capable of being made into other anagrams, with meanings different from the teaching in question, or even in direct opposition to it. And as for the acrostic chronograms, they prove neither the truth nor the fallacy of any teaching; they are nevertheless curious, and are simply the date chosen by the writers of them.

THE WORKS OF JACOBUS POCHETIUS.

JACOBUS POCHETIUS, or Pochet, made more than one addition to chronogrammatic literature. In the preceding chapter, at page 502, we had one work under notice, of which I have never seen an original copy. In a note to that page, I mention another work (or perhaps a first edition thereof) in my possession, of which I propose now to give some account; and at page 508 infra, I notice a third work by him. It is reasonable to suppose, from his own words in the subjoined title, that he wrote and published other chronograms, but I have made no discovery in that direction.

The title is, 'APOLLINIS SPIRITUALIS ORACULUM de Lumine Dei luminosum, de melle cœli mellifuum, gratis plenum odoribus condimentum, Et morum Flos hic, nectar qui sensibus hales.

The dedication is to Leopold, Archduke of Austria, governor of the Netherlands, whom the author addresses in Latin hexameter and pentameter verse, in acrostic verses, and other fanciful compositions; these chronograms are among them—

A curious engraving in the original work represents a great star (sidus), with the letter A in the centre (surrounded by eight lesser stars or 'beatitudes'), and thus inscribed—

DIRECTVS AVSTRIACVS
 LVDE SOLVS AVTOR PACIS.
 LEOPOLDVS AVSTRIACVS.
 OLIVS OIVTI POLO SALVVS

The words which are thus arranged in the star are anagrams, and are to be read as follows—

(Program.) Leopoldus Austriacus.
 (3 Anagrams.) { Directus a polo salvus.
 Lude solus autor pacis.
 Repulsas valido scuto.

The whole is surmounted by a crown, the band inscribed—

PROAVIS UT SOL ADLUCES.

At page 1 the author commences the work itself under the subordinate title 'Jacobi Pochet epigrammata singularia,' and he continues his subject, under this and other subordinate titles, to the end on page 366. All the epigrams, poems, and other compositions, 1404 in number, have a moral and devotional purpose; the author frequently introduces an arrangement of words in the form of a cross, similar to that at page 503 ante, and throughout the book are to be seen a sort of labyrinth, or logogryph<sup>1</sup> sentences, of which I shall presently give an example. Anagrams are also plentiful, but as they are not within my subject, I pass them over, and proceed to extract such of the chronograms as will be of sufficient interest apart from their accompanying text. They are not numerous, nor do they mark any event or date, other than a peace jubilee and the date of the book itself. The reference numbers are those of the epigrams, etc., and not the page on which they are printed.

A CURIOUS book in the library of the Rev. Walter Begley, bearing the title APOLLO SPIRITUALIS, etc. (8°, pp. 150), is a collection of Latin hymns and devotional poems, with 238 chronograms, which stand mostly as titles or themes to the poetry; a great many anagrams (perhaps 200) are also scattered through the work, having the same purpose. The chronograms themselves are not especially interesting; they neither mark any historical events, nor possess any biographical application; they generally express some devotional thought or maxim, and all contain one and the same date, 1671, that of the publication of the book. I have extracted 48 as examples, and they fairly represent the character of the remaining 190. The author's name is Jacobus Pochet, and the book was printed at Liège in 1671. The title-page is all in chronogram, and is as follows—

Then follow 153 of the anagrams on the words Dei gratia, Gratia Divina, and Gratia cœlestis, all serving as titles to particular poems. Possibly the number 153 is chosen in allusion to the 'one hundred and fifty and three great fishes,' see St. John xxi. 11. Anagrams on other general titles occur occasionally afterwards, and the chronogram titles again appear—

The 'pleasing verses' thus announced by the author, by way of a finish, are after the manner of that celebrated work by Thomas à

Kempis, 'De Imitatione Christi,' and the work terminates with a few verses thus addressed to the author—

EVENTS IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

SMALL insignificant-looking, but probably a rare book (British Museum, press-mark 11712. aa. 17), 8°, is in two parts by the same author, Johannes Avianus. The first consists of a tragi-comedy in Latin, entitled, 'Miles vagus seu mendicans,' consisting of thirty-six pages, and the book is catalogued under that title. The second part is entitled 'Seculum vertens; Eteostichis novis heroicis, a Joanne Aviano Tuntorphinati donatum. (Halæ) Anno 1597.' It is entirely in Latin, and gives the date of some historical event in each year from 1500 to 1596, in hexameter chronograms printed in plain italics, without any mark whatsoever (capital letters or otherwise) to distinguish the date letters. Chronograms are seldom found thus printed. Some examples are noticed at p. 134, ante. I have extracted all the chronograms, printing the date letters in the usual manner. The copy of the work which I have made use of is in many places difficult to read, the print being blurred and defective, and the paper much discoloured. The pages throughout the book are not numbered. The chronograms are somewhat epigrammatic in their style of composition; occasional annotations in Latin explain the meaning and application of words and phrases, which were obscure even when they were written, nearly three centuries ago.

It is curious to observe the variety of phrases used in many of the introductions to denote the death of persons. The following are examples:—Rex moritur. Philippus obiit. Julio defuncto. Placidè obiit. Placidè commoriuntur. Rapitur fati. Henricus discessit. Ex hac vita discessus. Ad Christum vocatur. E rebus humanis eximitur. E vita discedit. Annum mortis evenit. Johannes obdormiscit.

Henricus aufugit. Transit ex hac mortalitate. The distich chronograms present subjects for historical comment and illustration ; they are as follows—

SOME AFFAIRS IN THE NETHERLANDS.

QUARTO volume of twenty tracts,<sup>1</sup> in the Cambridge University Library, labelled 'Varia.—Cc. 12-48,' contains some interesting chronograms relating to members of the Imperial House of Austria and their dominions in the Netherlands.

TRACT No. 1, published at Brussels, is in praise of Count de Daun, Governor of the Austrian Netherlands in 1725. A handsome engraving stands in the place of a title-page, representing on two shields the armorial bearings of the De Daun family only, and those of other families in nine quarterings, all surrounded with bold scroll-work supported by two angelic figures; a coronet surmounts the whole. Beneath is a chronogrammatic inscription as follows, in imitation of the original, making the date 1725—

APPLAUSVS

VIRICO PHILIPPO LAVRENTIO DE DAUN

PRINCIPI THIANENSI

AUREI VELLERIS EQVITI

BELGII GVBERNATORI

AC LANGVENTIS PATRIÆ RESTAVRATORI.

i.e. An applause to Viricus Philippus Laurentius de Daun, Prince of Teano, Knight of the Order of the Golden Fleece, Governor of the Netherlands, and restorer of his languishing country.

The tract consists of thirty-one leaves, with engravings of medals, twenty-eight in number, bearing emblematical designs to exemplify the public and private beneficent acts of the prince, each with an anagram on his name and titles, and a Latin epigram of four lines in his praise. On leaf 3 there are some verses addressed to him preceded by this chronogram (in imitation of the original) of the year 1725, the last two words being anagrams on the name 'Daun,' and are made to bear some figurative meaning in the verses—

G V B E R N A T O R I
D A V N
L I T T E R I S B I S E L O C A T I S
N V D A V N D A.

On leaf 30 the tract concludes with the following words, giving the names of the authors of it :—

Humillimi atque obsequentissimi vestræ famuli Fratres PETRUS Canonicus Frigidi Montis et JOANNES CAROLUS VANDER BORCHT Brux. Cæs. ac Cath.
Majestatis a Monetis Præfectus dedicant consecrant.

The importance of the noble family of Daun can be traced back for at least 700 years. See Zedler's Universal Lexicon, vii. 274, 'Daun,' and xlii. 497, 'Teano.' This Wiric Philip Laurence von Daun became Prince of Teano, in Italy, and knight of the Golden Fleece; he was an officer of high rank in the army of Charles III. of Spain, who at a later period was elected as Emperor Charles VI. of Germany.

TRACT No. 3 is 'Oratio Funebris Ferdinandi III.,' dedicated to his son Leopold (the Emperor), King of Hungary and Bohemia, by Ferdinandus Ernestus de Trauttmanstorff, s.r.i. Comes. Antwerp (?) 1657. It contains twelve well-engraved emblems, with epigrams in honour of the deceased Emperor, and only one chronogram (on page 72), alluding to a column erected by him to the Virgin Mary, in the market-place at Vienna—

STATVAM HANC EX VOTO PONIT FERNANDVS III AVGVSTVS. = 1644

The name is printed in the book now quoted as FERDINANDVS, this is manifestly wrong as a chronogram. Having myself copied the inscription from the column at Vienna, I make the required correction here. See Chronograms, page 81. The name frequently occurs spelt in this manner.

TRACT No. 9 is 'Oratio Funeris in obitu serenissimæ Mariæ Annæ Electricis Bavarïæ Archiducis Austriæ, etc.,' by the English College of the Society of Jesuits at Louvain. 1666. The oration is followed by a series of Latin poems, concluding on page 40 thus—

MARIA ANNA BAVARO-AUSTRIACA.

Here follows a short Latin poem on this theme, and 'Sex chronogrammata prædictum anagramma illustrantia, facta pro Anno Domini 1665, quo serenissima Archiducissa mortua est'—

The chronogram within the cross on the preceding page is to be read thus—

THE LOUVAIN-MALINES CANAL.

A CURIOUS tract, consisting of eight pages, in the collection of the Rev. W. Begley, is filled with poetry in long metre, in the Flemish language, written to commemorate the commencement of a canal from Louvain to a place beyond Malines, on the river Senne, called Sinnegat. His Royal Highness Charles Alexander, Duke of Lorraine, governor of the Austrian Netherlands, cut the first sod ('leva le premier gazon') on 9th February 1750. The tract contains several chronograms of the date, in the Flemish and Latin languages, and a map, in size 55 by 10 inches (on a scale of about 10 inches to a league), with explanations in French, showing the canal to be about five leagues in length; also two engravings, representing in actual size the front and back of the silver spade used by the Duke on the occasion. The spade was highly ornamented on both sides with armorial shields and emblems, with chronogrammatic mottoes, which give the date 1750; the accompanying two facsimile copies (slightly reduced from the originals) will render any further description needless. This is the only example of such an application of chronograms that has fallen under my notice. The title-page is as follows—

In the lower corner of the map, beneath a shield charged with the arms of Louvain, is this motto—

CERNENS MEA DECORA LÆTOR. = 1750

The first two pages of verse declare the importance of Louvain, and that the trade and commerce of the city will be improved by the new canal ; this chronogram leads off the subject—

EDELE COOPMANSCHAP = 1750

MÆCKT PALLAS DE PLAETS. = 1750

And at the conclusion of the verses is this 'jaer-schriften'—

DOOR PALLAS KOOPMANSCHAP FLOREERT ; = 1750

PLENAS ADFERT PALLAS MERCES. = 1750

The next pages of versé are addressed principally to the Empress Maria Theresa, Sovereign of the Netherlands, who granted the privilege to make the canal ; they are preceded by these two chronograms—

'TOCTROY VAN DE NIEUVVE VAERT VAN LOVEN } = 1750
VERLEENT VAN MARIA TERESIA.

And at the conclusion is this 'jaer-schriften,' referring to Mr.
Peetermans, the chief engineer of the works—

- PEETERMANS BEDANCKT CAREL; = 1750
 CREEGH TOESTEM DER CANAEL. = 1750
- The verses on the next page are in praise of the Prince Charles and the same Mr. Peetermans, and are otherwise appropriate to the occasion; they are preceded by—

- And the verses conclude with this 'jaer-schriften'—
- MET DEN CAREL'S STEECK, = 1750

- The next verses apply to the Flemish canals generally; these chronograms are at the head—
- STADTS COOPMANSCHAP FLOREERT, = 1750

- And this 'jaer-schriften' is at the end of the verses, and terminates the last page of the tract—

LEOPOLD II. of Germany, and I. of Tuscany, was the second son of Maria Theresa of Austria and Francis of Lorraine. He succeeded to the Grand Duchy of Tuscany in 1765, and fixed his residence at Florence, and greatly improved the condition of the country by the abolition of many forms of misgovernment which had previously existed there. By the death of his brother, the Emperor Joseph II., on 20th February 1790, Leopold succeeded to his dominions, and was elected Emperor of Germany. On assuming the administration of the hereditary dominions of the house of Austria, he showed an earnest desire to please his subjects. He abolished the more obnoxious innovations of his brother; he concluded peace with Turkey; he pacified Hungary; and having done this, his next step was to endeavour to pacify the revolted States of the Netherlands, by offering to establish their ancient constitutions. The insurgents having obstinately refused to listen to his offers, he sent troops against them, and recovered without much difficulty those fine provinces.

Connected with these events a 'peace congress' was held, and an engraving was executed and published to commemorate the occasion; the accompanying facsimile of it, on a reduced scale, is taken from an original impression in the collection of the Rev. Walter Begley. The actual size is  $22\frac{1}{2}$  by  $15\frac{3}{4}$  inches. It represents principally a Flemish chronogram of the date 1790, all the letters of which are highly ornamented, the date-letters especially so. The word 'Keizers' bears the imperial crown, and those signifying England, Prussia, and Holland bear an armorial shield of those countries in their initial letters. A magnifying glass is needed to make out the smaller details and inscriptions, such as that on the floral wand held by the emperor, 'PAX ET LIBERTAS,' and 'BIBLIA' beneath it. In the pictorial part of the subject is seen the bust of Leopold II. (Peter Leopold), with many emblematical accessories and inscriptions. The medalion on the right represents the congress; the chairs bear the armorial shields of their official occupants. In the upper ornament, a cornucopia on the right pours out a variety of objects, among them may be discerned the cordon of the Golden Fleece and minute medals of Leopold; the Prussian Eagle is also conspicuous. The engraving is signed, 'Fait à la Plume, etc., gravé par A. Zurcher.' This name is not found in the catalogues of art engravers of the period. The impression is marked as a proof, 'Proefdruk.' The engraving is probably rare. I believe there is no copy of it in the British Museum collection.

The chronogram is as follows; the letter y counts as 2 :—

ZIET BELGEN! LEOPOLD OP'S KEIZERS TROON VERHEEVEN	}	= 1790
V WEER, EN ZOETE RVST, EN WAARE VRYHEID GEEVEN;
DE BRIT, EN PRVIS, EN BATAVIER,
V RVKTEN VIT HET OORLOGS VIER.

i.e. See, Belgians! Leopold elevated to the Emperor's throne, a sweet rest and true peace given to Britain, Prussia, and Holland, and the fear of war driven far away.

This pacific appearance of affairs was not destined to last. Leopold died on the 1st March 1792. The French Revolution had already commenced, and one of the political consequences was a declaration of war by France against the Emperor of Germany, and the Netherland provinces were conquered by the French republicans before the end of that eventful year.

MAXIMILIAN VRIENTIUS of Ghent was a celebrated writer of epigrams upon the political and other events of his time. He published his works early in the seventeenth century. He also wrote very spirited epigrammatic chronograms, many of which I have given in my former volume on Chronograms. (See index under 'Vrientius.') Another work by this author has recently come into my possession, containing some examples of those compositions not before noticed by me. The title is, 'Urbes Flandriæ et Brabantæ, Auctore Maxemiliano Vrientio Belga Gandensi. Lovanii MDCCXIV' (1614). A separate division bears this title, 'Urbes Brabantæ præcipuæ,' and consists of a series of epigrams and short poems concerning certain towns of Brabant, and the events, principally of war, which affected them. I extract the following miscellaneous chronograms. The letter D=500 is not to be counted as a numeral.

The tower of the cathedral of St. Bavon at Ghent was burnt by lightning in 1602. See Chronograms, p. 117. The Belfry tower, 386 feet high, is near to it, having on the summit of the spire a vane consisting of a gilded dragon ten feet in length, which was taken from the church of St. Sophia at Constantinople in 1204, by Count Baldwin IX, who presented it to the people of Ghent. The tower is said to be a token of the liberties of the citizens. The following epigram, 'In draconem Capitolinum, 1545,' seems to be in allusion to the gilding of this dragon by the first 'Consul,' Giles Baenst—

A canal was cut to improve the navigation between Ghent and the sea. See Chronograms, p. 55. The following epigram, 'In novum Gandavi alveum, qui ad mare ducit, vulgò de Nieu-vaert, absolutum AN. MDXLIX,' seems to refer to it—

SAINTE RUMOLD OF MECHLIN.

A PAMPHLET in the collection of the Rev. Walter Begley describes, in the Flemish language, a festival held at Mechlin in honour of the patron saint Rumold. (Pp. 104. 8°.) The title is, 'Verzameling der Merkwaardigste jaerschriften, zinnebeelden, verzen en andere opschriften Waermede het Aertsbisschoppelyk Seminarie, de Collegien en de voornaemste Straten de stad Mechelen versierd zyn, ter gelegenheid van het Jubel-feest van den H. Rumoldus, beschermheiligen dezer stad, den 24 Junij 1825.' The affair seems to have been very elaborate as to the poetical compositions in Latin, Flemish, and French, but there are no engraved illustrations to depict the decorative structures, which were important and conspicuous.<sup>1</sup> There is a copious use of chronograms, mostly in Latin, which are noteworthy for conciseness, arising from the very frequent occurrence of the letter M = 1000, or its equivalent of letters D, and consequently for the restricted use of the smaller numerals to build up the date. By this means a chronogram is condensed into the space of one line, or the compass of three or four words;<sup>2</sup> there are, naturally, some exceptions. The work contains about 297 chronograms; a transcript of all would be uninteresting, I therefore omit those having special reference to some emblematical ornament or structure which would require a long description to elucidate the meaning. The following selection, 93 in number, may be regarded as representative examples.

The first happens to be a long one, containing no letter M; it must be understood that the saint was a native of Scotland (or Ireland), and of royal lineage—

URBIS PATRONUS REGIA SCOTIÆ PROSAPIA NATUS CHRISTO QUÆRENS OVES SCEPTRA RELIQUIT; PATRIÆ HUIUS FINIBUS APPELLENS CÆCA GENTILITATIS NUBILA EVAN- GELII LUCE PROPULIT; CUJUS ZELO HIC ACCREVIT RELIGIO VERA, FUSO EJUS CRUORE CONSIGNATA.	= 1825

<sup>2</sup> The date 1825 cannot be expressed by numeral letters shorter than MDCCCXXV; it is otherwise with some dates; for instance, MD = 1500, MDX = 1510, MDC = 1600; of course all such dates may be prolonged into many lines by using a multitude of the smaller numerals.

Many other long chronogrammatic inscriptions were placed on the ornamental structures put up in the street. The following one, of moderate length, appeared at the corn-market—

Of the remaining chronograms, about eighty in number are quotations from the Bible, applicable to various emblematical and pictorial decorations in different parts of the city, and appropriate to the festival. I conclude my extracts with the following, which specify the date and origin of Saint Rumold—

BROADSHEETS were occasionally printed and published at some of the Flemish Universities, and perhaps placarded on the walls, to congratulate certain favourite students on their attaining academical honours or ecclesiastical dignity. These printed sheets have become rare. I know of only two examples out of the many which must have existed, and they are both composed principally in chronogram. One I have noticed at pp. 49, 50, ante, the other is in the collection of the Rev. W. Begley. It congratulates a most reverend Peter of St. Trond, in Belgium, on his election as general of his order at Liége on the morning of the day of Saint Servatius (the 13th May) 1658. The size is 12½ inches by 11. The contents are as follows (the introductory lines extend to the width of the sheet; the chronograms are arranged in two columns).

'Reverendissimo in Christo patri et eximio Domino D. Petro A. S. Trudone celeberrimæ canonicæ S. ### A BRUSSELS JUBILEE.

A TRACT of only eight pages 8°, in the collection of the Rev. W. Begley, has this title, 'Jubileum Bruxellense carmine exhibit R. D. Carolus Emanuel Barnaba presbyter. Bruxellis apud Ægidium <sup>1</sup> A playful allusion to his name.

THE FRANKFORT CHRONICLE.

CHRONICLE of Frankfort-on-the-Main bears this title, 'Der Weit-brühmen Freyen Reichs-wahl und Handels-Stadt Franckfurt am Mayn chronica, etc.,' compiled by Gebhard Florian from the manuscripts of Achilles Augustus von Lersner. 2 vols. Folio. 1706-1734. A copy is in the British Museum (press-mark 10201. g.). There are many curious engravings of local coins and heraldry. At page 230 of vol. ii. a panegyric is quoted, in which the career of Henry Lewis Lersner is set forth in Latin verse, divided into nine 'steps of honour,' describing that number of grades of office and dignity which he filled at the city of Frankfort. It bears this title, 'PLAUSUS PARNASSI APPARATUS summo Honoris gradui, quando electus Prætor judicialis, oblatu in ipso natali festivo die Generosissimo Magnificoque viro domino Domino Henrico Ludovico Lersnero, urbis imperialis et reipublicæ Francofurtensis Liberæ justissimo prætori, judici æquissimo Scabino, consuli amplissimo sapientissimoque, Scholarchæ magnifico, in diversis legationibus. Oratori facundissimo a Musis queis Apollo præsidet, quem non Parnassus sed Paradisus possidet. Francofurti ad Mœnum. Typis Andreae Deutschmann, Anno MDCXCV.'

The 'steps' are in Latin verse, and nearly all preceded by (carelessly printed) chronograms, in varied metre, after Horace and other classical poets. I transcribe the chronograms only.

The first or introductory chronogram is the date of his birth—
 NASCERIS IN NONO FEBRVI, TIBI NONVS HONORIS
 TRADITVR INDE GRADVS; PERBENÈ NATA NITES. } = 1629

The third step is his election as 'junior consul'—
 CONSVL ES IVNIOR, CAPERE IVNIORVM SALE.
 CONSILIA SACRO PROPE CARENT, NON EST SENIS. } = 1677

The fourth step he enters the 'Senatus Scabinorum'—
 TE SCABINORVM PETIT EN SENATVS,
 PERGIS, ATQ. INTRAS, SAPIENTIA ORNAS
 IVRE PRÆVLGES, SOPHLEQ. SEDES
 ESSE PVTARIS. } = 1684

The fifth step is his election as 'senior scholarcha'—
 LERSNERE TRANSI: TE SCHOLA POSTVLAT
 HONORIS OSTRO CVM SENIOR NITES
 SCHOLARCHA, PARNASSVS RESVLATAT,
 TOTA TIBI RESONAT IVVENTA. } = 1687

The sixth step he is sent to Vienna on some important affairs—
 ASTAT, QVIS PERAGET? MAGNA LEGATIO
 LERSNERVS VIR AGET GRANDIS ET ELOQVENS,
 FESTINA PETIT VRBS TE PRIOR AVSTRIAE. } = 1688

The seventh step he is sent to Augsburg, on the coronation of the 'King of the Romans' (the Emperor) Joseph I.—
 HVNGARLÆ IOSEPH REGALIA SERTA REVINCTVS
 DONA STVPENDA STVPET, NONNE STVPENDVS ERAS? } = 1689

The eighth step, in which he is made 'senior consul'—
 NON EST FINIS HONORIBVS, NEC IN TE
 VIRTVTIS LVDOVICE LERSNER, ECCE
 TE DONAT SENIORE CONSVLATV. } = 1693

The ninth step he is elected 'judicial prætor'—
 DISSERE, QVOT GRADIBVS NITVIT LERSNERVS HONORIS?
 HAVD PLVRES REFERAS, ANGLVS ESTO FVAS. } = 1695

The same step is also marked by this metrical chronogram, which terminates the panegyric—
 PRÆTOR FVLGES IMPERIALIS
 VECTVS IN APICES LERSNER HONORIS
 NON PLVS VLTRA, FRANCOFVRTI
 GLORIA NON EST ALTIOR VRBIS. } = 1695

The second part of vol. ii. contains a large number of epitaphs and monumental inscriptions now or formerly to be seen at Frankfort.
 Some few contain chronograms to give the dates—

SVB JESV DOMO FELIX TVTVSQVE QVIESCO. = 1692

In the next, the chronogram words are mingled with other words or sentences, which do not count as dates, the latter being printed in simple type. The inscription was placed at or over an altar (the first two lines make 3424; that is double the date 1712, the date of the dedication of the altar)—

DEO ÆTERNO ET INCARNATO SACERDOTI ET HOSTIÆ

After making allowance for, and correcting probable misprints in the original, these last chronogrammatic lines do not make any probable date, and to that extent they are unintelligible. At page 171 there is a long chronogrammatic epitaph to Maria Philippina Eleonora, Princess of Tour and Taxis, but so full of manifest errors of printing, which I can in no way rectify, I am obliged reluctantly to pass it over. There are also some other similar epitaphs to other members of the same family; they are given in my former volume
Chronograms, pp. 65, 66, copied from the originals in Frankfort Cathedral.

This concludes my extracts. The work is said to be much valued at Frankfort for the great store of local history contained in its pages.
 It is worthy of a place in any collection. Not having room enough, I was obliged to let pass an opportunity I had for becoming the owner of a copy.

SOME CURIOUS BOOKS.

THE DISCALCEATE TRINITARIANS.

CURIOUS tract belonging to the Rev. W. Begley, printed at Tyrnau, in Hungary, in 1722, folio, bears a title to this effect :—The horizon of the Trinity Hemisphere crowned with new and resplendent light, when, by the Joshua of our time, Adam, Count of Kollonics of Kollegrad (and many other titles), in the free and royal city of Tyrnau, the fathers of the excalceate order of the Holy Trinity for the redemption of captives were, on the 14th June 1722, conducted to their new hermitage in that city. The author's name is 'Lucas à S. Nicolaus,' a priest of the order.

The title-page is, 'HORIZON TRINITARIO TYRNAVIENSIS in utriusque Poli Hemisphærio nova eaque fulgidissima luce coronatus. Per seculi nostri redivivum Joshue illustrissimum ac excellentissimum dominum Dominum Adamum e comitibus a Kollonics de Kollegrad, perpetuum in Nagy-Levárd & Niderspergen (and many other titles and dignities), dum in Libera Regiaque Civitate Tyrnaviensi patres excalceati ordinis sanctissimæ Trinitatis de Redemptione captivorum anno post orbi datum Emmanuelem 1722, Dominica tertia post Pentecosten, die 14 mensis Junii festivas inter acclamantium voces ad neo extractum in media urbe Asceterium traducerentur. Cujus ter fortunati eventûs decursum, rudi calamo adumbratum, majorum jussu compulsus posteritati transcripsit, Fr. Lucas à S. Nicolao ejusdem ordinis sacerdos et Concionator. Tyrnaviæ, 1722.'

We learn from the tract that the order having been established at Paris as early as 1198, for the release of Christians held in captivity by the Saracens, and extended under Papal approbation, and under the patronage of various potentates of Europe, was lately established in Austria and Hungary, under the auspices of the Emperor Leopold I., and especially at Tyrnau, in Hungary, in 1712, 'Tyrnavia universæ Pannoniæ ornamentum.' The narrative gives the local history of the order down to the occasion which is the subject of the tract. The following 'triumphant' sentence is printed in bold type at page 10:—

IO IO VIVAT IN TRINITATE ADAMVS KOLLONICH;	}	= 1722
DIGNVS CVSTOS REGLÆ CORONÆ HVNGARORVM	}	= 1722
ITEM IPSE EPISCOPVS, CANTORQVE STRIGONIENSIS ANDREAS KVRTOSI.	}	= 1722
SIT, MANEAT, DVRETQVE RELIGIO TRINITATIS IN SÆCVLA.	}	= 1722
SERVITOR TRINITATIS COMES PETRVS ZICHI DE VASONIKO.	}	= 1722

There is no other chronogram in the tract.

There were several orders of Trinitarians established in Spain, France, Germany, and Hungary for redeeming Christian captives. Some were called Discalceate or Barefoot, going about with naked feet, or at most with small leather sandals.

THE JANSENISTS.

SMALL tract in my possession (12°, pp. 38), printed at Amsterdam in 1683, bears this title—

NOVITAS
Appensa in Staterâ
ANTIQUITATIS
emblematicè trutinata.

i.e. Novelty tried in the balance of Antiquity emblematically weighed.

The contents are entirely in Latin. They relate to religious doctrines which were the subject of dispute in the Netherlands and France. The name Nicolaus Costanus is signed at the conclusion of the preface, which tells us that the tract is a translation and printed at his expense, the author's name being unknown to him. The following is a complete transcript of the preface:—

AD LECTOREM.

Ne mireris, Candide Lector, hæc Emblemata ad nostras manus esse translata : semper enim Musæ Musarum patronum quærunt et inveniunt. Hæc igitur (mirificè, authoris licet incogniti, studio delectatus) sumptu proprio dedi luci, ut lucifugi NOVATORES, non nostri Batavi, sed Brabanti, lucem veritatis defæcato mentis oculo contemplantur. Valè, et sumptibus nostris, et authoris mihi incogniti labore ac studio fruerè.

Nicolaus Costanus. Amstelodamensis, 30 Julii 1683.

The plan of the work is to describe emblematical pictures, eighteen in number ; each of them is preceded by a motto, title, or quotation from St. Augustine or Thomas Aquinas, and a Bible quotation ; then follows a description only of the pictorial emblem ; next comes a quotation from Virgil, Ovid, or Horace, and four epigrammatic lines, followed by a set of about twenty hexameter and pentameter verses, entitled Allusio ad Emblema, all devoted to a particular religious controversy and the refutation of certain 'new dogmas.' Each of these groups occupies two pages, and ends with a chronogram to enforce the teaching and give the date of the book. The little work is curious, but has less attraction for the modern reader than for him who lived in the exciting controversy two hundred years ago. It may be inferred that the tract is a reprint of another, leaving out the actual impressions of the pictorial emblems alluded to. I transcribe the chronograms only.

It is evident from these chronograms that the tract was written against the Jansenists; a sect which appeared in the Roman Catholic Church about the middle of the seventeenth century. They were the inveterate opponents of the Jesuits. They took their name from Cornelius Jansenius or Jansen, bishop of Ypres, in the Netherlands, who published a book entitled 'Augustinus,' certain propositions in which (on faith and doctrine) were decided to be heretical, and were condemned by a bull of Pope Innocent x. in the year 1653 as impious and blasphemous. A great controversy arose which caused a schism in the Church. The sectarians supported their teaching by asserting that the opinions advanced by Jansen were equally taught by St. Augustine, so that one could not be condemned without the other. The persecutions which ensued made many fanatics, but the paroxysm subsided after a few years; still other bulls, rescripts, and briefs continued to be issued down to the middle of the eighteenth century, condemning all Jansenists and their doctrines as heretical, and although the sect was not extinguished, it never again rose to any position of influence. Much of their teaching proceeded from the monastic school of Port Royal aux Champs, in France.

I cannot find a copy of this tract in the British Museum Library.

The chronograms may be thus translated—

1. O Christian, avoid the unprofitable novelties of these later writers.
2. Novelties and false doctrines shall be exterminated. Let it be seen whether Augustine be in Thomas Aquinas, and not in Cornelius Jansen.
3. Saint Thomas Aquinas above all others is to be followed.
4. Many who are Jansenists are deceived by novelties.
5. The way of the ancient Fathers is safe, that of Cornelius Jansen is dubious.
6. You should be wary, if, like Rehoboam, you would govern your subjects.
7. There is nothing to be got out of Jansen. You should adhere to the doctrines of the ancients.
8. Of Jansenism it comes as it were, that you are away from the heart of Thomas Aquinas.
9. Let the ancient things be set up, and let the new and false ones be suppressed.
10. You should know that novelties seduced Luther.
11. When the new dies away, the serious laments for the teachings.
12. The study of novelty is an empty employment.
13. We judge thee by thy speech. (Alluding probably to Luke xix. 22, 'Out of thine own mouth I will judge thee.' Or according to the Vulgate, 'De ore tuo te judico.')
14. The seven points set forth concerning the new doctrine, have come to an end.
15. As often as you are penitent you are to be absolved.
16. In the heart (or heartily) many have followed novelties.
17. After laughing you shall weep, assuredly the monks will laugh at thy ruin.
18. In the clothing of sheep you are inwardly ravening wolves. (See Matthew vii. 15, 'Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.' Or according to the Vulgate, 'qui veniunt ad vos in vestimentis ovium, intrinsecus autem sunt lupi rapaces.')

LE MYSTÈRE DE LA CROIX.

BOOK by an anonymous author, whose name is still unknown, bears this title, 'Le mystère de la Croix, affligeante et consolante, mortificante et vivifiante, humiliante et triomphante, de Jésus-Christ, et de ses membres. Ecrit au milieu de la croix au-dedans et au-dehors. Par un Disciple de la croix de Jésus. Achevé le 12 d'Août, 1732. On y a adjouté quelques poésies latines sur divers sujets, composées aussi dans la solitude de Sonnenstein.

CHARA CRUX, MIHI DVX. = 1732
 * * * *
 CHÈRE CROIX, GVIDE ASSVRÉ,
 MENEZ AV PORT AZVRÉ! } = 1732

Such is the title-page, from an English reprint of the work by Williams and Norgate, 1860. The editor says that an original print is rare, and the copy used by him is the only one he could discover. The introductory letter is subscribed with the initials N. N., and under that 'name' a copy is entered in the British Museum catalogue. The editor proceeds to remark that he has printed from the second edition of 'Le Mystère,' published at Lausanne in 1786, apparently under the superintendence of Philippe Duthoit de Mambrini, a pastor of the Reformed Church, and author of 'La Philosophie Divine,' in which, vol. i. p. 334, he eulogises the testimony left on record by the anonymous author. The book has also been quoted in a remarkable publication, 'A Suggestive Enquiry into the Hermetic Mystery,' 1850, 8°. It has indeed a religious purpose, carried out and elaborated in a fanciful and almost mystical manner. The anonymous author, in a time of religious persecution in France, sought refuge in Saxony, but was imprisoned and rigorously treated for ten months in the castle of Sonnenstein on the Elbe, where, as the title-page tells us, he composed the work in solitude.

A RENUNCIATION.

CURIOUS tract in the collection of the Rev. W. Begley, printed at Wittenberg, 1688, 4°, pp. 40, is the Declaration of a Canon of the Cathedral of Siccau, named Dippat, on his renouncing the Roman Catholic Church and adopting the Lutheran, together with his public revocation, preachings, and thank-sermons. The title is—

A very long sermon in German is the substance of the tract, on the text 1 John ii. 9. It is followed by his 'Revocatio,' and immediately after is this epistle in chronogram verse, as follows:—

SOME OTHER BOOKS CONTAINING CHRONOGRAMS.

THE group which follows consists of notices of smaller works, tracts, and pamphlets, containing chronograms on devotional, biographical, historical, and generally curious subjects, which are too limited in extent to form separate chapters. Although they are closely associated in these pages, they have no mutual connection; on the contrary, they are detached and miscellaneous.

ASTRÆA JUDEX.

A BOOK in my possession, pp. 430, 8°, bears this title, 'Astræa Judex asseclarum mundi ad cœlestes Agni nuptias admitti postulantium causas examinans et refellens; sive, De cœlo consequendo familiare colloquium, carmine elegiaco in tres libros cum figuris æneis partitum; cui succedit mantissæ loco, Vertumnus Vanitatis; Authore P. Martino à S. Brunone è Clericis Regul. Scholarum piarum. Cum facultate ordinarii. Brunæ, 1697.' There is a copy in the British Museum (press-mark 11405. a.). The contents are very curious, and consist of Latin poetry of a moral and religious tendency, in the classical style. The only chronograms occur in the introduction. The first two lines give the date of the book, the next two lines are a chronogram and a cabala of the same date combined, the third two lines are a chronogram only. The facsimile on the opposite page, taken from the original, represents them, together with the key to the cabala, as they appear in the book; and I give them also in modern print as follows—

Subscriptio Ioannes à S. Christophoro Schol. Piar.

A VERY curious and rare little book in my possession,<sup>1</sup> consisting of 160 pages, 12°, written in 1619, and printed at Erfurt in 1621, has for its subject the changes or permutations made by the author on the words of a single hexameter line (a chronogram) of eight words, by a regular succession of transpositions. The title-page tells us that they here amount to 3559. By calculating the contents of all the pages (15 to 148) occupied by the subject the number comes out as 3534, sufficiently near to verify the author's quantity. The author, Jaspar à Dacheröden, is mentioned in Zedler's Universal Lexicon as 'Caspar Dacheröden,—a good man and a good poet.' The title-page is—

Ingenii, luctus tempore, Ludus erat.

Passing over the introductory verses and an elaborate dedication to certain ecclesiastical dignitaries and learned scholars, we reach at p. 9 an hexameter chronogram written by Georgius Gramanus, and transposed 19 times, in honour of the admired author Dacheröde; it is mentioned that the line may be 'transfigured' in the same manner a vast number of times; the first four lines will suffice for an example—

|  |        |

| NE VERSVs TENTET, GRAMAN ROGO, VERTERE CODrVs. | = 1620 |
| NE TENTET VERSVs, ROGO GRAMAN, VERTERE CODrVs. | = 1620 |

At page 15 the principal work begins with this title—

Quod, sit mens justo Jaspar rogo psallere Jesu.

Quod, mens sit Jaspar rogo justo psallere Jesu.

Quod, sit mens Jaspar rogo justo psallere Jesu.

And so on for the whole 3559 lines, which the author says he has composed with the same eight words.

<sup>1</sup> I do not know of any other copy; there is none in the British Museum.

At page 149 this chronogram occurs—

LAVS TRINO ATQVE VNI GLORIA FIRMA DEO. = 1619

And afterwards the original line, Quod mens sit, etc., is set to music in a four-part song quaintly printed. The curious little book finishes with the colophon, thus,—Cum licentia superiorum. Impensis Joannis Birckneri, Bibliopolæ Erfurdensis, excudebat Phillipus Wittelius, anno CIJ. IC. XXI. Mense Martio.

LONG WORDS.

A TRACT written and published in 1630, in praise of the city of Dantzic, then in the kingdom of Poland, is dated by a chronogram composed of words of great length but of little sense; they may, however, be interpreted, if not exactly translated, as having direct allusion to distress and anxiety consequent on war affecting the inhabitants of that city. The chronograms are similar in composition to a couplet intended to be read as hexameter and pentameter verse which many a schoolboy in times past was familiar with, as mere 'nonsense' verse; but that couplet never was a chronogram, and it cannot be treated as one until the year 2040, when some event or other may happen to the people of Constantinople, who may then exclaim, 'There, now, is the date of it!' Until that epoch shall arrive it will suffice to print it in plain letters—

Conturbabantur Constantinopolitani
Innumerabilibus sollicitudinibus.

Now let us return to the tract mentioned at the commencement of these remarks. It may be seen in the British Museum (press-mark 11408. a.a.a.), small 4°, pp. 100. The title is 'GEDANUM SIVE DANTISCUM urbs illustris et regia, urbs illustriss. ampliss. florentiss. Annulus, gemma, decus Sarmatiæ; Ocellus, deliciæ, Paradisus Borussiae, mercimannorum mercantiumque nobile emporium, Variarum gentium theatrum,' etc. etc., à Vencesilao Clementis Boh. Exule.

Anno, quo sæpe precatus est

NE CONTRISTENTVR DANTISCANOPOLITANI } = 1630
BELLA PARABILIBVS SOLLICITVDINIBVS.

The poem in praise of Dantzic occupies 92 pages. It is followed by some epigrams about Dantzic, and verses addressed to the author, who is there called 'Exul pro Christi nomine.' At page 96 there are two varieties of the chronogram—

NE CONTVRBANTOR DANTISCANOPOLITANI } = 1630
CONTRISTABILIBVS SOLLICITVDINIBVS.

Vel

NE CONSTRINGANTOR DANTISCANOPOLITANI } = 1630
CONTVRBABILIBVS SOLLICITVDINIBVS.

Anagram on the author's name.
Magister VVenceslaus Clemens,
En sis magnus, et crucem alleves.

i.e. Master Wenceslaus Clement, Lo! mayest thou be great and set up a cross.—We learn from these extracts that he was a refugee from the religious persecutions in Bohemia.

In imitation of the foregoing tract, the same writer in 1636 produced another in praise of the city of London, in the form of a poem bearing a name adopted from that of the ancient inhabitants of the country north-eastward from London, the Trinobantes. It may be seen in the British Museum (press-mark 837. g. 29). 4°. The title in full is as follows, 'Venceslai Clementis a Lybeo-Monte TRINOBANTIADOS AUGUSTÆ sive Londini Libri vi. quibus urbis nobilissimæ, Antiquitas, Ortus, Progressus, Gloriæ, Famæque incrementa, Tanquam Sciographia, luculenter exprimuntur.

NE COLLVCENTVR TRINOBANTIADOPOLITANI. } = 1636
INTESTABILIBVS SOLLICITVDINIBVS.'

There is no other date on the title-page. The verses in praise of London occupy 204 pages. The work is dedicated to Charles I. of England. I cannot find any direct explanation of the place 'Lybeo-Monte' which the author adds to his name. It is the Latin form of a town, probably in Bohemia. I find this in Zedler's Universal Lexicon, vol. xvii. p. 809, 'Libus, oder Lybus, Libuch, Libetz, Libitz, Libiz. Latin Libussa, ein schloss in Böhmen.'

The same author also wrote a poetical work without any chronograms, about the Order of the Garter, entitled 'Garteriados,' under the same designation, 'a Lybeo-Monte.' The subject comes into the book next to be noticed.

THE ORDER OF THE GARTER.

A SMALL thin book (British Museum, press-mark 12430. a. 12) 12° —a pencil note; 'fine copy; scarce; £1, 11s. 6d.' The title is, 'RATIONIS ET ADPÉTITUS PUGNA. Hoc est, De amore Edoardi III. regis Angliæ et Elipsiæ, comitissæ Salisbericensis historia, quam ex Famæ fanum adjecit Æschacius Major.

CHALCOGRAPHO CÆLE } = 1612
CHRISTOPHORVS BISMARCVS.'

The dedication is dated—Kalendis Quinctilibus CIO. IO. CXII. i.e. (1st July 1612). The book contains no other chronogram.

The printer, Christopher Bismark, is the subject of some inquiry in Notes and Queries, 12th August 1882, p. 128, and 9th September 1882, p. 216. The place of publication (observe the first line of the chronogram) is Halle, on the river Saale, in Saxony. In noticing this little book, it is needful to refer only to the romantic story of the scene at a ball between King Edward III. of England and the Countess of Salisbury, and to the more authentic history of the events which led to the institution of the Order of the Garter in 1349 by that king. The authorship of the work is alluded to at the conclusion of the preceding notice.

ON DICE AND GAMING.

A TRACT, in Latin, of 50 pages, printed at Erfurt, on the subject of gambling-games and dice, condemning them as the invention of the devil—'a Diabolo inventa'—and the parents of crime, fraud, and an infinity of evil. The moral is especially pointed at the game called ('vulgo dicitur') 'Pennalismus,' at the time prevalent in many of the German Universities. The only date is the chronogram on the title-page, which is as follows—

'Fortunante Sortis Moderatore Deo.

i.e. Students ought to be absent from dice and games forbidden by law.

The dedication on the back of the title-page is thus, in large print—

ANOTHER tract in Latin, of 16 pages, an academical Thesis or dissertation at Landau, on the subject of Jubilations, is dated by a chronogram on the title-page, which commences thus, 'Disputatio de Jubilatu,' etc., by 'Hugo Cusonius, Landaviensis.'
 ANNO, IVBILATE IVVENES LÆTI IN DOMINO. = 1621
i.e. Rejoice in the Lord, ye joyful youths.

This is an amusing tract. The author laments that although books abound on matters of grammar and logic, yet nothing has been written about rejoicings, 'de júbilo.'—'Ô tempora ô mores!' He alludes to joyful sounds uttered in song by the Heavenly Host, King David, and others; and so downwards to ordinary men and women, giving amusing definitions of the various sounds made by them when laughing or using joyous expressions, such as 'balbitans,' 'blæsans,' 'oncans,'—bleating, lisping, braying, with their variations when indulged in by stammering, young, old, or toothless persons. He represents in a long sentence of syllables the exclamations used by students and courtiers (i.e. in Germany), and he describes the noises which they make in the streets by striking their swords on the ground with great clamour on their way home at night, so that they may be recognised by each other, and fall into quarrels, or trip up the watchman and others by ropes stretched across the streets. Having arrived at this low depth of jubilation, one naturally expects to find a moral; the author does not, however, reach that point, he only says, in the space of three or four lines, that all he has described ought to be seen to. Indeed, the only moral precept is the chronogram on the title-page.

MARIA VIRGO SOLIS.

ABOOK of 'Emblems' in the British Museum (press-mark 11409. g. 11), 4°, pp. 140. The title-page is as follows:—

G

Mystica sub SOLIS imagine
Emblematicè expressa.—etc.

(by)—P. F. Joanne de Leenheer, ordinis Eremitarum Sancti Patris Augustini religioso.—Brussels, 1681.

There is a nicely engraved frontispiece, having at the bottom the Virgin surrounded by cherubs in the air, holding shields, on which acrostic lines are engraved, commencing with the letters of the name

MARIA. There are throughout the book numerous emblems, accompanied by texts in Latin and Dutch.

The 'Epistola dedicatoria,' to De Villegas, Baron de Hovorst, contains a quintuple acrostic on his name, DEVILLEGAS, and concludes with this chronogram—

DEI GENITRIX, VNICA ÆGROTANTIVM SALVS. = 1680

This is followed by epigram verses addressed to the author and to his book, headed thus, 'Reverendo in Christo patri F. Joanni De Leenheer, Gymnasii Literarii Magni Patris Augustini Bruxellisi Præfecto,

EX VOTO VIRGINI LIBRVM DICANTI. = 1681

Ita accinebat amico, ac suo quondam Magistro F. Philippus Tax, Augustin. Philosophiæ professor.'

Then follow the epigrams and the rest of the book.

A. B. C. POEMS.

A SCARCE book, published at Ghent, without date on the title-page. 'Den nieuwen Spiegel der jongheyd, of te Gulden A, B, C, Voor de Leerzuchtige Jongheyd. Dienende tot stichtige Onderwyzinge, en om in de kleyne Katholyke Scholen gebruykt te worden. In Rym vertoont door den Eerwierden Heer Ferdinandus Loys,' etc. etc. 4°. pp. 124. On pages 4 and 5 there are some verses complimentary to the author, and descriptive of the contents, preceded by this chronogram—

U ZY TOEVVENSCHINOE UYT ZUYVERE EN VVAERE AFFECTIE,
VAN DEN RYM-KONSTIGEN AUTEUR. = 1766

The work consists of poems or verses in the Flemish language on subjects mostly of religious or moral instruction, arranged alphabetically, and printed in various kinds of type, and having consequently a singular aspect. The above chronogram is probably the date of the original authorship of the work. On the colophon there is the official approbation of the work, dated 9th April 1772, and another approbation of the present reprint of the same, subscribed thus—

Reprimi potest.

THEATRUM STULTORUM.

A BOOK entitled 'THEATRUM STULTORUM joco-serium, sive Mundus fatuus emblematicè expressus per R. P. Joannem de Leenheer, Augustinianum Bruxellensem.' Brussels, 1669. (British Museum, press-mark 11409. e.—2.) The contents are principally maxims on the subject of Folly, followed by verses in the Latin and Flemish languages, commencing with an address, 'Ad Libellum, Lectoremque Benevolum,' which, at page 12, concludes thus, giving the date of the book—

DANIEL SCHWENTER.

A VERY thick 4° volume, all in German, full of curious matters in natural and experimental philosophy, and illustrated by many rough woodcuts of machines and apparatus; but it is very badly printed. The title is, 'DELICIÆ PHYSICO MATHEMATICA.' By Daniel Schwenter. 3 volumes bound in one. Nuremberg, 1651. (British Museum, press-mark 716. f. 3. Another copy, 529. d. 3.—4.) It is understood that this author's name is a pseudonym for Janus Hercules de Sunde. It is not explained why it was adopted by him. The present work is a collection of his papers published by his family after his death.

At page 70 of one of the divisions of the work, are these chronograms of the years 1652 and 1653. They seem not to have any particular application, at least none is assigned to them—

FREDERICK-AUGUSTUS OF POLAND.

TWO very thick folio volumes (British Museum, press-mark 836. m. 8. 9.), entitled, 'SWADA POLSKA . . . albo miscellanea,' relating to the history of Poland. They consist of several sections in the Latin and Polish languages, each with a separate pagination, a promising ground in which to hunt for chronograms; it contains a great many inscriptions and epitaphs of kings and other persons, but otherwise disappointing. The only chronogram I could find is at the conclusion of a panegyric on Frederick-Augustus I, son of John-George, Elector of Saxony, King of Poland, by Andrew Stanislas Buchowski, Professor at the University of Cracow, 15th September 1697.

Vive diu regnumque bea melioribus annis.

TVMQVE THRONO FELIX SIS REX AVGVSTE SECVNDE. = 1697
i.e. Live long and bless the kingdom with happier times, and then fortunately mayest thou be happy on the throne, O king. He was not more fortunate than some of his predecessors: troublesome times followed; he undertook wars to recover for Poland its lost territory, and indulged in dreams of conquest and the establishment of a great empire. The history of that unhappy country tells of disappointment and disaster instead. He was elected king of Poland in 1697, deprived of his crown in 1704. His successor, Stanislas I., was not more prosperous. He was forced to retire in 1709, when Frederick Augustus was again elected, who was succeeded in 1733 by his son, Frederick Augustus II.

FUNERAL ELEGIES.

A VOLUME of tracts marked, 'Orationes funebres et epicedia illustria' (British Museum, press-mark 12301. dd. 6.), 4°. Tract 2 contains an elegy on Doctor Jacobus Godefridus, a clergyman at Brunswick, who died 12 Calends of April 1587, concluding thus—
PRÆCO FIDELIS OBIT CHRISTI HEI GOTTFRIDVS, VT ALTVS } = 1587
LANIGERI PECORIS CYNTHIVS ASTRA QVATIT.

Tract 3, printed at Tübingen in 1584, is a funeral oration on Caspar Wildius, a man of renown in Würtemberg, etc., by Georgius Lieblerus. The last page, 21, concludes with this distich, containing the place, year, month, and day of his death—

SEXTA DIES FEBRVI FVLGEBAT IN AXE CORVSCO,
IN TVBIA EXtINctVS VVILDIVS VRBE IACET. } = 1584

And this acrostic epitaph on him—

The capital letters read thus—

Tract 6. Elegies on the death of Lewis Count Palatine and Duke of Bavaria, printed at Heidelberg, 1583. These chronograms occur, made by Joannes Lundorpius—

ISTE PATER PATRIÆ PRINCEPS OBIIT LVDOVICVS,

Tract No. 7, an elegy on Prince Fridericus Mauritius of Anhalt, gives two chronograms of the date of the tract, one at the foot of the title-page, the other on the colophon. Printed at Soteropolis, Anno—

SORS PRINCIPIS IN MANV PRÆPOTENTIS DEI EST. = 1611

SORS HODIE MIHI; CRAS VENIET TIBI. = 1611

Tract No. 15, of elegies on a renowned official person of Ratisbon, contains this date of his death—

EHEV IAM NOBIS LETHO SVRREPTVS ACERBO
DEFENSORQVE POTENS EXIIT ORBE PATER! } = 1684

A tract, No. 9, in a volume, British Museum, press-mark 12301. dd. 7, an oration, etc., at the funeral of Johannes Rodolphus Westenius, followed by 'Epicedia,' where the following appears at page 80—

Lectissimo conjugum pari.

 LVXIT ET EXTINCTOS HEBDOMAS VNA SIBI = 1684
 Scilicet unanimes qui tot vixistis in annos
 Vultis et aeternâ pace, simulque frui.

The first line gives the year of their marriage on the same day, the second that of their death in the same week.

This tract is one in a series of eight volumes, the above is in volume vii. Elsewhere I have noticed vol. vi. All the other volumes are devoid of chronograms.

BOHEMIAN ARTISTS.

EXTRACTS from a dictionary of Bohemian artists, 'Allegemeines historisches Künstler-Lexicon für Böhmen, etc.' By G. J. Dlabacz. Prag, 1815. 3 parts. 4°. (British Museum, press-mark 2033. g.) The following chronograms are gathered from the closely printed pages, where they are likely to be overlooked unless the search for them is carefully made.

Anton Birkhart, sculptor, 1677-1748. On a portrait by him of St. Paul—

Jacob Codicillus belonged to the University of Prague, and followed the art of music and dramatic performance. His epitaph in Latin verse concluded thus, giving the date of his death, on the day of St. Maurice, the 22d September 1576—

Benedict Hajek had some occupation at the monastery of Hohenfurt. He is said to have kept a sort of scrap-book in which he wrote things worth preserving. This chronogram was among them, whatever it may have referred to—

Johann Jacob Krumpfer was a noted bell-founder at Breslau. He put up a bell at the Johanneskirche with this inscription—

Meister Johann Makal was a bell-founder at Raknezan, in Bohemia. He put up a bell at the church there, as the inscription states, in the place of one destroyed by fire in 1589, in the reign of the Emperor Rudolph II., 'quod sequentes versus demonstrant,' which seem to have been part of the inscription on the bell (but that is doubtful).

QVO PESTIS PATRIIS CESSIT ACERBA FOCIS.

Johann Rudolf Sporck is mentioned at p. 427 ante, as having been an artist and author of a very remarkable chronogrammatic work. A list of his artistic works is given by Dlabacz in the biographical Lexicon now being quoted; No. 21, a portrait by him of Mathias Leineck, was thus inscribed—

MO DO CR CO PAX LIBET. = 1761
ISTA LEX PACE CANTATA DEO MANET. = 1761
MO DO HO C PERFECTO EX LITTERA PATET. = 1761

Another work by him was thus inscribed—

EFFIGIES TIBI EXHIBETVR. = 1732

THE foundation-stone of a castle in the province of Hesse was thus inscribed, according to the vol. for 1851 of 'Archiv für Hessische Gescheiten,' Darmstadt, p. 411—

DIE VICTORINI QVI ERAT

i.e. On the day of Saint Victorinus, which was the 25th of the month February, old style.

Observe that the words of the second line are abbreviated to suit the year date. There were two saints Victorinus; one flourished in the year 290, and died a martyr probably in 304, his day is 2d November; the other and his six companions, citizens of Corinth, were all put to death with horrible cruelties, according to the adopted traditions, on 25th February, A.D. 284.

In another similar volume (Diss. 195.), 'Historia vitæ Georgii Spalatini,' a theologian of Saxony, by Christian Schlegel: Jena, 1693, with portrait. At page 177 is the following notice of his death—Josephus à Pinu ejus emortualem hoc inclusit eteosticho.

In the library of the Rev. Walter Begley, 'Melissi Schediasmatum reliquiæ.' (Extemporaneous poems? by Melissus.) The introductory verses are signed in a singular printed flourish making the author's name. Chronogram verses occur at page 23 printed in plain letters, the date letters not in any way to be distinguished from others; the verses are addressed to the Venetians on their victory over the Turks at Lepanto, on 7th October 1571. (Here, on the next page, printed as an ordinary chronogram)—

FLVCTIVAGI TVRCAS VENETI STRAVERE DVELLO ; } = 1571

In volume 2, pp. 353, 359, of 'Der Nürnbergischen Muntz-Belustigung,' by G. A. Will, 1766, it is related that the Franciscan monastery at Nuremberg was burnt more than once, and on one occasion, in 1671, the fire was caused by some carelessness in the use of tobacco ; it is likely enough to have been the immediate or approximate cause of the catastrophe thus elegantly alluded to—

I met with a book at Frankfurt thus dated—
 O PII IN TOTO ORBE, DATE SVA CÆSARI ET } = 1620

A tract contains the date in the leading words of the title-page, thus—

 A disputation at the University of Leipzig between Johannes Prætorius and Franciscus Romanus Bruno. There are three copies in the British Museum, catalogued under 'Bruno, F. R.,' and dated 1672 and 1702.

A small tract in the British Museum Library (press-mark 12305. aaa. 33), 16°, pp. 32, contains 12 engraved emblems, with descriptions in German, relating to the conclusion of the Thirty Years' War. It bears no date besides the chronograms on the title and concluding pages. The title is, 'Meditationes emblematicæ de restauratâ pace Germaniæ cum brevi explicatione. Sinnbilder von dem widergebrachten Teutschen Frieden kürtslich erklärt durch Johann Vogel. Anno

CVM DIXERINT ; PAX NON ERIT PAX, PAX ERIT.' = 1649
 And on the last page, Nürnberg im Jahr
 VVANN SIE ETVVAN SAGEN ; ES KAN NVN NICHT } = 1649
 SEYN, VVIRD FRIED VVERDEN.

The words of this chronogram seem to have been suggested by passages in the Bible at Ezekiel xiii. 10, Jeremiah vi. 14, and viii. 11.

The following is a curious finish to a book—
Pretium Chronographicum.

EMITE PVBLICÈ DVOBVS STVFERIS = 1673

It occurs in a work in the Royal Library at Brussels, by Franciscus Godinus, entitled—

'CARA ALEXANDRI MAGNI XENIA = 1673
Sive

chronodistichon in strenam Reverendi Domini D. Alexandri Sweveri . . . per Franciscum Godinum Ludimagistrum Bruxellensem, anno MDCLXXIII.' There are a few chronograms in the body of the work, which is a collection of short Latin poems, but nothing noteworthy.

The following extract was sent to me by Mr. G. Parker of the Bodleian Library, from a publication, 'Qu etoit qu'un Duc de Brabant.' A la Haye, 1790. Page 14. Le 18 Juin 1789 voici le chronograph qui paroît a ce sujet—

DECIMA OCTAVA JUNII SENATUS EXPULSUS. = 1789
TIRANNO REPULSO DUCE SEXTO MENSE REVIVISCIT SENATUS. = 1789

It is mentioned in a German work, among some otherwise unimportant remarks on chronograms, that in the author's university (Altdorf?), there is a manuscript of the Vulgate having the following hexameter verse, 'which gives the date when the ms. was finished and collated.' It is not written as a chronogram, nor is it certain that it was intended for one, but by writing it as such the date 1210 is clearly given—

FINITO LIBRO REDDATVR GLORIA CHRISTO. = 1210

If this was written contemporaneously with that date, it is the earliest Latin chronogram that I am acquainted with. That, however, is questionable.

In the same work I find a curious form of chronogram, where the first line of a distich on a marriage gives a certain number, from which the product of the second line must be subtracted to find the intended date, 1606—

SEPTIMA LVX IANI RADIOS DISPERGIT IN ORBEM = 3072
CVM NECTIT SPONSVS COPVLA SANCTA PROBOS. = 1466

1606

This is the only example I have found of this sort of chronogram.

SOME MORE FLEMISH BISHOPS AND CHURCH EVENTS.

THE earlier pages, 88 to 103, of the present volume are devoted to the notice of some of the Flemish bishops. Since those pages were printed, I have obtained from a German bookseller seven other rare tracts on the same subject. In this chapter I offer a description of them, with copious extracts from their chronograms.

The first tract is a congratulation to Henry Gabriel van Gameren, sixteenth bishop of Antwerp, on his arrival there. No date is mentioned. It bears this title—'Illustrissimo ac reverendissimo domino D. Henrico Gabrieli van Gameren xvi. Antverpiensium episcopo in solemnibus ad cathedram suam adventu, dramaticè aggratulatur Gymnasium Augustino-Antverpiense.' A portrait of him faces the title-page;<sup>1</sup> I give the accompanying facsimile copy of it, as an example of the application of a chronogrammatic inscription in hexameter and pentameter verse, which reads as follows—

|   |          |
|---|----------|
| VIR VIRTUTE DEI,* FULGENS VIRTUTIS IMAGO,     | } = 1766 |
| HENRICUS PRÆSUL VIVUS IN EFFIGIE.             |          |

| QUO TUTORE DEI GREX SINE LABE VIGET.          |          |
| PASCIT OVES CHRISTI, VERBIS QUI BIBLIA SACRIS | } = 1766 |
| EXPLICAT: UT LUX, SIC FORMA, SALUSQUE GREGIS. |          |

* GABRIEL: Vir Dei.

<sup>1</sup> The chronogram date of this portrait leads to the inference that it was engraved seven years after the event commemorated in the tract. Observe the explanation of Gabriel = Vir Dei, the leading words of the verses; and the recurring play on the first word.

A fine engraving of his armorial shield, surmounted by a cardinal's hat with ten tassels, is on the back of the title-page, and dated 1759.

The address to him in heroic metre is spoken by the pastoral characters Menalcas, Alexis, Coridon, and Tityrus (supposed members of the Gymnasium), commencing thus—

ILLUSTRISSIMO PRÆSULI
SUBSEQUENTIA DETULIT
JUVENTUS AUGUSTINIANA. } = 1759

CARMINIS ELUCIDATIO. = 1759

The verses and the address then follow. At page 6 the metre changes, and the verses are thus introduced—

CANTILENA
NEO-ANTISTITEM ADESSE, NUNCIAT. } = 1759

The pastoral characters then resume their address in heroic verse.

At page 16 the metre again changes, and the verses are thus introduced, 'Illustrissimo . . . Henrico Gabrieli van Gameren,

FIDELI DOCTORI, FACUNDO PROFESSORI,
Asclepiadæo carmine accinit
Tityrus.' = 1759

The verses conclude with this couplet—

DOCTRINA EXCELLENS LAUDATUR UT ALTER AQUINAS
ESTQUE SACRO PRÆSUL TULLIUS ELOQUIO. } = 1759

At page 18 the sapphic metre is adopted in some verses, thus introduced, 'Illustrissimo . . . Henrico Gabrieli van Gameren,

FIDELI COLLEGIORUM PRÆPOSITO
Versu Sapphico congaudet
Alexis.' = 1759

The verses conclude with this couplet—

QUI REXIT NUPER JUSTEQUE, PIÆQUE PALÆSTRAS,
VIRTUTE ÆQUALI DIRIGET ILLE GREGEM. } = 1759

At page 20 the metre again changes, and the verses are thus introduced, 'Illustrissimo . . . Henrico Gabrieli van Gameren,

FIDELI RECTORI, BONORUM PROTECTORI
Ode Horatianâ applaudit
Coridon.' = 1759

The verses conclude with this couplet—

QUI TULIT A GRUDIA PUGNAS, IRASQUE JUVENTA,
HIC ORIS POTERIT VI REMOVERE LUPOS. } = 1759

At page 22 the metre changes, and verses of an unusual Leonine kind are thus introduced, 'Illustrissimo . . . Henrico Gabrieli van Gameren,

FIDELISSIMO NUNC EPISCOPO
inuitato versus leonini genere aggratulatur
Menalcas.' = 1759

The verses conclude with this couplet—

VIVE DIU FELIX; HIC SÆCULA PLURA GUBERNAS,
AC FIDEI IN COELIS SUSCIPE SERTA TUÆ. } = 1759

At page 24 the tract is brought to a conclusion in heroic verse, thus introduced, by the genius of the college, and ended by a separate couplet—

FIDELI PRÆSULI
AC
STUDIOSO REIPUBLICÆ LITERARIÆ FAUTORI
PLURES GRATIAS EXSOLVIT
COLLEGII GENIUS. } = 1759

EXILES, PRÆSUL, DIGNANTER SUSCIPE VERSUS,
QUI TIBI PERPETUI PIGNUS AMORIS ERUNT. } = 1759

THE second tract is a congratulation to the same Bishop Gameren, by the College of the Jesuits at Antwerp. The title-page is in the same words nearly as the former one, and is dated 1759. On the back thereof the armorial shield and cardinal's hat are represented by a different engraving. The address to him in heroic metre is thus introduced—

HENRICO
EPISCOPO CONSECRATO
ACCLAMANS
SOCIETAS JESU. } = 1759

Sixteen pages of verse then follow, at the conclusion of which there are six engravings of pastoral emblems in frames of bold design. They are preceded by an engraved title, showing the bishop's armorial shield, and his crest a faithful dog, with a crown on his head, the motto FIDELITAS CORONATUR, and these chronograms—

GAMERANA FIDELITAS
POETICE ILLUSTRATA. } = 1759
CANIT HUNC INSIGNE FIDELEM. = 1759

Each emblem occupies a page, the headlines of which are in chronogram, intended to be read consecutively along as referring to the bishop. At the same time they bear some allusion to the emblem which follows. The absence of the emblems from my pages deprives the chronogrammatic verses and their mottoes of the somewhat needful explanations which they afford. (Each page consists of the headline, the emblem, the motto, and the verses, in regular order and in chronogram; the dog personifies the bishop.)

The tract concludes with an epitome of an 'Applausus convivalis,' a kind of emblematical scenic accompaniment recited by certain pastoral characters personated by members of the college, whose names are given. There are no more chronograms.

THE third tract consists of 28 pages, and describes a public festival at Antwerp, on the arrival, on 9th September 1776, of Jacobus Thomas Josephus Wellens, the seventeenth bishop of that see, when the streets were decorated with structures, emblems, and inscriptions, and a grand procession took place. The whole is described in the Flemish language, and the inscriptions are partly in that language and partly in Latin, a few being also in French. They were mostly in chronogram, 320 of them being so. Although so numerous, they are not generally interesting or remarkable. A few extracts will suffice to represent this multitudinous assemblage. The title-page is,— 'Verzamelinge der besonderste chronica, inscriptien, zinnebeelden, veerssen en andere, tot Antwerpen gezien den 9 van September en de volgende dagen van't Jaer 1776, ter gelegentheyd van den plegtigen intréde van syne doorlugtigste hoogweirdigheyd myn-heere Jacobus Thomas Josephus Wellens xvii. bisschop van Antwerpen.' These inscriptions were seen at various places in the streets (the letter W counts 10, and Y=2).

Great sameness prevails throughout the chronogrammatic inscriptions; the public joy on the occasion, the praise of the bishop, and of his qualifications and learning, are their constant theme. The tract is roughly but accurately printed.

THE fourth tract relates to Carolus de Spinosa, on his inauguration in 1728 as the twelfth Bishop of Antwerp; he is mentioned at page 96 ante, and should be more correctly described there as Suffragan in the Archbishopric of Mechlin. This tract consists of 28 pages 4°, and bears this title:—'Illustrissimo ac reverendissimo domino D. Carolo de Spinosa ordinis FF. Minorum Capucinatorum ex Tricalensium, nunc duodecimo Antverpiensium episcopo, cum primum in cathedram suam solemniter induceretur, applaudebat Gymnasium Literarium S. P. Augustini Antverpiæ. Anno MDCCXXVIII. It commences with a laudatory poem, which at p. 6 concludes with 'Ode Musica' in four stanzas, and—

Tripudium chronicon

FAUSTUS ADES PRÆSUL, CANIMUS } = 1728
TIBI GRATA LUBENTER.

At page 11 a second part commences, bearing this title, 'Acclamatio emblematica alludens ad arma gentilitia illustrissimi . . . D. Caroli de Spinosa, duodecimi Antverpiensium episcopi.' The frontispiece to the tract is a finely engraved representation of his armorial shield, surmounted by a cardinal's hat with ten tassels; the motto is, 'ARCE LUPOS.' The armorial devices are the same as those described at p. 96 ante, but the engraving is different; they consist of thorn trees ('spinosa'), lilies, and wolves.

A series of twelve engraved emblems commences at page 12, each with Latin epigrammatic verses and a chronogram having some figurative allusion to the armorial devices; a text from the Vulgate Bible precedes each, thus—

Emblema I. Liliū inter spinas. Canticles ii. 2. The engraving is a lily growing among thorns—

TUTIUS INDE SALUS CUM RES SPINOSA RESULTAT. = 1728

Emblema II. Ex omnibus floribus orbis elegisti. Liliū unum. 4 Esdras v. 24. The engraving represents a garden in which lilies are conspicuous, the bees are seen to forsake other flowers and choose them. The chronogram is allusive to the Emperor Charles VI. and the bishop Charles—

PRÆ CÆTERIS CÆLO, ET AUGUSTISSIMO } = 1728
CAROLO SEXTO PLACET CAROLUS.

Emblema III. Unguebant oleo multos ægros, et sanabant. Mark vi. 13. The engraving represents an angel administering medicine composed of lily to a person who is said to be suffering from the 'stone'; this allusion to the bishop is obscurely figurative—

CAROLUS AMORIS OLEO INDURATIS AUFERET NOXAS. = 1728

Emblema IV. Venenum aspidum insanabile. Deut. xxxii. 33. The engraving represents two young angels preparing a remedy against snake poison, from lilies—

PECCATI VENENUM DE SPINOSA EXTINGUET. = 1728

Emblema V. Introibunt in speluncas petrarum. Isaiah ii. 18. The engraving represents sheep in safe refuge on the sacred Mount Olympus, against the surrounding wolves—

DENTE NOCERE OVIBUS NON VALET } = 1728
LUPUS, PRÆSIDE DE SPINOSA.

Emblema VI. Lupus ad vesperam vastavit eos. Jeremiah v. 6. The engraving represents wolves prowling about for their prey at night—

HÆRETICORUM LATEBRAS. } = 1728

Emblema VII. Intrabunt lupi rapaces, non parcentes gregi, . . . propter quod vigilate. Acts xx. 29, 31. The engraving represents the watchful shepherd and his flock—

NE LETHALE DOGMA EXURGAT,
VIGILABIT PRÆSUL. } = 1728

Emblema VIII. Festinavit in dolo pes meus. Job xxxi. 5. The engraving represents huntsmen tracking the footsteps of the wolves in the snow—

UT NIX PRODIT LUPOS, ITA CAROLI
INTEGRITAS PRODET INFIDOS. } = 1728

Emblema IX. Bonus pastor animam suam dat pro ovibus suis. John x. 14, 15. The engraving represents the shepherd attacking a wolf which had endangered his flock—

PRO OVIBUS VITAM DABIT CAROLUS PRÆSUL. = 1728

Emblema X. Tollebat arietem de medio gregis . . . eruebamque de ore eorum. 1 Kings xvii. 34. The engraving represents the shepherd seizing a wolf and rescuing from his grasp a lamb taken from the flock—

FIDUS AB ORE LUPI SERVABIT CAROLUS AGNUM. = 1728

Emblema XI. Salvum fecit a pusillanimitate spiritûs, et tempestate. Psalm liv. 9. The engraving represents a ship safe from the concealed dangers of the sea, guided by the Pole-star, that star being typical of the bishop—

CAROLUS PRÆSUL FIDE AMBIGUO SUBVENIET. = 1728

Emblema XII. Orietur in tenebris lux tua. Isaiah lviii. 10. The engraving represents the ship approaching the wished-for port at night, under the same guidance—

AD PORTUM CAROLUS LUX ERIT IN TENEBRIS. = 1728

Then follows an anagrammatic gratulation to the bishop. It consists of a series of anagrams on his name, DE SPINOSA, etc., which stand at the head respectively of a series of emblematical verses, each of which is concluded by an allusive chronogram thus (it is needless to transcribe the verses, etc.)—

VOLUNTARIA PAUPERTAS DITAVIT CAROLUM. = 1728

A finishing poem concludes with this 'Tripudium'—

 AUGUSTINIANO ANTISTES.

THE fifth tract in my possession consists of an address to Dominic de Gentis, the fifteenth bishop of Antwerp, on his inauguration in 1749, 4°, pp. 20. It bears this title, 'Illustrissimo ac reverendissimo Domino D. Dominico de Gentis ex sacro prædicatorum ordine decimo quinto Antverpiensium episcopo, cum primùm in cathedram suam solenniter introduceretur, applaudebat Gymnasium literarium, M. P. Augustini Antverpiense, MDCCXLIX.' A prose address concludes at page 6 with this chronogram—

DOMINICO GENTIS
 ANTISTITI EXOPTATO
 PRECATUR
 AUGUSTINIANA JUVENTUS. } = 1749

Then follows a poetical lament on the death of the preceding bishop Herzelius (William de Herzelles), and praising the appointment of the new bishop, with 'Musica,' and 'Rhythmus'; followed by a poetical 'Apostrophe' to the Empress Maria Theresia, sung by the Virgilian characters Tityrus, Corydon, Melibceus, Alexis, and Amyntas, which is brought to a conclusion by this 'chronicon'—

IMPERATRIX PACIFICA, DUX BENIGNA;
 PROSPEXIT IN GENTIS GENTI SUÆ. } = 1749

An apostrophe to the then reigning pope, Benedict xiv., next follows, concluding with this 'chronicon'—

BENEDICTUS ROMANUS PONTIFEX
 AUSTRIACIS VOTIS, UTPOTE SIBI GRATIS,
 ANNUIT. } = 1749

The applause is continued in similar form of 'musica,' and recited by Amyntas and his companions, addressed to the new bishop, concluding at page 19 with this 'chronicon' (the last words in the tract)—

DOMINICUS GENTIS NOVUS
 EPISCOPUS ANTVERPIENSIS SUI S
 SINE SPINA ET UNGUE. } = 1749

THE sixth tract, consisting of 16 pages 4°, is a gratulation on the inauguration of Macarius Simeomo, abbot of St. Michael's Church at Antwerp in 1663. The title is, 'Fausta gratulatio in solemnè inauguratione Reverendi . . . Macarii Simeomo s. t. l. Abbatis celebererrimæ ecclesiæ sancti Michaelis Antverpiæ sacri et canonici ordinis Præmonstratensis viii. Aprilis MDCLXIII. Per Fratres Novitios predictæ ecclesiæ.' The subject is expressed in Latin verse of varied metre, commencing thus—<sup>1</sup> The letters of these words are the initial letters of the words which compose the four curiously arranged hexameters which next follow.

<sup>2</sup> The abbot was probably a Frenchman; he is called here 'inclyte Galle;' the word 'gallus,' a cock, alludes to his watchfulness, and explains the words 'evigilare memento' in the fourth line. There are many similar allusions throughout the poetry, and lower down in the chronogram.

THE seventh tract, consisting of 48 pages 4°, describes a jubilee held at the church of St. Saviour at Antwerp, in honour of thirty-six saints whose relics are preserved there. The title is, 'Verkondinge van het hondert-jaerig jubilé aengaende de lofweerdige instelling van 't vermaert Broederschap der xxxvi uytmuntende Heyligen, welckers geäpprobeerde reliquien rusten, en geëert worden in de kerke der abdye van S. Salvator, tot Antwerpen.' No date is mentioned, but the chronograms give 4th August 1771. The narrative is in the Flemish language. The chronograms, 58 in number, are all in Latin; they were inscribed among the statues and other decorations at and in the church. There were numerous other inscriptions in Latin verse, which are translated into Flemish verse.

SOME RECENT CHRONOGRAMS IN ENGLAND.

THE art of chronogram-making has recently been practised in England, as the following good examples will testify. This is encouraging; and we are led to hope that this method of expressing dates will become as popular in our time as it was in time past, and be used in some of the ways which are brought into notice by my two volumes.

My friend, Mr. Wilshere, of the Frythe, near Welwyn, sends the following, which have been lately made and used by him:—<sup>1</sup>

Treble chronogram for a summer-house built for five-o'clock tea in 1883—

i.e. O Lord, rebuke us not in Thine indignation, but spare Thou us sinners, and pardon us.

The following were sent to me by the Rev. Ernest Geldart, who made and used them at his church of Little Braxted, in Essex:—

On the chancel gate (adapted from the Vulgate)—

OCCVPET SALVS OVILIS MVROS

} = 1884

Versified translation given to the school children for their edification—

Here the young ones of the fold,
 Christ, for Thee the Lord of grace,
 Having none of this world's gold,
 Gathered stones to build a place.
 Rock of Ages, grant that they
 Firm on Thee may stand for aye.

The writer of the foregoing five chronograms wrote also this one on the tower of Stanford-le-Hope church, Essex, which had fallen down and cracked the bells. The tower was rebuilt in 1883, and inscribed thus—

ECCE TVRRIS OLIM STRATA,
 DEO, RVRSVS EXORNATA,
 RESONANTI VOCE GRATA.

} = 1883

It was thought desirable that the understanding of the parishioners of this almost isolated parish should be helped by a translation and a legible date. The following was prepared by the writer of the chronogram, and inscribed on another side of the tower—

This tower once down, to God again
 Rebuilt, rings with pleasing strain.
 1883.

Another notice of the chronogram, with a translation, is given at page 3 of this volume.

A clergyman wrote some tracts on the much controverted question of 'marriage with a deceased wife's sister.' The profits accruing to him therefrom were expended on the building of a fernery; whereupon Mr. Geldart, the author of the foregoing chronograms, wrote this one to be inscribed on his friend's structure—

O SOROR
 VIDUI HODIE, CONJUGISVE HERI
 EXPUGNATA STYLOQUE INTERFECTA
 REVIVESCENS EPHIALTES CLERI
 HERBIS EXORNA FILICIBUSQUE TECTA
 O SOROR.

} = 1884

i.e. O Sister! Whether of the husband yesterday, or of the widower to-day (sister still), banished and killed indeed so far as pen could do it; —since you have cropped up again to be a bugbear to the clergy, at least be useful, and ornament a cleric's home with plants and ferns.

Another writer, also a friend of the 'clergyman,' wrote a chronogram to be placed on the solid wall of the structure, as follows—

MY LATE VVIFE'S SISTER BVILT THIS VVALL

BVT I IN TRVTH

NEVER VVED ANY VVIFE AT ALL,

NOR VVONT FORSOOTH,

SAITH J. E. V.

} = 1884

It must be explained that the 'clergyman' mentioned, the writer of the tracts, the builder of the fernery (whose initials are J. E. V.), has never been married; hence the paradoxical treatment of the subject.

NOTES ON BOOKS NOT ACCESSIBLE.

IN the pursuit of this varied subject, which is now drawing towards its close, I have become acquainted with the titles of books more or less abounding with chronograms, but which I have been unable to find in any library, either at home or abroad, whereto I have had access. It is fit, however, that even this limited knowledge of them should not be lost; the opportunity may hereafter occur to some one interested in the research for placing on record some further particulars concerning them. On referring to page 557 of Chronograms, at the conclusion of the chapter of bibliography, there will be seen an extensive reference to the existence of such books; a very few of them have since come to light, but practically it is a list of books still inaccessible; and what is there mentioned may be taken as an appendix to what here follows.

Mr. Henry Stevens, F.S.A., who has devoted particular attention to books concerning America, has the following notice of a rare little book of chronograms, in one of the catalogues issued by him, entitled, 'Bibliotheca Geographica et Historica, a catalogue of nine days' sale at Puttick's. November 1872.' (British Museum, press-mark, 11905. g. 4.) It is interleaved with (reduced size) photographs of very many of the title-pages. We find at page 321, 'No. 2801. Valentinus (Bishop) a Christi nato Decimi septimi Symbola Eteologica, ex Veteri et Novo Sacrorum Bibliorum Testamento collecta. 8°. Joh. Gorman, Wittebergæ, 1608.—A rare little book of chronograms. An exceedingly curious volume, filled with ingenious and pious trifling. There is collected under every year for 100 years, from 1600 to 1700, a large number of texts from Scripture, with the references to chapter and verse so printed that the Roman numerals will correctly express the given year. For instance, under the given year 1620 there are 49 texts to express that year, for example—

DEVs TVVvS EST TECVM. 2 Sam. xiv. 17. = 1620
 REX SALOMON BENEDICTVS. = 1666

Drop the letter M=1000, and print the word SALOON, you have 666, "the number of the beast," out of the same text, with less trifling, perhaps, than it took Macaulay to derive the same sacred number from the House of Commons, by counting the members and eight officers. No doubt this industrious trifling kept the Bishop out of the mischief of idleness, a disease worse than chronogrammatizing.

As I am unable to meet with this book in the British Museum or elsewhere, I preserve what notice I can of it by the foregoing amusing extract. Mr. Stevens says that about ten years ago he had at Boston, in the United States, a collection of Mexican books, many of which, perhaps 200, contained chronograms on title-pages or otherwise, also squares, crosses, labyrinths, and other fanciful arrangements of words. The whole of those books were sold in America.

In another catalogue prepared by Mr. Stevens, 'Bibliotheca historica, 1870,' I find the notice of another book which must be a great curiosity. 'Conceptio Immaculata Deiparæ Virginis' (3000 numerical anagrams on the plan of the alphabet caballa), 'à Francisco de Sancto Joanne, et Bernedo Presbytero Hispano Capellano Capellæ Paulinæ ubi colitur S.S. Imago B. Mariæ Virginis a S. Luca depincta in Sacro Sancta Basilica Liberiana S. Mariæ Majoris Romæ. Roma, 1686.' (The Basilica of S. Maria Maggiore at Rome is called also the Liberian Basilica.) I am unable to obtain any further knowledge of this work, which is in some way connected with chronograms.

In a foreign bookseller's catalogue, price 10 francs, 'Applausus et vota civitatis Bruxellensis, in adventu Ser. Princ. Lotharingæ Caroli Belgii gubernatoris, etc. Bruxelles. A de Vos. 1748. 4°. Tres bel exempl. de cette pièce rare, remplie de chronogrammes, sur l'arrivée du prince Charles de Lorraine à Bruxelles.' I was unable to obtain it.

The four following works have been noticed in book catalogues and elsewhere—

1. 'Batavia triumphata: anno quo summus arbiter rerum'
 DEPOSVIT POTENTES DE SEDE ET EXALTAVIT FRANCOS. = 1672

2. 'Ostendana Francorum clades, quâ principe Joanne Austriaco faciente per tredecim menses,
 CROMVELIO IRATO ET DERISO, = 1658
 MAZARINO à FLANDRIS ILLVSO, = 1658

naves, pecuniam, militem, honorem et Flandriæ spem Anglis conjuncti amiserunt Franci.' 8°.

3. 'Chronica chronographica ab anno 1600.' Pp. vi, 97. Viennæ, 1665. 4°. This is a history of events from 1600 to 1665 in prose, all chronograms, beginning—

|                          |   |        |
|--------------------------|---|--------|
| 1600                     |   |        |
| MoDo CERTE               | = | 1600   |
| CARA ADERANT TEMPORA     | = | 1600   |
| FERNANDVs II., EX STIRIA | } | = 1600 |
| IVNGITVR MARIE FILIE     |   |        |
| EX BAVARIA, etc.         |   |        |

4. 'Livre des Prestres.' A tract of eleven leaves, small 4°. This meaningless sentence occurs to give a date (it is in capital letters of uniform size, but here printed as a chronogram)—

RIXO CECI CVNICVLVM. = 1478

This is only noticeable as being somewhat like a supposed chronogram C. CVCVLVM VIXI=1382, mentioned at p. 12 of Chronograms.

In the great Library at Dresden was seen by my friend the Rev. W. Begley, a very curious thin quarto pamphlet, entirely in chronogram. The title-page is as follows—

|   |   |      |
|---|---|------|
| CVM DEO                                   | = | 1605 |
| PIÆ MEDITATIONIS ETEOSTICHA               | = | 1605 |
| PER DISPERSAS IN BIBLIIS GNOMAS ELABORATA | = | 1605 |
| AD VOTA COMPETENTER APPARATA              | = | 1605 |
| PRO MVNDO LABORANTE ET ANNO LABANTE       | = | 1605 |
| 1605                                      |   |      |
| BRESLÆ SILESIE EMPORIO IN RIPA ODERÆ      | = | 1605 |
| DE PRELO ET LABORE BAVMANNO               | = | 1605 |
| ANNO CHRISTI DOMINI NOSTRI.               | = | 1605 |
| HODIE MIHI CRAS TIBI.                     | = | 1605 |
| ACH. HEVTE ROTH MORGEN TODT.              | = | 1605 |

Then begins a series of sentences, proverbs, and meditations, chiefly in Biblical language, extending to 167 chronograms in all. Towards the end the name of the author is brought in, and proves to be Jacobus Berelius à Mielowitz. The pamphlet has no indication of place or printer except in the above chronogram.

There are two tracts in the great Dresden Library by Chr. Faustus, both entirely chronogrammatic—

1. 'Durus et Minax Cometæ cauda,' etc. Budissinæ, 1618. 4°.
2. 'Eteosticha votiva.' Budissinæ, 1602. 4°.

In the University Library at Liège there is a modern work, 'Eligia chronodisticha.' L. J. Caris. Leodii, 1846, 8. I have no particulars of its contents; I cannot procure a copy of it. Also the two following—

'Metamorphosis Angelica Mariana in ter mille figuras transformata QVAM BRVGIS EXHIBVIT JVLEVVS DE CÆSAR XI AVGVSTI' = 1711 a remarkable assemblage of anagrams on the 'Ave Maria, etc.,' mentioned in Le Bibliophile Belge, 1845, vol. i. p. 200 (British Museum Library). At p. 145 of the same volume another remarkable work is mentioned, as follows—

'Poemata, chronometra anagrammata, epigrammata, et alia his affinita. In monte Parnasso.' No date or place. 8°. Pp. 292.

By a monk of Ninove, by name Van Halen. Printed, 1784. There are chronograms in Dutch and Latin, many pages long, composed of words avoiding the higher numeral letters, M D C L.

Both of these works are specially mentioned in Chronograms, p. 408. I have never met with either.

Joannes Rudolphus Sporck, the author of a work mentioned at p. 427, ante. It is to be inferred therefrom that he wrote two other chronogrammatic works, about which I can find no particulars. Ibid. p. 428.

Michael Winepaher, the author of the Calendar mentioned at p. 410, ante, is believed also to have written chronogrammatic works for the years 1724 and 1727, and printed at Salzburg (?). I have not been able to find them.

Andreas Streithagen is catalogued as the author of a work entitled 'Chronodisticha' in 1635.

J. B. Waseige wrote 'Leopoldus Austriacus, etc.,' circa 1640, probably a chronogrammatic work.

The author of 'Decas Mariana,' mentioned in Chronograms, p. 441, wrote also 'Decas anagrammatum metrica arte elaboratorum, illustrissimo honori Sereniano sacra. Vetero-Pragæ, 1680'; also 'Decas sacrorum anagrammatum e sacris programmatis utpote sacris hymnis, textibusque sacris, metrico labore concinnatorum. Vetero-Pragæ, 1672.' I have ascertained that a volume in the University Library at Prague contains the three works, with this chronogrammatic title-page, giving the date 1672 six times repeated—

Anagrammata Sacra, metrico labore concinnata, VRBI NEO-PRAGENSI PVLVERE GENEROSI MARTIS INSIGNITER DECORÆ; | A CAROLO IV IMPERATORE FVNDATE ET EXORNATÆ, | VARIIS DOTATÆ ET AVCTÆ IMPERIALIBVS GRATIIS; | VIRIS ERVDITIS, ARMAQVE TRACTARE PERITIS FLORENTI; | FORTITER STANTI ADVERSVS TELA SVECORVM; GENEROSO | IN HOSTILES ACIES ARDORE PERSTANTI NVTANTIBVS IN REGNO PROPE OMNIBVS.

'Vota chronographica quæ sub inauguratione illust' et Rev' D. D. Henrici van Halmale XI Yprensium episcopi . . . offerebat ex voto Daniel Franciscus de Maeyer,'—pp. 11—Antwerp, 1672-4, is the title of a tract containing 240 lines of elegiac verse, each giving in chronogram the date 1672. This is in the Brussels Library.

'Vita Sanctissimi Confessoris et Pontificis Huberti, pp. x, 68. Brussels, 1730-4.' Preface signed P. Willemaers, Pastor in Viera Ducum, contains many rhyming chronograms in Latin, introduced into the text and appropriate to the subject discussed. This is also in the Brussels Library.

'Liber Eteostichorum,' by Joseph à Pinu, is quoted by the epigram and chronogram writer Nicolas Reusner in 1590. The work contains a great many chronograms. I have never met with a copy of it, and search for it in foreign libraries has hitherto been unsuccessful.

HEBREW CHRONOGRAMS.

THIS chapter will comprise the examples of Hebrew chronograms which I have already given in Chronograms, pp. 542-545, incorporated with many additional ones brought to my notice by Dr. Christian D. Ginsburg, LL.D. Without his assistance I could not have undertaken to explain and illustrate in any way this very interesting branch of research. The antiquity of Hebrew chronograms remains undoubted, while the extent of their use has not yet been approximately ascertained. Existing manuscripts in that language carry back the time of their use to an earlier period than I have yet found them in the Latin language; but even then it cannot be said that we have reached their origin. I give one example which makes the date A.D. 1208. Printing by the means of moveable types was known circa 1450. Whatever may be the earliest date of printing in Hebrew types, I am enabled to give examples of chronograms on the titles of Hebrew printed books as early as 1492, and it is probable that they are not the earliest. That method of dating such books is continued down to the present day, and it is unlikely that it will yet go out of favour.

The use of numeral letters by Hebrew writers is not confined to the expression of dates. It runs imperceptibly into a form like acrostics or anagrams, which were supposed to strengthen by a hidden meaning the exposition of passages in the Hebrew Scriptures. It must be remembered that all the letters of that alphabet have a numerical power, and that in a chronogram constructed by them, only certain words of a sentence contain the date (except where the date is contained in one word), and these words or the letters thereof are found to be printed in larger characters to mark the date, while the whole sentence, or the sentiment conveyed by it, is appropriate to the subject, and derives some of its special point from the meaning of the date-words. The difference between Hebrew and Latin chronograms will be obvious. This chapter does not extend to Arabic, Persian, or other chronograms, which are more strictly speaking of Oriental origin.

The value of the Hebrew letters as numerals is as follows:—

|   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |   |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |    |     |     |     |     |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|-----|-----|-----|-----|
| א | ב | ג | ד | ה | ו | ז | ח | ט | י  | כ  | ל  | מ  | נ  | ס  | ע  | פ  | צ  | ק   | ר   | ש   | ת   |
| 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | 10 | 20 | 30 | 40 | 50 | 60 | 70 | 80 | 90 | 100 | 200 | 300 | 400 |

'To understand the dates mentioned, it is necessary to remark that the Israelites reckon from the creation of the world, and that their chronology is about 244 years shorter than ours. Thus, for instance, whilst the year 1882 A.D. is with us 5886 A.M., it is with the Jews 5643 A.M. Moreover, it is to be noted that in Hebrew MSS., as well as in printed books, two modes are adopted of expressing the date. The one is by writing the full numbering: that is, 5643 A.M. = 1882 A.D., which is called the great or full era (פרט נדול); and the other is by omitting the thousands, and leaving them to be understood, as 643, instead of 5643, which is called the short era (פרט קטן), abbreviated (לפ"ק), and which is more generally used for the sake of brevity.'

The reader will find information on Hebrew chronology in the Handy Book quoted at p. 538, ante; also in a work, 'Essays on Indian Antiquities, etc., by the late James Prinsep, edited by Edward Thomas, 2 vols. 1858.' At vol. ii. second part, p. 138, it is observed, 'The Jews date from the Creation, which they consider to have been 3760 years and 3 months before the commencement of our era. Their year is luni-solar, consisting of either 12 or 13 months, and each month of 29 or 30 days. To reduce the Jewish time to ours, subtract 3761, and the remainder will show the year.'

The Hebrew chronograms which follow have been interpreted into their equivalent dates of the Christian era.

To begin with the manuscripts, which were somewhat sparingly dated, the 'Codex Kennicott 89,' which was written by Jacob Ha-Levi, has the subscription in the year התורה, i.e. The Law = A.D. 1208. So again the 'Codex De Rossi, 826,' is dated הנואל לעולם, i.e. The Redeemer for ever = A.D. 1280.

The copy of the Pentateuch, by R. Meier, which is bound up with the celebrated Ayin Ha-Korē of R. Jekuthiel (Additional ms. 19,776, British Museum), has the chronogram date on folio 117a as follows—שנה ציון במשפטם חפדה ושביה בצדקה in the year 'Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness' (Isa. i. 27) = 156, or A.D. 1396.

<sup>1</sup> Massoreth Ha-Massoreth of Elias Levita, Hebrew, with an English translation and critical notes, by Christian D. Ginsburg, LL.D. Longmans, etc., 1867.

The Five Megilloth and the Perecopes, which form the second part of this manuscript, has the following chronogram on folio 169 b—

חוק ונתחזק, שמחה לוי לא יחוק, בנה, לפרט, חומש זה נחרט, ביום א בא לאדד השיני רני
 פלט חסוכבני, Be of good courage, Simcha Levi shall not be hurt. He formed it in the era this Pentateuch was written, 'Thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance' (Ps. xxxii. 7). In this chronogram, the two letters Nun and He of the trilateral בנה, he formed, gives the date, i.e. 55=1295 A.D.

After the invention of printing from moveable types (circa 1450), and as the use of printing advanced, chronogrammatic dating became more frequent. Thus the edition of Proverbs with the Chaldee paraphrase and the commentaries of Levi b. Gershon and Menachem Meieri, which appeared at Lierre in Flanders in 1492, is dated, שנת ובאו ציון ברנה, In the year 'And they shall come to Zion with songs' (Isaiah xxxv. 10), i.e. 5252=1492. So also the beautiful edition of the Prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah, with the commentary of Kimchi, which was printed at Lisbon in the same year, is dated, הכיאה לפרט הציירה, i.e. In the year of the creation, 'He shall doubtless come again with rejoicing' (Ps. cxxvi. 6), i.e. 5252=1492.

The Hebrew Bible, with points, printed at Brescia in 1494 (this edition), has the chronogram שנת לפלא נרר, In the year 'to accomplish a vow' (Levit. xxii. 21), i.e. 254=1494. This edition is a very interesting one, from the circumstance of its having been used by Luther when he made his translation of the Bible.

The Machzor or Festival Prayers of the German Jews, printed at Augsburg in 1536, has the chronogram—

שנת בריח ניהח ארצה אתכם

In the year, 'I will accept you with your sweet savour' (Ezekiel xx. 41), i.e. 296, 296=1536.

It will be seen that the chronogram date is here given twice. First, in the words בריח ניהח, with your sweet savour, which exhibit the year 296; and in the word ארצה, I will accept you, the numerical value of which is also 296. This magnificent copy (British Museum, press-mark 1971. f. 1.) is printed on vellum. The anti-Christian passages, which were omitted in different parts of the book during the printing by the order of the censor, are here so beautifully written in the blank spaces in the letters of the excised type, that it is difficult to say whether they are ms. or printed.

The Commentary on the Pentateuch, by Shem-Tob ben Jacob Melammed, which was printed at Venice, 1596 (British Museum, press-mark 1964. e. 2.), has the chronogram—

בשנת ונרננה ונשמחה ליצירה

In the year, 'That we may rejoice and be glad' (Psalm xc. 14) of the creation; i.e. 5356=1596.

The first translation of the Old Testament into Judæo-German (British Museum, press-mark 1900. d. 4), made by Jekuthiel ben Isaac Blitz at the expense of the celebrated Uri Sebes Levi, printer at Amsterdam, and grandson of the head of the Maranite community in that city, has the chronogram—

יערף כמעט לקחי תול כטל אמרוי

'My doctrine shall drop down as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew' (Deut. xxxii. 2), i.e. 439=1678-9.

As time went on, the practice of thus dating Hebrew printed books increased, and came to be extensively adopted, especially by the Dutch printers. The following are some examples—

Buxtorf's Bible, Basel, 1618-19, is dated חזן לצידק ימילך מלך 'Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness' (Isaiah xxxii. 1).

Bible, Amsterdam, 1676-78, is dated תול כטל 'Shall distil as the dew' (Deut. xxxii. 2).

Bible, Amsterdam, 1687, is dated תבואתה לראש יוסף 'Let it come upon the head of Joseph' (Deut. xxxiii. 16).

The Pentateuch, with the Chaldee paraphrase and 'Rashi,' Dykenfurth, 1784, is dated על פי התורה אשר יורוך 'According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee' (Deut. xvii. 11).

Chronograms in the Hebrew language had now attained a high state of development, and acquired that extensive use which has been maintained down to the present time, while their use was being abandoned by authors and printers of books in other languages used in Europe. Moreover they present to us many remarkable peculiarities. Thus for instance when the letters, as simple letters, of the Hebrew alphabet are used to express a date, combinations are avoided which produce words suggesting an unpleasant meaning, such as רעה evil=275, or בוש shame=308, or other words which would signify a curse or an imprecation, or the mention of any member of the body not usually spoken of.

The more elaborate form however was preferred, that of the true chronogram or date-sentence, and in this certain peculiarities are found which are absent from the chronograms in the Latin or other Western languages. The earlier Hebrew chronograms consisted generally of one or two words selected for their agreeable suggestions, or their joyous import. Thus the words רנה, ברנה, רננו to rejoice, occur frequently in the dates of Venetian printed books of the sixteenth century. Later on, the chronogram expanded into a whole sentence from the Bible, of which some of the foregoing dates are examples.

As a further illustration, and as exhibiting a singularly elaborate form, may be noticed the date given by Samuel Schotten of his work entitled Kos Ha-yeshuoth, which appeared at Frankfort-on-the-Main in 1711, as follows:—

והרצה לירע שנת הבריאה, יריק כוס ממלואה, ויקח ישועה, באלף הששי כבה עשתה
החרס ונתעה, ולחרשים מקרוב באו כל אלה לארץ מניעה, ב'ט שבט לחדשים שבו כלתה
היריעה, וביום שנאמר בו שני פעמים כי טוב בשכונתה, נשלם ספר כוס הישועות

i.e. Whoso desireth to know the year of creation let him pour out the fulness of the cup (i.e. let him remove the 'Vau plene,' and count the numerical value of the word כוס 'cup' as כס=80) and let him seek for help (ישועה=391, together 471) in the sixth thousandth year. So many revolutions has the sun made, or according to the moderns the earth has made them. On Shebat 19 the pages were fully printed; and on the day of the week respecting which it is twice said 'It is good,' the book Kos Ha-yeshuoth was printed off. Accordingly the work was finished on Tuesday, Shebat 19, 471=A.D. 1711. This book is a commentary on several treatises on the Talmud. The copy in the British Museum has the press-mark 1915. c. 10. The foregoing Hebrew sentence forms part of the title to the book, and at the same time contains the words which compose the date.

It is to be remarked that instead of giving the names of the days of the week by numbers, i.e. First day, second day, third day, etc., it is frequently given in abbreviations, viz. :—for Friday, ערב שבת קדש עש"ק, the day of preparation for the holy Sabbath; for Tuesday, the day on which it is twice said 'good' (compare Gen. i. 10, 12). According to very ancient custom, and in recognition of the solemn import of this particular use of the word 'good,' authors were careful to begin and finish their works on Tuesday, which day they held to be especially lucky, because it was twice pronounced good, and being influenced also by the same respect for the word 'good,' they avoided Monday, because the phrase 'and it was good,' is not used with regard to it.

The Super-commentary on Abraham Ibn Ezra's commentary on the Pentateuch (British Museum, press-mark 1907. e. 5.), which was printed in Amsterdam in 1721, has a double chronogram, one on the title-page, and the other at the end of the book. The first chronogram is as follows :—

לסדר ולפרט וי"י בך את אברהם בכל

'And the Lord blessed Abraham in all things' (Genesis xxiv. 1), i.e. 482 = 1721. Here not only is the date given when the work was printed, but also includes the name of the author, viz., Abraham.

The second chronogram, which is at the end of the book, is as follows :—

תם ונשלם לסדר ולפרט הלא מצער הוא ותחי נפשי

Finished in the year, 'Is it not a little one? and my soul shall live' (Genesis xix. 20). Here too the chronogram not only gives the date, but describes the modesty of the work ('a little one'), and expresses a hope that the memory of the editor may continue to live.

The chronograms which now follow are those of the present century.

The Hebrew Scriptures with a Judæo-Spanish translation, published at Vienna 1813-16, in four volumes (British Museum, press-mark 1900. c. 7.), is remarkable for the different chronograms which accompany not only each volume, but every separate volume of the Pentateuch, thus—

Vol. i., which was printed in 1813, and contains the Pentateuch, has no less than five different chronograms for that volume alone, to express the same date.

GENESIS, which was printed in 1813, has the chronogram—

שנת כי עמך מקור חיים

In the year, 'For with thee is the fountain of life' (Psalm xxxiii. 10), i.e. 574=1813.

EXODUS, printed in the same year, has the chronogram—

שנת מקור חיים פי צדיק

In the year, 'The mouth of the righteous man is a well of life' (Prov. x. 11), i.e. 574=1813.

LEVITICUS, printed in the same year, has the chronogram—

שנת יראת ה' מקור חיים

i.e. In the year, 'The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life' (Prov. xiv. 27), i.e. 574=1813.

NUMBERS, also printed in the same year, has the chronogram—

שנת תורת חכם מקור חיים

In the year, 'The law of the wise is a fountain of life' (Prov. xiii. 14), i.e. 574=1813.

DEUTERONOMY, which was also printed in the same year, has the chronogram—

מקור חיים שכל בעליו

'Understanding is a well-spring of life unto him that hath it' (Prov. xvi. 22), i.e. 574=1813.

Vol. ii., which contains the earlier prophets, i.e. Joshua, Judges, Samuel, and Kings, and which was printed in 1814, has the chronogram—

שנת והיה מעשה הצדקה שלום

In the year, 'And the work of righteousness shall be peace' (Isa. xxxii. 17), i.e. 575=1814.

Vol. iii., which contains the later prophets, i.e. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the twelve minor prophets, and which was printed in 1815, has the chronogram—

שנת פתחו שערים ויבא גוי צדיק שמר אמונים

In the year, 'Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in' (Isaiah xxvi. 2), i.e. 575=1814-15.

Vol. iv., which contains the Hagiographa, i.e. Psalms, Proverbs, Job, the five Megilloth, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Chronicles, and which was printed in 1816, has the chronogram—

שנת סור מרע ועשה טוב

In the year, 'Depart from evil and do good' (Psalm xxxiv. 15), i.e. 576=1816.

A recent chronogram on the title-page of a book is seen on the two parts of Rabbi Jacob Saphir's travels in Egypt, Arabia, Jemen, etc., which were respectively published at Lyck in 1866, and Mayence in 1874—

בשנת רני ושמחי לפי

In the year, 'Sing and rejoice' (Zech. ii. 14), i.e. 624=1866.

And

שנת ברוך אתה לפי

In the year, 'Blessed shalt thou be' (Deut xxviii. 3), i.e. 634=1874.

There is one remark to be made about Hebrew chronograms, and it applies equally to all others which are built up from an alphabet wherein all the letters are numerals, such as the Greek and Arabic, and where the date-letters are contained in only one or two words in a long sentence. A chronogram so composed, being printed or inscribed erroneously, by the intended date-letters being made small instead of large, an observer could not rectify it without some independent clue to the date; the sentence would contain more than enough letters, and a selection from them for the purpose of correction would, to say the least, produce an uncertain result. This imperfection is absent from a chronogram composed with the ordinary Roman numeral letters, and it can be seen at a glance almost whether it be correctly written, and any numeral letter therein made small may be regarded as an error obviously to be rectified. A forcible illustration is seen in the case of chronograms printed entirely in small letters, as those at page 512, ante, and 569, 570, 571, all in this volume. Those are easily made to disclose the date by writing large all the letters which are Roman numerals.

The intimate connection between chronograms, anagrams, and acrostics has already been noticed, and the pages of this volume alone afford abundance of examples;<sup>1</sup> it has also been remarked that it is not safe to rely on them for support to any religious dogma. The chapter on the 'Angelic salutation,' commencing at page 482 ante, and the Rosary at page 442 ante, also the chapter which next follows on the mystic number 666, may be referred to, especially the remark at page 504. It is certain that the letters forming the dates of chronograms and the words of anagrams are capable of being used for a double purpose, one by the supporters of a dogma to give force or even proof of the validity of its teaching, the other by the opponents to uphold an entirely opposite doctrine. I now give a striking illustration of this fact from the mode in which it has been used in controversy with the Jews, by means of an acrostical application of initial letters.

'No less a person than the celebrated Reuchlin, who lived 1455 to 1522, would have it that the doctrine of the Trinity is to be found in the first verse of Genesis. He submits, if the second Hebrew word ברא, which is translated created, be examined, and if each of the three letters composing this word be taken as the initial of a separate word, we obtain the expressions בן רוח אב, Son, Spirit, Father. Upon the same principle this erudite scholar deduces the first two Persons in the Trinity from the words, 'The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner' (Psalm cxviii. 22), by dividing the three letters composing the word אבן, stone, into בן אב, Father, Son. (Comp. De Verbo mirifico, Basel, 1494. British Museum, press-mark 3834. bb. 1-2.) Such proofs, however, of the doctrine of the Trinity bring no honour to our religion, and in the present day argue badly both against him who adduces them and against him who is convinced by them, since the sentences extorted from the texts by this process depend upon the skill and ingenuity of the respective combatants. And it must be confessed that owing to their better knowledge of the Hebrew, and their greater facility in composing sentences in this language, the Jews in such arguments contrived to silence their Christian opponents, as may be seen from the following fact. At the end of the celebrated polemical work against Christianity, entitled 'The Fortification of Faith' (חוזק אמונה), we are told as follows:—

מען נוצרי א' לר' נחמן המכונה יעקוב מבעל שיץ ואמר, הנה בהתחלת תורתכם רמז כי אלהים הוא אב ובן ורוח הקודש, כי אותיות ברא רומזים זה למפרע עב' . . . והוא השיב לו ואמר אם נרצה להאמין לרמזים כאלו חנה אנכי אוכיח אבל הפסוק ההוא נגד אמונתכם

בני ראש אמנה שארית ישראל תמימים—בראשית

ביט יודפי אמת = ברא

אלוה לא היה ישו מאשח = אלהים

איש תולדתו = את

הלא שמץ מיתת ישו מעיד = השמים

וכי אלה תלוי = ואת

הימות אדם רוח ציח = הארץ

'i.e. A Christian said to R. Nachman, called Jacob of Belz, It is acrostically indicated in the very beginning of your Pentateuch that God consists of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, for the letters of the word ברא, he created (Gen. i. 1), contain this indication. To this he replied, If thou believest in such acrostic indication, I will show thee that this very verse is against your religion, for I read it thus—

'Son of the first religion, faithful remnant of Israel

Ye searchers after truth, hearken!

Jesus born of a woman was no God,

He was human by his birth,

As is shown by his ignominious death.

Can God be crucified?

Does the Pure Spirit die like men?'

This remarkable instance is taken from 'The Kabbalah, its doctrines, development, and literature,' by Christian D. Ginsburg, LL.D., second edition, not yet published. Dr. Ginsburg has allowed me to copy the above from the ms. of the forthcoming edition.

A little explanation is needful. On the left hand the Hebrew words of the first verse of the book of Genesis are printed in a column, each word being opposite to a line whose words have for their initial letter the component letters in succession of the words so taken from Genesis, the translation shows with what effect this is done.

THE NUMBER 666.

THIS chapter will consist of notes and extracts taken from out-of-the-way books which passed under notice when searching for what is contained in my two volumes on chronograms. Very much has been written on the interpretation of the mystical number 666. Some portion of that is in the form of chronograms; and believing that so little of that portion has ever been brought together in print, into one view, I am induced to assemble here the scattered items of what is a curious and solemn subject. My purpose is not to show the validity of any interpretation, or to point to any as the right one, or even to say that the true one has yet been reached, because the interpretations are so contradictory, and many are not deserving of serious consideration. There are some methods of interpretation which are not based on the numerical value of the alphabetical letters; to those my extracts do not extend.

At the foundation of the whole inquiry is verse 18 of chapter xiii. of the Book of the Revelation of Saint John the Divine, 'Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred threescore and six.' Or, as it is in the Greek text—καὶ ὁ ἀριθμὸς αὐτοῦ χξϛ', the last three letters being the Greek numerals for 600, 60, 6; or 666. It is natural that the solution should be first sought for through the Greek, though other methods of numeration have been tried. We find from the earliest periods of Christian literature, from the writings of Saint Irenæus (circa A.D. 200), and others of the early Fathers, that the subject was one of extreme interest to them, and one that through all subsequent time has engaged the attention of scholars, theologians, and polemical writers, who followed the search for the interpretation by means of numbers and their alphabetical equivalents. At other places in this volume will be found the several methods of numeration, viz.—the Roman numerals (see Preface); the other old Roman numeration (see cabala at p. 289, ante); the Greek at p. 321, ante; and the Hebrew at p. 594, ante; those numerals apply to the notes which now follow.

A book, 'Athanasii Kircheri e Societate Jesu arithmologia,' etc., Rome, 1665 (British Museum, press-mark, 50. c. 23), remarks that heretics have left no stone unturned to show that the Pope is the Antichrist indicated by the Beast and its number; for example, they take the word 'Lateinos' in Greek letters, and 'Romith' in Hebrew letters, according to their numerical value, and find the number 666—

|                               |                           |
|-------------------------------|---------------------------|
| Λ Α Τ Ε Ι Ν Ο Σ               | ת י י ד ו ך               |
| 30 1 300 5 10 50 70 200 = 666 | 400 10 10 40 60 200 = 666 | and then by way of retaliation the names of reformers and others are adduced to show that the Lutherans and Calvinists are, with equal force of proof, capable of being identified; for example, Luther was a native of Saxony, Calvin a native of Picardy; take Luther in Hebrew letters, and Saxoneios in Greek, the same number comes forth—

|                                  |                       |
|----------------------------------|-----------------------|
| Σ Α Ξ Ο Ν Ε Ι Ο Σ                | ך ת ל ו ל             |
| 200 1 60 70 50 5 10 70 200 = 666 | 200 400 30 6 30 = 666 |

In like manner, the number 666 is found in many names and words which have been used by ancient writers in support of controversy on the verse in the Apocalypse; they are thus mentioned—

Nomina Antichristi, quibus Apocalypticus numerus 666 convenit, ex Irenæo, Aretha Cappadoce, Primasio, Ticinio, Ruperto Abbate, extracta, Et erit numerus bestię sexcenta sexaginta sex.

And the author elsewhere remarks, 'Dici non potest, quantum hic numerus multorum interpretum torserit ingenium.'

A BOOK in the Lambeth Palace library, 'De Antichristo libri undecim: F. Thom. Malvenda Setabitano, Ordinis predicatorum descriptore: Roma, 1704' (press-mark 9. A. 2.), contains a vast amount of writing on the subject; it gives most of the foregoing allusions to the number 666, together with the following—Παλαι Βασιλευς.=666. i.e. Jam olim invidens.

DIC LVX.=666. i.e. Quia Antichristus dicit, ac jubebat se lucem esse.

Γενσηρικος.=666. Gensericus Vandalorum rex in Africa Arianus Mastyx orthodoxorum fuit. (The word is elsewhere said to signify in the 'Gothic' language 'the seducer of Gentiles.')

Αμνος αδικος.=666. Agnus nocens.

The letters in Revelation  $\chi\xi\varsigma$  = chi, xi, st. = 666, have been applied thus—Χριστος ξυλον σταυρος. i.e. Christus lignum crucis. Quod nimirum Antichristus imponet sibi nomen quod e diametro pugnet cum Christo, ejusque sanctissima cruce, quo se utriusque hostem appellabit.

At pages 436 and 437, the following sentences are mentioned as composing the number 666—

עליון אדני יהוה הקדש

300 4 100 5 5 6 5 10 10 50 4 1 50 6 10 30 70

Eliou Adonai Icheneh Hakados. i.e. Altissimus supremus Dominus Deus sanctus. The name that Antichrist would blasphemously adopt.

אכינו הקדוש אפיפי

10 80 10 80 1 1 300 6 4 100 5 6 50 10 2 1

Abinu hakadosa aphiphi. i.e. Pater noster sancta papa.—vel—Pater noster meretrix seu scortorum papa.

These sentences, however, are beyond the limits of the enigma, which declares the number to be that of a man.

Another book in the Lambeth Palace library, 'Theatre de Antechrist,' etc., by Nicolas Vignier, 1610, folio. A controversial work on the side of the reformed church, it mentions most of the foregoing explanations, and adds that according to the scheme of Latin numerals the number 666 is contained in the words—

L' ANTECHRIST ROMAIN.

80 1 40 100 5 3 8 80 9 90 100 80 50 30 1 9 40

= 666

In another work I find that the name of the great reformer may be used with the same result—

MARTIN LAUTER.

30 1 80 100 9 40 80 1 200 100 5 80

= 666

ATRACT in the Lambeth Palace library (press-mark 30. 7. 16.), 'A letter written by a true Christian Catholike, to a Romaine pretended Catholike,' etc. 'Imprinted at London by John Windet, dwelling in Adling Streete, at the signe of the White Beare, neere Baynards Castle. 1586. Pp. 86. Small 4°. This work is of course a controversial one, and a consideration of 'the marke or name of the beast' is introduced, with the mention of several of the interpretations which I have already noticed. At page 71 I find these additional ones. Ecclesia Italica, the Italian or Roman Church; ιεροκρατια κακη, an evil priestly or ecclesiastical government or power; and θεος εμι επι γαιης, I am God upon the earth; they give the number 666 thus—

|| ΕΚΚΛΗΣΙΑ ΙΤΑΛΙΚΑ.

ΘΕΟΣ ΕΜΙ ΕΠΙ ΓΑΙΗΣ.

9 5 70 200 5 10 40 10 5 80 10 3 1 10 8 200 = 666

The author asserts that these words and the numerical results are 'onely applicable to the Byshops of Rome.'

THIS subject engaged the attention of the author of a book bearing this title, 'A key of knowledge for the opening of the secret mysteries of St. John's Mystical Revelation. By Ric. Bernard, preacher of God's Word at Batcombe in Somersetshire.' London, 1617. Around these words are nine engraved subjects from the Book of Revelation.

At page 221 he shows that the Pope is Antichrist, by a series of comparisons by no means flattering to the Pope; and at page 237 he gives some names from which the number 666 is evolved; at page 341 the author uses strong language against the Pope, and puts it in quaint spelling in the following chronogrammatic form—

THE ART OF ARITHMETICKE

OR,

The skill of counting the number of the Beast, which is 666 by numerall letters in severall languages, shewing his full valuation, and how truly to price him.

This is followed, at page 344, by other mystical applications of the number 666, but not in the form of chronograms or other interpretation by numerical letters.

It has been observed that one of the titles assumed by the popes (ὄνομα βλασφημίας) makes the number, thus—

VICARIVS FILII DEI. = 666

It was also said that somewhere in Italy (Venice?), a picture was publicly exhibited in honour of Pope Paul v. with this inscription—PAVLO V. VICE DEO.

The chronogrammatic power of the letters here printed large was soon discovered to be 666, and much scandal was caused by asserting this to be an unintentional proof that this pope was himself the Antichrist.

The appellation given to the Pope in the Council of Trent was—

VICARIVS GENERALIS DEI IN TERRIS. = 666

Again, these words are found to contain the number—

|                         |   |     |
|-------------------------|---|-----|
| Παπικος, the papacy.    | = | 666 |
| Αποστατης, an apostate. | = | 666 |

I refer my readers to pp. 465, 468, 481 ante, where the writings of Johannes Prætorius are quoted. This mystical author makes some exceedingly fanciful applications of the number 666 to the supposed eventful or fatal year A.D. 1666, which, to say the least, are difficult to comprehend.

'SECHS hundert und sechs und sechzig,' is the title of an article in Zedler's Universal Lexicon, vol. xxxvi. p. 861.

Many interpretations are given of the mystical number, which are to be found in other books, also these following, which I have not noticed elsewhere. They seem to have been used in the religious controversies raised by the rival followers of Luther and Calvin in opposition to the Romanists.

|                                |   |     |

| STYX CRVDELIS.      | = | 666 |

At a later page in the same article I find the following, which are said to bear on the subject; a 'gloss' in German is added to make them intelligible, at least such appears to be the intention—

|                               |   |     |
|-------------------------------|---|-----|
| DECAS PHALANX QVINGENA.       | = | 666 |
| Eine summe von 10. 8000. 500. |   |     |
| DOCTOR, LEX, IVS.             | = | 666 |
| Ein Lehrer, Gesetz, Recht.    |   |     |

|                              |   |     |
|------------------------------|---|-----|
| DRAco, LYNX, VIPERA.         | = | 666 |
| Ein Drache, Leichs, Natter.  |   |     |
| SACERDOS, FALX, OVIS.        | = | 666 |
| Ein Priester, Messer, Schaf. |   |     |

There are many pages of explanation, not so much in the form of chronograms as these extracts, but nevertheless curious and fanciful, and not usually found in books devoted to biblical commentary.

THE solution of the enigma by numerical letters has been followed in many other directions. Here are some examples. The name of Napoleon, in a form as if used in a dedication sentence in Greek, contains the number, thus—

|                              |   |     |
|------------------------------|---|-----|
| N A Π O Δ E O N T I.         | = | 666 |
| 50 1 80 70 30 5 70 50 300 10 |   |     |

The name of Louis XIV., put in the Latin form in a chronogram, on a medal, to commemorate the misdeeds of that monarch, contains the number—

|            |   |     |
|------------|---|-----|
| LVDovicVs. | = | 666 |
|------------|---|-----|

He was therefore the 'beast.' It must be remembered, however, that there were at least eighteen kings of France of the same name, without counting the 'citizen king,' Louis Philippe, and the Emperor Louis Napoleon, who had a full share of misfortune to himself. And not the least amusing is the name of Gladstone in Greek letters—

|                              |   |     |
|------------------------------|---|-----|
| Γ Α Α Δ Σ Τ Ο Ν Η.           | = | 666 |
| 30/ 3 00 1 4 200 300 70 50 8 |   |     |

And this has been especially pointed at as applicable to the Prime Minister of England, who happens to be an elegant Greek scholar, as well as to hold political opinions not approved of by every one.

The 'Westminster Assembly' was constituted by Parliament in 1643, 'to confer and treat among themselves of such matters and things touching and concerning the liturgy, discipline, and government of the Church of England, or the vindicating and clearing of the doctrine of the same, as should be proposed to them by both or either of the said Houses of Parliament, and no other, and to deliver their opinions,' etc. etc. The Assembly of Divines continued to sit until 22d February 1649, having met 1163 times. It was subject to much satire of the period from both the Cavalier and Roundhead factions. I find in Butler's posthumous works one of these effusions, 'The Assembly-man, written by Mr. Samuel Butler and Sir John Birkenhead, in the year 1647.' This passage occurs:—'Of late they are much in love with chronograms, because (if possible) they are duller than anagrams; O how they have torn the poor bishops' names to pick out the number 666! little dreaming that a whole baker's dozen of their own assembly have that beastly number in each of their names, and that as exactly as their solemn league and covenant consists of 666 words.' No examples are given of the names. At p. 590 ante, allusion is made to the House of Commons as containing that number.

THE subject of the mystic number is treated, exhaustively almost, in a now scarce work published in the year 1848, entitled, 'The number and names of the Apocalyptic Beasts; with an explanation and application. In two parts.' By David Thom, Ph.D., A.M., of Heidelberg, minister of Bold Street Chapel, Liverpool. Only one volume, 'Part I.,' of this work, containing 398 pages, was ever published. The author has his own interpretation of the mystical number 666, which is developed in his concluding pages. The volume is otherwise filled with notices of many of the familiar solutions of the enigma: some I have already brought together, and others I have not before met with. I extract some of the latter, because they are in the form of chronograms. The author says, adopting the words of another writer, 'Innumerable attempts have been made to discover this name, but hitherto without success;' and he adds his own words, 'Towards the close of this volume, the true name is given; and upon that, in the meantime, the reader is left to indulge his speculations.'

The author, as he proceeds, adds his own remarks to show how uncertain are all these and such like interpretations, and says by way of illustration, with reference to the geological controversies which raged in his day, the Neptunist may as well refer his opponent to VVLCANO EDITVs (sc. orbis terrarum) = 666, and may have retorted upon him in return, OCEANVs E PROFVNDQ TVLIT! = 666. But it would be idle to chase the shadow any further.

DIC LUX. i.e. Say, or speak, light. 'Ipse enim = 666 fatebitur se esse Lucem.' For he himself (Antichrist) will confess that he is the light.

According to the Greek numeration the words Θεος εἰμι ἐπὶ γαίης; i.e. I am God upon earth, make the number 666. The author gives several Greek words more or less opposite in meaning, with the same numerical result, and at page 207 proceeds to point at the fallacy of the interpretations by this remark, 'I presume that a mere reference is all that is required to "Cow-pox," asserted to be the Beast, by a German physician; the word put thus into Greek letters, Κοῦ-ποξ, certainly does amount to 666, but it is too obviously a joke to merit a moment's attention. He concludes his list of Greek guesses with the word Ευρωπια (wealth), which makes 666; he finds it in a small and unpretending but clearly-written volume, published anonymously by S. Bagster, London, 1844, and entitled, 'Wealth the name and number of the Beast, 666, in the book of Revelation.' The writer observed 'how active a passion wealth is at this moment in England among a people professing Christianity.' The word quoted is legitimate Greek, and is used in the Greek text of the passage in Acts xix. 25.

Interpretations founded on the numerical results of Hebrew words and names are numerous; the author devotes forty pages to the examination of them.

The author passes on to mention some miscellaneous and 'ridiculous' solutions according to the use of the Roman numerals; he says at page 241, Sir John Oldcastle,<sup>1</sup> Lord Cobham, who was executed for Lollardism in 1417, has been designated as the Beast by summing up the numerals which occur in his name—

|   |   |     |
|---|---|-----|
| JOHN OLDCASTLE.                         | = | 701 |
| Deduct his age at the time in question, |   | 35  |

We have, 666 Q.E.D.!

In 'Will Laud,' the common signature of the notorious Archbishop of Canterbury, before his elevation to the episcopal bench, has been detected the ominous number—

|             |   |     |
|-------------|---|-----|
| VVILL LAVD. | = | 666 |
|-------------|---|-----|

The author, at page 351, mentions the ingenious solution computed by Mr. J. E. Clark 'on the morning of June 1, 1809, although not published until 1814,' according to the Greek numeral method these words—

|   |   |     |
|---|---|-----|
| 'Η Α α τ ι ν η Β α σ ι λ ε ι α. ( i.e. The Latin kingdom.) | = | 666 |
| 8 30 1 300 10 50 8 8 1 200 10 30 5 10 1                           |   |     |

<sup>1</sup> An interesting epitome of his life is in Chalmers's Biographical Dictionary, xxiii. 320.

At page 359 another similar solution is quoted—
 Ε κ κ λ η σ ι α Ι τ α λ ι κ α. (i.e. The Italian Church.) = 666
5 20 20 30 8 200 10 1 10 300 1 30 10 20 1

At page 361 another having the same meaning is quoted—
 Λ α τ ι ν α Ε κ κ λ ε σ ι α. (i.e. The Latin Church.) = 666
30 1 300 10 50 1 5 20 30 8 200 10 1

Of course the author does not adopt all these interpretations, he criticises and in effect rejects them, while he offers what in his opinion may be the true one, reserving his explanations, which were to appear in the second volume, never published. The Greek ἡ φρην, the mind, or prudence, or understanding, see 1 Cor. xiv. 20, contains the number; and so does εκκλησῖαι σαρκικαί, fleshly churches—

Ἡ φ ρ η ν.
8 500 100 8 50 = 666
 Ε κ κ λ η σ ι α ι σ α ρ κ ι κ α ι.
5 20 20 30 8 200 10 1 10 200 1 100 20 10 20 1 10 = 666

The author's reasons for declaring this to be the true solution would require too long a quotation.

A very curious work, entitled, 'An interpretation of the number 666,' by Francis Potter, B.D., Oxford, 1642, advocates another numeral method not in the form of chronogram. The author takes verses 16, 17 of chapter xxi. of Revelation (and other places), where the number 144 is mentioned, and explains in his second chapter 'That the mystery of the number 144, which is the number opposed to 666, consists of the square root of it, which is 12; therefore the mystery of 666 must be the square root of it also.' On that basis he takes 25 (omitting a residual fraction) and finds some remarkable coincidences at the city of Rome.

Some interesting remarks may be seen in the American edition of Dr. William Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, revised and edited by Professor H. B. Hackett, D.D.

In conclusion, enough is given in this chapter to show that little reliance can be placed on a method of interpretation which is capable of leading to widely differing conclusions. This remark gains force by a reference to page 504 ante, where the futility of using chronograms and anagrams in support of a dogmatic teaching is pointed out, and to page 599 ante, where it is shown that the use of acrostics as weapons in religious controversy is very unsafe.

DATES QUAINTLY EXPRESSED IN LATIN VERSE.

CLOSELY connected with chronograms, is a class of inscriptions and memorial lines which were called by the antiquary Gough, in his work on the sepulchral monuments of Great Britain, 'Dates quaintly conceived.' The period when they were in general use was anterior to that assigned to the common use of chronograms, and they continued in limited use until some time in the fifteenth century, when they seem to have been entirely superseded by the compositions which my readers will have seen in great variety in the foregoing pages. They were extensively used in England and generally in Europe, for dating sepulchral inscriptions on brass tablets, and otherwise for recording and notifying dates. It is certain that many such inscriptions have perished through the usual destructive agencies, and we are indebted principally to books for the preservation of the words of many which in these days we are able to notice. In my searches for chronograms I was led to observe a considerable number of these curious memorials. I can give only a small portion of those which I found scattered about in volumes of antiquarian literature. It will be seen that the hexameter verse is of frequent occurrence, as well as verses of leonine construction. The Latin language was used almost exclusively in these quaint compositions.

The following are from Gough's 'Sepulchral Monuments of Great Britain':—

The south aisle of the abbey church of Pershore, in Gloucestershire, was built by Abbot William de Newynton in 1434, as recorded by an inscription carved upon some old wood-work, which, more than a century ago, patched a partition between the chancel end of the church and a small chapel on the north side—

M, C bis bino, triplex X, addere quarto } = 1434
Anno Willms dñi Newnton fecit abbas.

The following are from 'Desiderata curiosa,' vol. ii. p. 319:—

This is also in 'Historischer Munzbelustigung,' by J. D. Köhler, vol. vi. p. 400.

From various old books of History.

A tumult occurred at the city of Prague at Easter 1339, when nearly all the Jewish population were slain in the course of two hours. A chronicler, writing in 1634, says he has read these verses somewhere—

|  |     |      |
|--|-----|------|
| M semel, et tria C bis L XI removeto ;Paschæ luce, reus periit tunc, cæde Judæus.  | } = | 1389 |

| On the birth of Waldemar III., Duke of Slesvig, son of Eric—Anno milleno CCC ter uno cum duodenoWaldemars dux Slesvici et natus Erici.     | =   | 1315 |

These are gathered out of various old books—

|  |     |      |
|--|-----|------|
| Mille ubi quingenti post partum Virginis anniEt duo cum lustris præterire novem.   | } = | 1547 |
| Centenis lustris, annis et mille peractisDenos autumnos post quater atque duos.  | } = | 1542 |
| Mille et quingenti lapsi sunt cursibus anni,Terque duodecies frigore terra tulit.  | } = | 1536 |
| Octo bis exierant a nato secula ChristoDetractis lustris sed tamen inde decem.   | } = | 1550 |
| On the death of 'King Adolphus at the battle of Worms'—Anno milleno trecentis, bis minus annisIn Julio mense, rex Adolphus cadit ense. | } = | 1298 |

The following are from the chronicle of Ober-alt-Aich, quoted at p. 311, ante. The first, at page 213, is introduced with remarks to the following effect:—'Even in the year 1368 it was reported that the Jews derided the most holy Sacrament in their synagogues, piercing the hosts with sharp thorns till the blood flowed copiously therefrom. The common people were so exasperated at this deed that they slew the Jews without mercy in Bavaria and Austria: the people of Regensburg and Vienna sheltered their Jews. The princes stayed the ruin with all their power, but could not save it. One prince received the Jews, who would otherwise have strangled themselves to escape this so-called vengeance from heaven. This couplet commemorates the circumstance and date'—

|   |     |      |
|---|-----|------|
| Annis millenis ter denis et octo trecentis,Judaicus populus tunc temporis est trucidatus. | } = | 1338 |
|---|-----|------|

This narrative alludes to certain events in the fourteenth century, similar to those described in the histories of the 'Sacrament robbery and miracle' in Belgium, and noticed at some length in Chronograms, pp. 262-283; and at pp. 113, 114 of the present volume.

The next, at page 215, is the couplet commencing some verses given on the authority of 'an ancient manuscript book,' and said to have been inscribed on a tablet at the grave of Bishop Nicolaus of Regensburg—

Post M post tria C cum XX bina fuere, } = 1340
Ista tegit fossa Nicolai præsulis ossa.

The last is at page 218. It is the opening couplet of some 'ancient Latin rhymes,' on a disastrous overflow of the Danube in 1344, when Wolfgang was abbot of Altaich—

Post M post tria C post X bis bina sub anno } = 1344
Quarto, dum Wolfgangus abbas præsedidit in Altaich.

The following are from Italy:—

Anno milleno ter C ter I septuageno
Solutus ex membris septena luce Novembris. = 7th November 1373.

Mille currentibus annis trecentis quaternicenis unoque juncto. = 1341

Astra petens pulcro liquit sua membra sepulcro } = 1322
M semel et C ter novies II quater adde.

Quinque denis mille trecentis et quatuor annis
Tertius Aprilis cum decimo fluxerat ortus. = 13th April 1354.

Inscribed in a book 'Codex Membraneus,' a manuscript of Statius, in the library of the monastery of 'Hasunga,' in Thuringia. The book is stated to have been written—

Bis quingento bis trino, bis quoque bino } = 1010
Nascentis Christi Thebais scripta fuisti.

And to have been presented to the library—

Bis quatuor undenis quatuor minus addito mille. = 1084

The following may be taken as early examples by writers at the periods indicated. They are extracted from a work comprising various histories and chronicles, 'Erpoldi Lindenbrogii scriptores rerum Germanicarum septentrionalium,' by J. A. Fabricius. Hamburg, 1706—

M C sex decies annosque recollige binos. = 1162

Anno milleno centeno terque triceno, } = 1240
His quinquaginta si misces, tunc bene disces.

At Zwolle, in Holland, part of an inscription in memory of the burning of 500 houses there, on the night of St. Marguerite, 20th-21st July 1324. (From the 'Dead Cities of the Zuider Zee')—
 Post M, post tria C, post duo X, quatuor I que,
 Nox Margar tillis (sic) igni tu concita Zwollis. = 1324

The following are from 'Westphalische Provincial-Blätter,' published at Minden, 1843. Vol. iii. Inscription formerly to be seen on a stone at Helvorde, in Germany—

M C ter L octo tibi sunt, etc. etc. = 1358
 Another, M C ter L quart. X. = 1390
 At Paderborn Cathedral, on the tomb of Bishop Henry—
 Mille quadringentis bis denis inde retentis. = 1380
 On the tomb of Bishop Robert, who died in 1394—
 Annis M Christi quadringentis que minus sex. = 1394

From the Archæological Journal, vol. ix. p. 201.
 In the cathedral, Paderborn, Bishop Bernard, chosen in 1320—
 Post dupla centena Christi bis bina trigena lustra die, Januarii terdena de luce vani. = 1320
 The number 1000 must be understood, and the word 'lustra' must be taken as years, and not as a period of five years, according to classical Latin.

The following are from 'Flandria Illustrata,' by A. Sanderus :—

At the monastery Vallis S. Martini, Louvain—
 C quater M que semel duo bis XL dabit annum .
 Festa Dionisii præveniente die. = 1482

In the Dominican Church, Louvain, to the Duchess Aleyde—
 Mille semel et centum bis duo septuaginta
 Luce Severini, fuit Aleydis data fini = 1274
 Quam tegit hæc tumba Serpens fuit atque Columba.

The building of the Monastery of the Seven Fountains at Forest, near Brussels, was thus dated—
 M, C ter, L que, ter I, semel V que, ter X in Aprili luce sub undena Domini domus ista sacrata extitit. = 1388

Another inscription dated a building there—
 Hoc Domini templum fuit ad Genitricis honorem
 Christi sacratam, Mariæ Virginis almæ
 Anno milleno centeno bis geminato } = 11th Aug.
 Ter numero deno duplicato ; adjungito septem, 1467.
 Tum dena Auguste lux resplenderet et una.

From Lord Orford's works, vol. iii. p. 25, an original inscription—
 Anno milleno Domini cum septuageno }
 Et bis centeno, cum completo quasi deno.

On the battle of Berchtem, in Franconia, on 11th January 1400—
 Post M C quadruplex Berchtem fuit maxima strages. = 1400

The following is quoted by Locrius in his 'Chronicon Belgicum' (see p. 121, ante), as an old verse to indicate the antiquity of a religious order—

Anno milleno Domini, deciesque noveno,
 Norma Berengarii trunco nova cœpit haberi. } = 1090

Also this, indicating the removal of the remains of St. Bertelius into a new tomb by Bishop Pontius, or Abbot Peter of Atrebatum (Arras) in the year 1228. It is quoted by the author from an old manuscript—

Anno milleno, bis quarto, bis quoque deno,
 Atque ducenteno, sub P. Pastore sereno } = 25th Oct.
 Idibus octavis Octobris, ab ore suavis, 1228.
 In vas e vase fecit Bertelia Phase.
